IWELFTH AVENUE SOUTH CHANGE

Regrade District Talked of Extends From Dearborn to Judkins Street — Paving Resolutions Brought Up.

Regrading of Twelfth Avenue South from Dearborn Street to Judkins Street is provided for in a proposed ordinance introduced at the council meeting yesterday afternoon. By this regrade the wooden superstructure on the Twelfth Avenue South bridge over Dearborn Street will be removed. This wedge, running from nothing on the north to twenty-three feet in depth on the south end, was placed on the bridge several years ago when a plan to regrade Beacon Hill was abandoned.

That property owners are still inseveral years ago when a plan to regrade Beneon Hill was abandoned.

That property owners are still insistent on permanent street improvements is indicated by the introduction of an unusual number of improvement resolutions, providing among others for the paving of a number of streets on Queen Anne Hill, the paving of Harrison Street from Westlake Avenue to Fairvlew Avenue the filling of nine blocks in the Ninth Avenue South district and concrete walks on all streets leading to the new Ballard High School building at West Sixty-Fifth Street and Fourteenth Avenue Northwest.

A resolution was adopted accepting the bid of Farson Sons & Co. of Chicago for $24,500 of Ballard refunding bonds, at a premium of $777. These bonds will mature in five years and bear interest at the rate of 6 per cent. Councilman Robert B. Hesketh's bill providing for the licensing of film exchanges was referred to the license committee, and will be considered next Monday at 10 a. m.

JAPANESE PROTEST ON MARKET ALLOTMENTS

The narbors and public grounds committee of the city council, of which Councilman Charles Marble is chairman, today heard the protests of a number of Japanese farmers against the method of drawing spaces at the Pike Place Public Market. There are six Japanese to one American on the public market and the Japanese want drawings so that they will have allotments in proportion to the number on the market. Some time ago, on recommendation of Commissioner of Health J. S. McBride, the council provided for the drawing of even numbers by Americans and odd numbers by Japanese, thus equalizing the number of each nationality on the public market. The committee declined to make any change in that rule, which has been in effect about two months.

James A. Murray, multimillionaire banker of Butte, Mont, and president of the American Savings Bank & Trust Company of Senttle, can see the coming of real and enduring prosperty when Republicans take the place of Democrats in official life at Washington, D.C.

This is Mr. Murray's candid opinion as expressed yesterday during a short stay here on his annual fall trip to Seattle to look over his investments. Mr. Murray is one of the leading individual owners of Seattle business property. Mr. Murray went to Tacoma this morning on business. He will leave soon for Southern California, where he has extensive interests.

FOR RURAL CREDIT

Granger Must Solve Question of Long Time Loans on Land, Says C. R. Cottrell-Congress to Pass Law.

Editor The Times: Why do the farmers of the United States need a system of rural credit? This question was recently asked of me by a man engaged in a commercial line or busings. was recently asked of me by a man engaged in a commercial line of business, a line in which the commercial hanks would readlly assist him should assistance be needed.

To make a satisfactory reply to the question, it will be necessary to go back to the inauguration of the financial system which went into effect in 1864 under the statutes of the state of Ohio. This system, as a whole, was in effect until the passage of the federal reserve act in 1912. Under this system national banks were prohibited from making loans on farm property, inasmuch as these institutions were established and fostered to protect an entrely different line of business—commercial institutions—and the security offered by the farmer, while the best in the world, could not be turned over readily and converted into cash quickly enough to meet the demands of commercialism. The commercial bank must at all times invest in securities that meet with a ready sale and can be converted into cash quickly to meet the needs of the checking system in vogue.

Farmer Must Pay High.

Manufacturers and merchants need assistance for short periods of time the needs of the checking system in vogue.

Farmer Must Pay High.

Manufacturers and merchants need assistance for short periods of time only, because their stock is turned over in from thirty to ninety days and they are then in position to repay and do not desire to pay interest on a long-time loan. The interest paid usually runs around 5 per cent. The farmer is placed under entirely different circumstances, as it takes time to clear his land, erect buildings and grow crops, and if he should be compelled to borrow from the commercial bank, must pay a sum in interest that in ten years time would equal the principal. The banker will charge him 10 to 15 per cent commission for making the loan and 7 to 10 per cent interest on the full amount of the loan. Thus, a farmer borrowing $1,000, the banker will give him $900 in cash, having charged 10 per cent commission for making the loan, and the farmer immediately begins paying interest on $100 that he has never seen.

This peculiar condition has existed since Columbus paid us a visit. Our manufacturing and industrial institutions have been fostered at the expense of agriculture. Until 150 years ago the countries of the Old World were doing this same thing, but they received a sudden awakening and agriculture has been receiving the same privileges from the various governments as manufacturers and merchants enjoy, and the United States is 150 years behind nearly every country of the Old World.

Provision was made in the federal chants enjoy, and the United States is 150 years behind nearly every country of the Old World.

Earth Not Wanted.

Provision was made in the federal reserve law whereby the regional banker would be permitted to loan a certain percentage of his funds on farm property, and this was done to keep the farmer quiet and good and to prevent his agitation for or becoming interested in this much-talked-of rural credit system that was being advocated at the time of the passage of the federal reserve act. It was entirely optional with such bankers to loan on farm property and I haven't heard of any such assistance being rendered the farmer as yet. They do not want the earth as security, and this brings us to the point where we mystem that will accept farm land as security and it have no desire to criticize the federal reserve law, for it is a remarkably good and strong institution and is of much use in assisting and strengthening the particular line of business for much use in assisting and strengthening the particular line of business for which it was created, viz., commercialism. But at no time can it be so construed as to lead one to believe that it will be of assistance to agriculture. The two systems are working in an entirely opposite direction and must so continue. The commercial banking system gathers together all the cash for credit. A banking system to be of assistance to the farmer must gather together all of the credit in the community and sell that credit for cash.

This leads us, as farmers, to realize that we are the ones who must solve this problem of securing long time loans of or the purpose of buying seeds and properly stocking the farm after cleared.

FARMERS WORKING Interior View of Redelsheimer's on Occasion of Its 26th Anniversary

Yesterday's attendance at the Twenty-Sixth Anniversary celebration of the Redelsheimer store, First Avenue and Columbia Street, assumed very nearly the proportions of a public reception, breaking all previous records in the history of the store, both in point of numbers and a single day's volume of business.

flowers and shrubs, palms furnishing the principal motif, and white and green the color scheme. These elaborate decorations were planned by P. B. Fossas, publicity and display manager of the store, and arranged by Rosaia Bros., florists. The women's apparel department on the third floor is especially attractive in crystanthemms, and the great center. anthemums, and the great centerpiece or suspended greenery, embellished with flashes of fire-red blossoms, is an artistic triumph. These anniversary events in the history of Redelsheimer's are religiously looked forward to by a tremendous following throughout the Pacific Northwest, and this one is particularly a fine compliment to its standing with the public in general ing with the public in general.

it League of America was organized at the beginning of the year, with headquarters at Washington, D. C., for the purpose of conducting a nation-wide campaign of education, that we, as farmers, may become united in support of one principle, and ot one hundred as heretofore. Nothing of importance in the way of legislation was ever secured by individualistic support. It takes concerted action to obtain results.

There are many United States senators and congressmen who have taken membership in the Rural Credit League and have voluntarily pledged their support to a farmers' rural credit bill, providing the farmers as a unit will tell them what they want; and this is a new departure for you. Mr. Farmer, for you have never yet informed your congressmen in this manner as to your needs.

The Washington State Grange, at its last session, held in Centralla in June, 1915, recognized the great possibilities of this Rural Credit League, and immediately became affiliated and took a patron membership ($100) and elected the writer as commissioner for Washington state. We have segregated tons of literature bearing upon this subject, and have inaugurated a whirlwind campaign of education, the like of which the state of Washington has never seen before.

Rural credit legislation will predominate at the coming session of Congress this winter, as more interest has been aroused since this league was organized than has been created in five years for any other measure. Eighty-two separate bills were introduced at the last session, and as none were practical farmers' bills. President Wilson very wisely asked that none be passed. There were good points contained in many of the bills, but as a whole none was practical as drawn. Members of the league have these bills under consideration, and are casting aside the weak points and retaining the strong ones, and will be in a position to tell our congressmen what we want when the proper time comes.
