

FLYING SCOUT LEAVING RUNWAY ON U. S. DREADNOUGHT

—Photograph from International Film Service. Lands on Water When It Returns. American battleships have flying scouts that report on the presence of an enemy, the scouts "taking off" from a runway on the warcraft and on their return landing in the water alongside, to be hoisted aboard. The photograph shows one of these flying scouts immediately after leaving its runway on the dreadnought Pennsylvania at sea.

FIVE years ago this Christmas a romance was started which has continued bright and fresh ever since. In fact, now that the twins are here with all their cunning pranks, it is likely that Herbert and I will keep right on being young and romantic.

found it—a beautiful desk set that must have been made on purpose for him. I had it wrapped for mailing, put in Mr. Brown's card and was carrying the parcel to the postoffice when I was seized with the inspiration which started this never-ending romance. Among the pieces in the set was a picture frame, and among my own possessions was a picture. It portrayed me in fancy dress as a dazzling heroine in a recent amateur theatrical. Of course Herbert would think it was a mere store picture and would not have it made for him. But at least I would be there to greet him when he opened his beloved gift. Perhaps he might even stop to wonder if such a pretty girl really existed. Anyway, I put the picture into the frame very tenderly and kissed it good-bye.
