Auto Overturns And Burns, Man Injured

SHELTON, Wednesday, June 2.—There was a very heavy travel over the Olympic Highway during the holidays and a number of automobile accidents were reported here. The car driven by A. Hamig of Portland left the highway in Purdy Canyon and overturned on logs below, catching fire. Passing autoists stopped and pulled Mr. Hamig from under the burning car and brought him to the Shelton Hospital with a badly burned foot. His wife, who was with him, escaped injury.

Another accident reported was the burning of a small coupe on the highway near Hama Hama, where a woman was bound from Centralia to join her husband working in camp. The car was loaded with personal goods and when it caught fire the woman jumped out and escaped injury. The car was entirely burned.

Radio Message Saves Her Electric Toaster

EVERETT, Wednesday, June 2.—Miss Crete Olinger was on the steamship Charlotte, an hour's ride out of Everett, Monday morning when she happened to recall that she had left home leaving her electric toaster going full blast. She sent a radio message to the Everett Fire Department and Deputy Chief Frank Schroeder crawled through a window a short time later and found the toaster glowing. Miss Olinger was a member of the Elks' excursion party to Victoria.

Two weeks ago a long distance telephone call from a motoring party at Issaquah saved a pot of beans over a fire, a member of the department going to the rescue via a window.

Pigeon Carrying Code Messages Is Stranded

HOQUIAM, Wednesday, June 2.—A carrier pigeon, with code messages attached to each leg, landed exhausted last evening in the chicken yard of Sam Chappel's residence at Copalis Crossing. S. The bird was so tired upon alighting it could scarcely move, and refuses to leave the place. A similar pigeon landed at one of the Polson logging camps recently.

OLYMPIA, Wednesday, June 2.—The Supreme Court yesterday announced that it had referred the application of Walter B. Allen of Seattle, for a license to practice law, to the State Board of Law Examiners, with instructions to investigate, "particularly any new changes which may be made." No explanation was given.

Mr. Allen, after long years of practice in Seattle, was forbidden to appear in the courts when it was discovered that he never had obtained a license. Asserting that the failure is an oversight, he now is attempting to get a license.

METHODISTS ASKED TO ASSIST MISSIONARIES

Bishop Shepard of Portland Appeals for Funds at Conference in Wenatchee.

By Associated Press.

WENATCHEE, Wednesday, June 2.—An appeal to Methodists to "give more and not less," so that foreign missionary work might be continued on a greater scale than ever before, was made last night by Bishop W. O. Shepard of Portland, Ore., in an address before the Wenatchee district conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church. The conference opened yesterday afternoon and will close today. Bishop Cross left this morning for Prosser to attend the Walla Walla district conclave.

Bishop Cross touched on the report of fourteen bishops, who returned recently from foreign lands, stating that the bishops had found that missionary work had been greatly curtailed because of a dropping off in contributions for the work.

Pioneer Movement Discussed.

A banquet attended by 150 laymen and pastors from all parts of the district preceded Bishop Cross' address. Dr. Edward Mills, editor of The Pacific Christian Advocate, Portland, Ore., spoke on the significance of the pioneer movement in the United States. He said the religious life of America is distinctly democratic, more so than anywhere else. In the old world, he said, people look back to traditions, while in America people look forward.

O. F. Gardener of Leavenworth, spoke on "The Church and the Community." He said people do not care for interpretations by pastors of the theories of creation or scientific explanations, but want spiritual leadership.

Thirty Churches Represented.

Yesterday afternoon M. J. Perdue of Spokane, spoke on "Religious Education." Other speakers were Ralph Thomas, Pateros, on "Evangelism;" J. O. Hawk, Wenatchee, "Our Hospital;" Gertrude Apel, Chewelah, "Twentieth Century Youth and the Church," and Dr. Mills, on "An Editor's Viewpoint of the Church Paper and Its Value to the Church."

Thirty churches are represented at the conference, pastors being far outnumbered by laymen. Business sessions were to be held today and reports of churches given.

Workman Drowned While Fishing; Widow Gets Compensation

By Associated Press.

OLYMPIA, Wednesday, June 2.—Holding that a workman injured while at the plant of his employer is entitled to compensation, although not injured at the immediate place of his employment, the Supreme Court has affirmed the Thurston County Court in allowing the claim presented by Mrs. Hazel R. Bristow, widow of Tony Bristow, who was drowned April 10, 1925, when he fell from the dam of the Mutual Lumber Company's mill near Bucoda, while fishing. The Department of Labor and Industries rejected the claim.

Bristow punched the time clock at the mill at 7:25 a. m. on the morning of his death and then went to the dam to fish, as he did not begin work until 8 o'clock. While Bristow was employed as "spotter" on the resaw located 400 feet from the dam, the courts held that he had reported for duty about the time he usually came to work and as the dam was part of the mill plant, his widow was entitled to compensation.

Seattle Tax Expert Speaks at Aberdeen

ABERDEEN, Wash., Wednesday, June 2.—Favoring a constitutional classification for different classes of property, a measure proposed to the Legislature last winter and vetoed by Gov. Roland H. Hartley, Frank C. Jackson, Seattle tax expert, outlined his program for tax law changes before members of the Pacific Northwest Real Estate Association here Monday. Mr. Jackson declared that in 1853 when the present tax laws were passed by the Legislature, only two lines of property, personal and real estate, were available for taxation. Since that time railroads and many other taxable units have been developed with the result that there is a "very general unfairness in taxation."

DECISION AFFIRMED IN ALIEN LAND CASE

Supreme Court, Sitting en Banc, Escheats Property of White River Gardens to State.

Special to The Times.

OLYMPIA, Wednesday, June 2.—By a divided court sitting en banc and with three judges dissenting, the majority opinion in one of the important alien land cases of King County affirms the original department decision in the case of the state, respondent, against Taka Hirabayashi and wife, respondents, and the White River Gardens, Inc., S. Katsuno and wife, and Yoshijo Katsuno, a minor, and Nora Murphy as guardian of such minor child, appellants, in which the court held that certain lands held by the White River Gardens, Inc., were held in violation of the alien land law and were declared escheated to the state. The affirmng decision is a brief per curiam merely adhering to the results reached in the department opinion as reported in 133 Wash., 462.

An extended dissenting opinion is filed by Judge E. M. Parker and concurred in by Judges Main and Askren, which concludes as follows:

"I am of the opinion that the White River Gardens, Inc., has not, at any time since Katsuno caused the transfer to that corporation of his contract interest in the land in part payment of his stock subscription, held title to that contract interest in trust for Katsuno, and that the state has not possessed the right of escheat with reference to the land at any time since Katsuno transferred his 1997 shares of stock of the White River Gardens, Inc., as a gift to his minor daughter, which transfer gave to that corporation full citizenship rights for the purpose of ownership in land in this state."

Only Three Grand Army Veterans in Cowlitz

LONGVIEW, Wednesday, June 2.—The ever-thinning line of G. A. R. veterans has diminished to a number less than the fingers of one hand in Cowlitz County. There are only three, it is believed. The G. A. R. post was abandonted a year ago. All three are in good health and active, however. E. M. Irvin, 85, of Kelso, the "youngster" of the trio, was married a few weeks ago. His bride is 65 years old. James Stype, also of Kelso, is 90 and in good health, and Oliver G. Byerly of Ostrander, in his 90's, was the last commander of the G. A. R. post in the county and is at his office every day. "Dad" Jones, Kelso's first mayor, 95, was in the militia during the Civil War, saw active service but was not mustered into the regular army and received no pension.

STATE GRANGE HEAD CRITICIZES GOVERNOR

A. S. Goss Speaks at Convention; Warehouse Service to Be Extended.

By Associated Press.

KENNEWICK, Wednesday, June 2.—Extension of warehouse service will be made during the coming year by the Grange Service Corporation, delegates attending the annual State Grange convention here were told yesterday by W. C. Dickinson, who is in charge of the service.

Mr. Dickinson said an effort will be made to supply sections not served through the warehouse system by pooling orders of members and shipping in carload lots, the plan being to pool shipments of purchases of farm supplies. Grange warehouses enjoyed a prosperous year, Mr. Dickinson reported.

Other reports showed that the subordinate granges have made a gain of 1,584 members in the last year. The Pomona Granges gained 133 members, juveniles 246, with seventeen new subordinate granges, three Pomonas and fifteen new juvenile granges organized.

The official paper showed a loss of $211 per issue, due to increased circulation with a decreased advertising patronage, it was reported.

Speaking at the morning session, A. S. Goss, master of the State Grange, criticized Governor Hartley for assuming to pass upon the constitutionality of legislation without consulting the courts and for removing from office members of boards of regents. He praised some of Governor Hartley's policies.

The way to judge as to the effectiveness of the state's educational system, he said, lies in the quality of its products. He favored not less but more education if it is of the right kind, and urged that entrance requirements be made more strict.

EVERETT, Wednesday, June 2.—Everett dogs will have to maintain discreet silence hereafter, according to the terms of an emergency ordinance passed by the city commissioners yesterday. It makes it unlawful to own or keep dogs which bark, howl or whine so as to disturb persons in the neighborhood.

MANUFACTURERS CAN DEVELOP LOCAL MARKETS

(Editorial)

IT is significant of the present-day trend of business thought in this section of the country that the committee that is working out plans for the annual Pacific Northwest Merchants' Exposition this year is directing a special appeal to manufacturers to participate. The big show, which Seattle will stage the second week in August, is an outgrowth of what formerly was known as Buyers' Week, when Seattle wholesale merchants and jobbers kept open house for their out-of-town customers and made individual displays of their wares on their own premises to stimulate fall and winter trade. The same custom still prevails in many other cities that are large distributing centers.

But in Seattle the idea of bringing buyer and seller together once a year has undergone a remarkable development since the first Buyers' Week was observed some thirteen years ago, and the Pacific Northwest Merchants' Exposition is the result. Years of experience have gone into its making and it has come to be recognized as one of the business shows of the nation.

When the exposition opens on August 9, Pier 41 of the Port of Seattle at Smith Cove, one of the largest ocean terminals on earth, will have been converted into an immense "sample room," where wholesalers and manufacturers from many Pacific Northwest cities will have on display a wonderful assemblage of merchandise brought together from all parts of the world, but featuring products of Washington and her sister states. Year by year the exposition is growing, and it is no longer to be regarded as a local affair, though the Seattle Chamber of Commerce does the work of installing and conducting it as a public service. It is not a profit-making show and it earns not a dollar for its promoters. The sole beneficiaries are the exhibitors.

The merchants and manufacturers of other states and cities are accorded the same courtesies and privileges as their Seattle competitors. The exposition is a great fair, where all exhibitors have equal opportunity to build trade. How great this opportunity is can be gauged by the fact that last year nearly half a million persons were exposition visitors. This year the show undoubtedly will be larger and more comprehensive than it was then.

In these circumstances there should be no hesitancy on the part of prospective exhibitors. The men who are putting on the big show must have the cooperation of these business interests and should get it, for the cooperation will yield big dividends.

Especially is this true with regard to the manufacturers. We have mentioned the fact that a special appeal this year is being made to them. They should answer it promptly and decisively. In our efforts to build up established industries and to bring new ones to the Pacific Northwest we have discovered that markets are by far the most important factor. And for the time being the principal market for the products of our factories are at home. This is the reason for being of the Pacific Northwest products campaign that the Seattle Chamber of Commerce, cooperating with other commercial organizations of this section, is conducting.

Then why not make the Pacific Northwest Merchants' Exposition this year more than ever before a means of developing this home market for our factory products? The development is logical and goes hand in hand with the bringing together of the distributer of manufactured products and the retailer.
