

COTTON CONTROL STARTS 'REVOLT' ON RIO GRANDE

By United Press.
SAN BENITO, Texas, Saturday, Sept. 15.—Opposition to the Bankhead Cotton Control Act flared to the verge of violence in the Rio Grande Valley tonight.
 Resentment against restraints imposed under the act was echoed in the Texas Senate today when Senator T. J. Holbrook of Galveston offered a resolution demanding its repeal.
 Meanwhile Cameron County officers were mobilized to prevent outbreaks among angered farmers, who yesterday threatened to seize cotton tax exemption certificates.
 A delegation of Ransaville growers armed themselves with shotguns and rifles and marched to San Benito, county seat, to present their demands before Farm Agent Henry Alsmeyer. Other officials averted violence by persuading the farmers to return home to meet again in orderly fashion at Hartlingen.
 At the Hartlingen meeting valley growers petitioned President Roosevelt to declare the Bankhead Act inoperative at once.
 Cameron County officers said they feared that unless distribution of exemption certificates was speeded or the act nullified through nonenforcement that rioting might ensue.

Porto Rican Gets 5-Year Term For Robbing Vender

Francisco Lopez, 32-year-old Porto Rican, convicted Wednesday of robbery of Frank Pugel, 19-year-old newspaper salesman, was sentenced yesterday by Superior Judge Calvin S. Hall to serve from five to six years in the state penitentiary in Walla Walla.
 Lopez, whose defense was that he was in jail July 1 when young Pugel was held up, told the court he would ask to be deported to Porto Rico while he was serving the sentence. Lopez said he began his career of crime, which brought several prior convictions, when he found he could not fit into life in the United States.

Strolling Around the Town

If James E. Shannon, veteran Seattle Precinct constable, is victorious in the November 6 election, he will be starting his twenty-ninth year on the job.
 Shannon was elected when the late Judge John B. Gordon became a justice of the peace, and has been on duty at the Police Headquarters Justice Court ever since. One of his campaign promises is that he saves the county the expense of office rent every year, because he carries his papers in his pocket instead of using an office.

The Stroller, who once attempted to read the Analects of Confucius, and rather enjoyed it while the whim lasted—has a new-old enthusiasm. Guess what: Montaigne's Essays, no less.
 They're lots of fun, and old Michel Eyquem Montaigne is surprisingly modern. Right now, the Stroller is amusing himself copying out maxims which might do very well as a guide to living in Seattle in 1934 although they were written by a philosopher in France in the latter 1500's.

Stroller's nomination for the mantle of Charles Dickens' Albert Halper. Having enjoyed his "Union Square," have you sampled his new book, "The Foundry"? And there are some poignantly beautiful excerpts of Halper's Chicago recollections, in sketch form, in Carl Van Doren's new anthology, "Modern American Prose."

DeCasto Earl Mayer, mystery man who was sent from here to prison for life in 1929 in connection with the robbery and disappearance of James Eugene Bassett, Baltimore, Md., school teacher, has built himself a little curio business from within his cell at the Washington State Penitentiary, according to Garfield Davis, state parole officer.
 Mayer, still as gaunt and silent as when he faced innumerable murder accusations during his trial, here sits in his cell day after day braiding horse-hair and whittling mementoes for sale at parks and curio-shops.

Mayer borrowed the "makings" for his first curios from other inmates. Mayer was sent to prison as an habitual criminal after he was found to have had possession of a watch and automobile of Bassett's.
 James Y. Sakamoto, blind editor and publisher of the Japanese-American Courier, took a great deal of pleasure last night in recording the opportunity opened to his fellow second-generation Japanese, Tara Aoki.
 Aoki leaves Christmas Day for Japan to assist Prof. Takeo Iwahashi, Japanese philosopher, in opening a vocational school for the blind at Osage. Like Sakamoto, Aoki and Professor Iwahashi are blind, although Aoki is not totally so. Aoki, graduate of the Vancouver School for the Blind, was interviewed here recently by the noted Japanese philosopher and teacher.

L. O. Shradler, City Council committee clerk, wanted to get off a street car in Second Avenue, just before it turned into its Pike Street loop, to catch another car across the intersection.

But the street car operator would not let Shradler off, because passengers cannot be taken on or let off the north-bound cars at Pike Street until they make the turn into Pike.
 Shradler rode impatiently around the corner, but when he finally could get off, the other car was gone. By the time another car arrived, Shradler had forgotten he had paid one fare and had a transfer in his hand, so paid another fare when he boarded the car, thereby completing the ruination of his disposition for the time.

FORD offers this NEW SERVICE

... Instead of an "Overhaul" — a factory reconditioned engine

Every mechanism, no matter how finely made, eventually wears and must be reconditioned. Automobile engines are no exception.

The Ford V-8 is the finest, most dependable and most rugged engine Ford has ever built. But there comes a time when any piece of machinery should be reconditioned to renew the efficiency originally built into it.

The Factory that built the engine is best equipped to recondition it. Here are the men, the precision equipment and the inspection methods which insured the excellence of the engine in the first place. Therefore the Ford Motor Company has instituted this exclusive new service to owners of Ford cars and trucks. When the owner of any Ford built since 1927 finds that his engine needs an "overhaul", he can have a factory reconditioned engine—at approximately half the cost of an old-fashioned "overhaul".

The Ford owner not only gets a much better job at far less cost—but only a few hours are required to make the exchange.

This "Exchange Plan", which also includes many other units of Ford cars and trucks is an important forward step in automotive practice.

Many Other Units Included In This Exchange Service

If your carburetor, generator, or any of several other important units needs major repairs it can be replaced with a factory-reconditioned unit—at much less than the usual cost of repairs. Note the low charges for factory-reconditioned parts:

Cyl. Assembly	$49.50*	$46.50*
