That's What MONEY Is For

TF Johnny comes down with appendicitis, we don't stint the doctor bill. If Susie can go to college, we buckle down and pay. For nothing do we Amercans spend our savings so willingly as to give our children a future. Well, now is the time.

We don't buy bonds. We buy freedom for our children. Our forefathers did as much for us. To assure our freedom they pledged their lives, their fortunes, and their sacred honor. Now it's our turn. Wherefore this Company is trying to make it simpler for everybody to buy

In Los Angeles, Standard erected and gave the Govern-ment a glass Defense House located in Pershing Squarecenter of the bond drive. And now, too, defense stamps are on sale at all of the 1,100 Standard Stations throughout

Uncle Sam's men tell us this has been a great help. But, after all, the bond campaign is up to you . . . and you . . . and you. The chips are down. It's all or nothing, Enlist your pocketbook to fight for your children. The Britons, the Poles the Czechs, the Russians, the Danes, the Greeks, the Norwegians, - and the men who signed the Declaration of Independence—are calling to you that that's what money's for. * * * * * * * *

"Sappho," was announced today. She died at Millau, in Southern France, at the age of 75. It was in Aveyron, at La Bastide, that Emma Calve was born on August 15, 1866, and it was from the convent at Millau that she went out to begin her musical education at the age of 15. Best-liked by American audiences in the title role of Carmen (which she detested), Mme. Calve sang at the Metropolitan for 13 consecutive years after making her debuit there as Santuzza in "Cavalleria Rusticana" on November 29, 1893. It was a source of pride to her that she had appeared in every large city and had visited every state in the United States. In addition she made a world tour in 1910-1911. During the first World War Mme. Calve devoted all her efforts to charity work, One of her New York concerts to raise funds fo the relief of French wounded realized more than $100,000.
