

JAPANESE, ARMS TAKEN ON VASHON

Two alien Japanese and one German were arrested and a quantity of small arms, cameras and dynamite caps were seized in an all-day search of Vashon Island yesterday by agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

Armed with search warrants issued by the United States attorney's office, the "G-men" searched the homes of all known aliens residing on the island. Deputies of the King County sheriff's office aided in the search.

Names of the three aliens arrested were not revealed. They were held in the detention quarters of the U. S. Immigration Station here.

4 Japanese Seized Near Dam; Explosives Found

PORTLAND, Or., Saturday, Feb. 7.—(UP)—Four Japanese, accused by F. B. I. agents of possessing large quantities of dynamite near Bonneville Dam, were jailed here tonight. They will face the Enemy Alien Board here next week.

J. D. Swenson, special agent in charge of the Portland F. B. I. office, said agents found a shed in which was stored 28 sticks of dynamite, seven dynamite caps and 150 feet of fuse.

Swenson said the four Japanese in custody were arrested at Hood River, where agents investigated 81 places.

First alien arrested under the Alien Registration Act, German-born Kurt Max Kauth, 40, Prineville, was held tonight in the county jail.

Kauth surrendered to federal authorities, explaining: "I just don't like the idea of registering."

'Worship Unit' Definition Stirs Renton; Pastor Held

Church and Renton Differ Over Door

with the line of existing buildings, he said.

The church's entrance, says Hood, is nearer the street than adjoining houses.

The church obtained its building permit months ago, during the regime of a former city engineer. The permit allowed the church to build a two-story recreation center at the rear, and to remodel the worship unit.

The recreation center has been built, the entire work being done by Mr. Wakelam, who is somewhat of a carpenter on the side, and by members of the church. The only cost was for materials.

Neighbors Protested
The present argument began four months ago, when the volunteer workers tore off the front steps and porch of the church and began work on a larger entrance and vestibule. There was an immediate protest from adjoining property owners and the Council gave verbal orders that work be stopped. It was.

The pastor and church members appeared before the next Council meeting and demanded an explanation.

Mr. Wakelam explained that the building permit allowed remodeling of the worship unit of the church. He said this meant the church proper as distinguished from the recreation center to the rear.

Mayor Beamblossom and Council members said their interpretation of "worship unit" was the pulpit in which the pastor stands while delivering a sermon.

The mayor said yesterday that such still was his understanding. "Absurd," was the retort of Mr. Wakelam.

Friends Sign Petition
Two months ago the church members presented to the Council a petition with 200 signers, many of whom were non-church members, asking that the work be allowed to progress. The Council refused.

"About a month ago," Mr. Wakelam said yesterday, "I received a telephone call from Mr. Houser, city attorney. He said it was an unofficial call, but told me we could go ahead with the work without fear of arrest. He suggested that we might start an injunction suit against the city to settle the matter once and for all. We started to work."

Houser explained yesterday that his statement probably was misunderstood, as he told the pastor that the church either could enjoin the city and settle the issue or it could go ahead and build, face prosecution and settle the matter that way once and for all.

"The whole trouble," said Houser, "is that the permit didn't specify where the alterations on the church proper were to be made."

Amicable Settlement Foreseen
Houser said he is certain the whole matter will be settled amicably.

Mr. Wakelam said work proceeded from the time it was resumed about a month ago until his arrest Tuesday afternoon.

The arrest was ordered by the City Council at its meeting last Monday night. City Attorney Houser was instructed to draw up a complaint. He did so and it was served on Mr. Wakelam by Police Chief Vince Stewart.

Mr. Wakelam said he and other workers waited all forenoon for the arrest, but it was not until 2:10 o'clock in the afternoon that Chief Stewart arrived with the warrant.

Walter Manning, the pastor's brother-in-law, was working on the building with the pastor at the time. He accompanied Mr. Wakelam to court, where a continuance was granted for a plea.

While the church dispute actually affects only a small part of Renton, particularly those residents on Smithers Street, in which the church is situated, it is the topic of conversation all over town. Sides have been taken almost everywhere and the topic will bring an argument as quickly as any controversial question.

Chief Stewart has steered a middle course throughout it all. He said yesterday that this is the first time he ever has arrested a minister. He added: "And I hope it is the last."

REVELLE BACKS WORKS RESERVE

A resolution proposing that Seattle accept an offer by the Federal Public Work Reserve to assist the City Council in working out a program to set up an agency which will sift out nonessential projects during the war will be introduced in the City Council tomorrow by Councilman Paul Revelle.

Revelle, in announcing he will sponsor the resolution, said the agency's activities will be designed to "build up a reservoir of projects which can be launched during the let-down immediately after the war."

Revelle said that projects not necessary to the war effort would be deferred, making jobs available to thousands of men who are released from war industries after the hostilities have ceased.

"Seattle should make every effort to build up a reserve of employment to go forward at that time," the councilman declared.

The books were donated by members and include novels, poetry, prose, historical and scientific works, mystery stories, dictionaries and Bibles.

Nye Would Avert Farm Price Pegging

WASHINGTON, Saturday, Feb. 7.—Senator Gerald P. Nye, Republican, North Dakota, will ask Congress to amend the Price-Control Act to prohibit any action that might result in farm prices being pegged below parity, it was learned tonight.

The farm bloc has expressed fears that release of large government-held surpluses could act as a brake on the normal rise of prices.

*a love that never dies
his favorite brand in ties*

Fashioncraft . . . 1.00

There are few things closer to a man than his wife, his pipe and his favorite tie. And while his wife may have been a Smith, a Jones or a Brown before her marriage, and his pipe may have any one of a dozen different brand names, his favorite tie usually bears the name Fashioncraft. Nor is that pure coincidence. There's a lot more to a tie than you think. Careful planning of pattern, for instance. The quality of fabric. Whether it's cut to taper just right at the neckband. The way it resists wrinkles. And, through years of study, Fashioncraft has learned to pass every single test 100%! Naturally, he's only conscious of the ease with which it ties, and the way the finished effort looks . . . but all this adds up to that. You don't have to be squeamish about patterns, either. There isn't a single "Christmas tie" in this whole Valentine assortment. Choose your gesture of love from a brand new shipment of 1,200, just in. There are checks, plaids, stripes, small patterns in satins, Ceylon crepes, baratheas and poplins, every one his potential favorite for years and years to come.

Shanghai Dollars
About 20 years ago, many otherwise well-balanced Americans thought it wise to exchange U. S. A. dollars for Shanghai dollars, the contention being that by reason of the guaranteed stability of Shanghai by the Great Powers, its integrity would never suffer even if some of the Powers were at War with each other. Today Shanghai dollars are worth less than 5 cents in American money.
