CIVIC UNION ASKS FOR AID

Reform Group Sends Out a Call for Help, Declaring Its Principles Guarantee Rectitude in Officials.

Organization Has Had Stormy Time Since It Was First Formed, Shattering Agreement at the First Campaign.

An appeal for help has gone out from the Civic Union; a cry for some one to throw out the life line before the membership becomes so thoroughly demoralized that they will not be enough left to fill out the offices.

The Civic Union announces that it is about four years old, and being beneath the age of intelligent thinking, the reform body cannot remember the time of birth, nor the date when a crowd of enthusiasts shoved Milo A. Root up to the platform and proclaimed him as president. Those were the halcyon days of the Civic Union, when a real crowd turned out for the meetings and the membership got up and told about theories of politics as if it all counted.

Edward Holton James, once of Harvard, which was made famous by J. Franklin Dore, J. A. Kangley, Joseph Shippen, Erastus Brainerd and George Wright, was a leading light of the early Civic Union organization. Subsequently he has gone to work for a living. The last time Edward Holton James preached civic virtue he told how Socialists theories fitted the herding and milking of the loving kine. John H. Powell, William H. Lewis, Richard Mansfield White, H. Josephans and Reuben W. Jones were leaders in the days when the Civic Union had members enough to lead. At the last meeting just a dozen men were present.

The Civic Union stubbed its toe in the mayoralty campaign in 1904 when it drew out. It fell and hurt itself when the union divided on the Lou Smith candidacy in the fall of the same year. The organization "died," representing strength enough afterwards to feel bad when President Milo Root took a supreme court judgment and it has drifted down the toboggan slide of unpopularity ever since. Hence the regulative body of things municipal and affairs of the county rises to announce:

Civic Union's Announcement.
At this time it is well to state the objects, aims and purposes of the Civic Union of Seattle.

The objects of the association shall be to arouse greater interest in public matters and in high standards of civic life, and to secure an administration of municipal affairs, which shall be efficient and businesslike.

More specifically the objects of this association shall be to:

The application of honest business methods in all branches of the city government.

The enforcement of the laws, and for the stimulation of a wholesome respect therefor.

The procurement of a wise and economical use of all public funds.

The separation of municipal politics from complicity with crime and vice.

The participation of all voters in the caucuses and primaries of their respective political parties.

The establishment of municipal administration on a purely business basis securing the greatest separation of practical municipal issues from state and national politics.

The election of efficient, honest and trustworthy men to fill the public offices.

The liberal publication of all facts connected with the city government and act of its officials.

The encouragement of improvements along all lines, and for the moral support of efficient officers and employees.

A means through which civic pride and municipal patriotism may be fostered and expressed.

The Civic Union of Seattle has been in existence about four years. We engaged in the work for the best interests of the people. It is well to have such an organization fostered and upheld. An independent body of men watching out for the public good can be of incalculable benefit to the citizens, and especially the tax payers. There are many abuses that can be corrected and many checks are inaugurated, defalcation and extravagance prevented. In the past we have not had fear of favor, given our opinion of men and measures, which have been productive of beneficial results.

A few instances of some of our work have been working for the passage of a juvenile court bill, nominations for the public good, which we have carried on for over two years, and only ceased our labors for that purpose when it became a law. We have also candidates for county officers at last election, etc. As none of our officers comes from the ranks of the party in power, it has been suggested that we employ a paid secretary, so that city and county matters can be more carefully watched. One of the trustees of the Civic Union has promised to be one of twenty persons to give $100 per annum to help in the work of the Civic Union, and subscribe to the plan to dress C. E. Congleton, secretary, 611 New York Block, City.

Wants Thankers' Support.
Citizens and taxpayers it is to your interest that the Civic Union extends its sphere of usefulness. The time has now arrived when there should be a complete checking up of city and county affairs, and that the facts be made public. The Civic Union has shown that taxes many times more than its cost.

If you desire this organization to be well equipped, to be able to keep on with the good work, give it your financial assistance and moral support. Deserves well and you should not expect a body of men to devote time and money to protect your interests without some one to assist them. Such a course is not honorable nor fair. We ask your help, and the results will be manifest. The exposures of defalcations should be necessary. It will be our aim to keep men honest by having a supervising committee, and making public any official irregularity, dishonesty or incompetency. We will assist in exposing the guilty parties to justice. Let us insist that the affairs of the city and county be conducted in a businesslike manner, and that the qualifications of all public servants shall be honesty, integrity and capability.

Citizens, will you assist us in our good work?
THE CIVIC UNION OF THE CITY OF SEATTLE.

Demise of Thomas Beecham.
The death of Thomas Beecham at his home in Southport, England, on Saturday, April 6, a man whose name was a household word in every hamlet, village town and city on the face of the globe has passed into the Great Beyond, leaving his friends, acquaintances and his commercial associates the most interesting and lovable personality.

Beecham was the founder of the great pill manufacturing in Europe and America, and which had their small beginning in the town of Wigan over half a century ago.

At the funeral which took place on Wednesday, April 10, at the St. Helens Cemetery, the tribute paid to Mr. Beecham by the officiating clergyman, the Rev. Dr. G. Z. Chessman, fittingly expresses the position held by the deceased in the esteem of those who loved him best.

Dr. Chessman said in part:

"Mr. Thomas Beecham was by nature a greatly gifted man. He had a genius for building up business and the foundations of the firm whose ramifications are now world wide were laid by his far seeing genius and perseverance. The man himself was as remarkable as the monument he has reared to his name. He was transparent, he gave there were no hidden deceits or cunning complexities in his nature. He was open as the daylight, a sincere and artless man, never pretending to be other than he was.

"He chose his friends carefully, but when once a friendship was formed he was loyal to the core, never deserting a friend, never falling a friend in adversity.

"No man less ostentatious has ever lived among us. When he gave to good objects or deserving persons the gift was given up as if it were no gift. We are sure that his benefactions should be blazed abroad on subscription lists. Oftener than ever his intimate friends suspected he would do good by stealth.

"He was a model employer. He was with all his employees. His relationship to his staff of workers was almost patriarchal, and he never allowed it to sink into a mere pecuniary nexus. His sense of life was the reward which nature confers upon the temperate."

Beecham was 75 years old. The great establishment will be continued by his son and partner, Mr. Joseph Beecham, who has been for many years an active factor in the conduct of the business and who has personally guided the tremendous advertising campaign which has made Beecham's Pills worth a guinea a box.

WOMEN BUNCOED BY SWINDLERS

Man Giving His Name as Dumas Advertises for Demonstrators Whose Money He Gets by Glittering Promises.

Landlady Besieged by Throngs of the Deluded, Who Pursue With Fruitless Results the One That Wronged Them.

LADY demonstrators, $2.25 per day and car fare, three days each month, house-dresses, work, lunch, the store demonstrating six-hour day; experience desirable, but not essential; also one chief demonstrator; $2.25 per week and expenses. Apply before 9 a. m., or after 1 p. m., Park-Davis Co., 1002 East Madison.

FIFTY or more women, who placed confidence in the promises of the man who caused the above advertisement to be inserted in the daily papers, spent last night in sleeplessness, searching their brains for some means of getting their money out. All of these women are victims of the man's duplicity, some of them to the extent of only their trunk and others to the extent of several dollars.

Among those wondering whom one can trust Mrs. Brown, who lives at 1002 East Madison Street, and who caught the man, who caused to be published the ad and who surreptitiously removed his trunk from the room she had rented him. This was Tuesday night between 11:30 and 12 o'clock, when the door of the owner's department was opened and a second man was driven to an express wagon and disappeared.

Notice of Absence Posted.
Now there is a notice posted just over the hall of Mrs. Brown's home which reads:

"The man who advertised for demonstrators is here. He is here and don't want to be annoyed by answering questions."

The story of the man (and by the way Mrs. Brown is making an easy living is told by Mrs. L. M. Wood, one of his victims, who lives at 1002 East Madison Street, according to Mrs. Wood, Dumas told all those who responded to his cleverly worded advertisement that he was representing Park-Davis Company, which is one of the largest manufacturers of cements in the United States, and was introducing a new brand of cement. The would-be demonstrators were to buy a supply of the article and get their house to house and sell it. They were also to break a few plates and some other things, and then they were to get together again just to show what the cement would do.

When they were to receive $2.25 a day and a certain commission on their sales, but it would be necessary to explain, for that to pay for the cement which was intrusted to them, and then when they sold it, they would be given their commission and their salary. The woman who was the best showing was to be made chief demonstrator at a salary of $4 a day.

According to Mrs. Wood, such of the women had been secretly informed that she was the one slated for the position of chief demonstrator. She must, however, get busy and sell another dozen or so bottles of cement for there is another woman who is now pressing you very closely," Dumas would whisper.

Were Induced to Buy More.
Some of the women proved energetic and sold the first installment of cement. These were induced to buy more and more until they had almost all the money they could get hold of. For Dumas said that his supply was running short and that he was in the quantity allowed by Park-Davis Company would soon be exhausted. This he had been told by Dumas, who had so long nearly all of the women purchased considerable quantities of the cement. It was with a heavy heart that some of the women left their room. The next day there were more women ringing the bell at 1002 East Madison Street and Mrs. Brown was kept busy answering the summons. About 2 o'clock in the afternoon Dumas came to the house and shamefacedly explained that he had not paid his room rent because of a mistake made by the landlady. He had ordered the expressman to come for the trunk at 5 o'clock, but that a mistake was made, hence the lateness of the hour. Dumas promised to pay Mrs. Brown in a day or so and that a mistake was made, hence the lateness of the hour. Dumas promised to pay Mrs. Brown in a day or so and that a mistake was made, hence the lateness of the hour. Dumas promised to pay Mrs. Brown in a day or so and that a mistake was made, hence the lateness of the hour.

Described as Smooth.
When the women found out that Dumas had moved they all went to the Burke Building, but they did not know his name or in such business had rented any offices there and now they are wondering what to do to locate him. Dumas is described as a medium-sized man, young, of sandy complexion and "so smooth."

In the meantime, most of the women are going out to try and get their money back by selling the cement, although, as the last batch looks more like glue than anything of adhesive qualities, there is some fear that Dumas spent real money for the first time sold them.

Died Natural Death.
Deputy Coroner Wigan returned from Riverport last night, where he had come to investigate the death of Mrs. Leon Bellinger. She passed away during the day without a medical attendant, and therefore an official examination was necessary. While reports that death was due to a hemorrhage of the lungs.

JAPANESE EXCLUSION ACT IS AGITATED

Local Organization Hopes to Interest Union Labor in Movement and Civic Bodies as Well.

The Japanese-Korean Exclusion League at its meeting last night named a committee of six members to push the work of the league among the labor unions of the city. It was shown that Japanese were gradually supplanting white labor in many industries in Seattle and all labor unions will be urged to unite in an active campaign against Asiatics.

A member of the San Francisco league will be here to address a meeting in the near future and every effort will be made to insure the passage of Japanese exclusion act. The next meeting is planned to be a rally gathering and it is hoped to have delegates from every union in the city in attendance. Later, an effort will be made to interest civic bodies, as in San Francisco, where a membership of $1,000 has been drawn from the labor unions and civic bodies.
