SEATTLE MARKETS

Local Merchants Stocking Up for Saturday's Trade.

Turtles From South Sea Islands. Strawberries Up in Price---Live Poultry Plentiful.

(Corrected Daily.)

(Corrected Dally.)

SEATTLE, Friday, May 4.—For two distinct reasons trade will be good on Western Avenue today. First, a steamer arrived last night from San Francisco, and that means an influx of fresh goods, and as usual, they will be snapped up at once. Second, Friday is the day the local merchants always stock up for the heavy trade of Saturday, and today will prove no exception to the rule.

The bright, warm sun of the morning, together with the cooling breeze that was together with the cooling breeze that was on hand after the night's rain, brought out the buyers in great numbers, and at an early hour this morning the street was lined with people.

The lowa car of butter and eggs that came in the fore part of the week sold with a readiness that bespoke well for the condition of the local products. If there had been a surplus of local production on hand the Eastern products would not have sold so easily. Another car from Iowa is due during the early days of the coming week.

is due during the carry and ing week.

Strawberries were minus this morning, and for the first time this year there was a sharp competition among the buyers. From $2 and $2.25 they took a jump to $2.75 and $3, and there was not near $2.10 and $3, and there was not hear enough to supply the demand.

There is a great deal of live poultry on hand, and it is proving a rapid seller. The supply cannot equal the demand as yet, but for a while back there was not a chick to be seen on market street. Cucumbers are selling at $1.25 per dozen, but are moving slowly. They will doubtless go slower before another week has passed. A car of oranges came in last night and were in fine condition. The car of bananas, which was due last night, came in late this morning, and another car will be due the fore part of next week. A feature of the morning was the arrival of three large sea turtles from the Sandwich Islands. They were mammoth fellows, weighing in the neighborhood of 150 pounds each. They sold at $8 per head. These are the first turtles seen in Seattle for a long time.

The Jap Tidal Wave.

The Jap Tidal Wave.

Special Dispatch.
VANCOUVER, B. C., Friday, May 4—
U. S. Immigration Commissioner Healey stated to The Times correspondent before he left for Seattle early in the week that he would confer with immigration agents in Seattle for the purpose of devising some means of preventing Japanese who come within the provisions of the labor contract law getting over the line from British Columbia into the United States. Mr. Healey said that his duties were to look after and care for immigrants coming in to the United States through British Columbia, to welcome them on the threshold of America in the name of Uncle Sam. Mr. Healey said this Japanese tidal wave took the United States Government by surprise, and he being the only available officer to handle the influx or try to handle it, at the British Columbia end, he had to take his coat off and go to work.

But the machinery of his office was very limited, and he was free to confess that he was not able to prevent the Japanese making contracts while in British Columbia with Japanese contract laborers in Seattle and simply walking over the line to Seattle to fulfill the contracts.

As far as British Columbia is concerned, although the Japanese are coming in at the rate of from 50 to 100 daily, the number in Vancouver does not apparently increase, and it is pretty certain that, with the exception of some 500 Japanese shipped to the Skeena River canneries, the great majority of Japanese are arriving here simply en route to the States, and the health au-jority of Japanese are arriving here simply en route to the States, and the health authorities do not encourage them to remain long in transit, for they are routed out of bed twice and three times a week, scared half to death by a posse of police, and fined heavily for daring to breathe in one-tenth of the number of enclosed cubic inches that a white man is supposed to breathe in, and this in spite of the fact that if the Japs do not go to the over-crowded boarding houses there will be no shelter for them at all. Provincial Medical Health Officer Fagan says: "Japanese, I am determined, shall live like white men Health Officer Fagan says: "Japanese, I am determined, shall live like white men when in a white man's country ese Consul Shenezen said to the fined Japs are living in British Columbia."

are living in British Columbia."

Outside of the boarding house keepers the only section of the community who are pleased at the advent of the Japs are the canners. The Japanese influx saves the canners industry from annihilation. The canners combined to reduce the high price of fish, a price that took the profits completely out of the business but made the fisherman prosperous. The fishermen combined immediately after the cannerymen's combined immediately after the cannerymen's combine. Things looked black for the industry, when Mr. Jap came along and said to the cannerymen''We will fish for you and we will not join the Union. The Union simply wants to use us, then throw us away like a squeezed lemon." Ever since Mr. Jap said this the canners have been hard at work arranging with the Japs for the season's work. A fisherman must be a British subject, but that's easily got over and Englishmen are being made out of Japs on very short notice. And as the law governing such things in British Columbia is as full of holes as a sieve, the Union men can do nothin but rail at the government for refusing to act. The 500 Japs sent up the Skeena were to replace the Indians who, profiting by the teaching of the white man, struck in a body last year. The fishermen on the Fraser will be simply run out of the business in hundreds by the British Japanese fishermen and the cannery industry will be saved, but what of the white fisherman?
