

BOEING SPEEDS BONUS PAYMENTS

A thorough check of Boeing employment records is being made, paving the way for early issuance of the retroactive paychecks recently granted certain Boeing workers in a War Labor Board directive, company officials said today.

The period covered by the directive is July 6, 1942, to March 3, 1943. Workers affected are those employed during that period who terminated employment prior to March 3, 1943, but have since returned to Boeing; former employees who return within 60 days after August 17, providing they remain a minimum of 60 days; employees who were on sick leave or other authorized leave, except military leave; female employees who terminated employment because of pregnancy, and employees who were absent during a part of the eight-month period.

Company spokesman said clarification of the directive has been sought from the War Labor Board on two or three minor points, and that machinery for distribution of the bonus is being set up.

War Labor Board officials said that workers who believe they are entitled to the retroactive pay should make a written request to the company, stating name, address, number and amount of time worked during the eight months.

He said he was well and uninjured, and added, "Season's greetings, 1942," indicating the card was written before last Christmas. He is held in the Philippines.

Mrs. Hetzler has another son, Melvin Ray Hetzler, pharmacist's mate first class, who also is a prisoner of the Japanese. He was taken in the Philippines in December, 1941.

Moffett, who was charged with violations of the federal Food, Drugs and Cosmetics Act, said the season had been rainy and the berries had to be packed almost immediately, which could cause their decomposition.

STROLLING AROUND the TOWN

Between his son and a former fellow worker, Edward A. Cannell's private sources of information stretch far out into the Pacific Ocean and all the way to North Africa.

In the Pacific, Cannell's source of information is Herbert Campbell, former pressman for The Times, where Cannell still is employed. Just the other day Campbell, a machinist, third class, sent a wartime souvenir to his former colleague. It was a ragged slip of paper, covered with Japanese writing.

Since the information Cannell receives must stay within the limits of military security, Campbell couldn't say just where or how he got the Japanese souvenir. However, it was clear that no one named Watanabe walked up to Campbell and handed him the bit of paper with a sincere smile.

All Campbell said in inclosing the souvenir was: "Here's a fragment you'll want to keep." Cannell's other informant is his own son, E. A. Cannell, Jr., a pharmacist's mate first class, who's been in the North African area more than a year. Young Cannell, too, can tell his father some of the things he's been seeing, but not all of the things he's been doing.

"Six-foot tomato plants, which The Stroller mentioned some time ago, are commonplace to Fred C. Broadfoot, 2001 Boyer Ave., as his 'extra special' plant is over nine feet tall. What's the secret of his success? He says, 'It's just the neighborhood.'"

Penny postcard sales in Seattle have undergone an inflation which would break Prentiss Brown's heart, if he knew about it. And the rest of this nation is being peppered with views of Northwest scenery at an appalling rate.

At King Street Station, for example, postcards are being gobbled up five times as fast as before the

SAILOR HELD IN DANGER'S DEATH

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 23.—(AP)—The 12th Naval District announced today that William Walter Kuhn, a seaman first class, of Mamaroneck, N. Y., was being held in custody in connection with the death of a San Francisco night club dancer early Friday morning.

Kuhn, 26 years old and married, has admitted that he struck Nadzda Lawrence, 25, but said he had been drinking and did not remember any details of the incident, the Navy said.

Miss Lawrence, on her way to take a street car home, died from a blow which broke her neck. Two other women told police that a sailor who had accosted them, struck the dancer after she apparently told him to leave her alone.

The Navy said Kuhn enlisted January 5, 1942, and had an excellent record, including participation in four major engagements. He was placed in custody pending release to civil authorities.

Allied Arms For Franco Held Unlikely

By WILLIAM H. STONEMAN
Chicago Daily News Foreign Service
LONDON, Aug. 23.—(Special Radio)—If Gen. Francisco Franco and his Nazi puppet regime in Spain cannot protect themselves against insurrection without getting additional weapons from Britain and the United States, it will be just too bad for Franco.

It is likely that Franco's recent plea for arms has been turned down flatly by Washington, after consultation with the British. Britain's attitude has been difficult to ascertain, because this matter apparently did not come to the official attention of the Foreign Office and that organization consequently has professed complete ignorance of any such plea by Franco.
