MEAT CONSERVATION HITS AMERICAN PUBLIC, COLONY

A proclamation on meat conservation by Governor Olson on Oct. 10 has been forwarded to the Project by the California State Council of Defense, it was announced by the administration. It says in part that "as a necessary war measure to provide meat for our armed forces and fighting allies, an order has been made by the Federal government restricting supplies of meats for civilians."

Meanwhile, the Proclamation states it is essential that citizens act voluntarily for fair share of available meat supplies, limiting the individual's weekly allotment of meat to  $2\frac{1}{2}$  lbs. per person.

It is important that colonists realize that the American public is continually being asked to make sacrifices in food-stuffs and other essentials. Life in the Project sometimes clouds these sacrifices and colonists sometimes feel they are not getting all the foodstuffs they want declared the project authorities.

Mr. Ralph Peck, Project Steward, reports that the Project mess is adequate and represents the full quota of food per person. If we are also required to make sacrifices, it is no more than the people throughout the country are required to do.

KEEP 'EM LEARNING

Year-long spring fever which sets nisei activities in the Colony into a whirl re-echoing from dance to dance, has finally come to a standstill. Now that the frivolous novelty has worn off, or that it's simply too cold to go out, it'll be a good idea to pause a bit for serene reflection.

Even from our rather sheltered existence, there can be no escape from the dark picture that stares us in the face. We are constantly being dogged by the spectre of post-war resettlement problems.

The task is large but not insurmountable. An early preparation is the eventual solution to these problems, and the Project is the logical place to start.

Vocational and educational opportunities are abundant here. Failure to take this advantage for self-development because "we are only getting 19 or 16 dollars" is a poor excuse.

Yesterday we were students, farm laborers, grocery delivery boys, civil service clerks and laundry workers who had specialized training but lived and continued to live as though we had never known anything except the work we did at the moment. Today we are engineers, school teachers, departmental supervisors, business managers, editors, architects, and technicians of all kinds.

In the course of these activities, it will unconsciously prepare us for the reality of the outside world.

And this is our last editorial rattled off from the temporarily shared desk before Editor Imazeki takes over Monday.

Sun shines rarely at the corner of the office where we work and we have become mentally unbalanced. It has been a mad, desperate rush to the deadlines, harrassed by English teachers for the faulty usage of the language. Yet, the paper came out everyday. That's the important thing.

We are leaving Imazeki an unsightly, messy desk. But we're sure he'll clean it up.

CALDWELL FSA CAMP-- In my first report Tuesday I tried to paint a gloomy picture of tough work in the beet fields. I don't think I have over-emphasized the picture enough to show the toughness of the work here for green-horns like myself who almost went down with fatigue after three days of work in the field.

However, that is one side of the picture. After resting for several days I went back to work on another contract with a crew made up of those who thought not much of the money but going slow and make enough to pay for the room and board and have some on the side to buy some candy and toys for the kids back in Tule Lake. I was somewhat surprised to see how well I could stand the work now. At the end of the first day on the new contract I had enough strength left in me to appreciate the beauty of snow on the surrounding mountains and the golden sunset. I even smiled to myself as I whistled a tune from "Mary Had A Little Lamb" on our way back home in the farmer's broken-down 1931 Plymouth sedan.

This seems to be the common experience of many of us evacuee workers here. They say the first three days are the toughest. From the second week on the work becomes much easier. It takes about a month to really break in your body to earn seven to ten dollars a day without a great deal of difficulty, so much so that you may even want to go out to town to take in a show in the evening. This does not mean, however, that your hands and back stop aching. The work is hard and muscles do ache, but these will not kill you if you weren't born with a silver spoon in your mouth and kept chewing on the shi, and Aiko Suguro. The upperclassmen meeting was a luncheon affair at #6618-B with Mrs. Alta Schaaf, Cosma Sakamoto, and Harry Mayeda as speakers. is comparable to one third of the total enrollment.

If this should keep up as long as the weather remains cold not only the students, but also the school program will suffer stated the office. Unless the attendance of these students are kept up, the school will not receive state appropriations, it hopes to receive.

Teachers realize that the students living in "Alaska" have a long distance to walk and that many are not properly clothed. damn thing ever since.

It seems the composition of your crew has much to do with the difficulty of the beet work. Of necessity, the pulling, topping and loading of sugar beets must be done by a team of four, six, eight, or 12. The bigger the gang, the easier the work, I have found out. Now, some members of the crew may work fast and the others slow. Where there is a lack of understanding among the members of the crew before they go on a contract, it is apt to cause friction in the midst of the work: for, the fast ones begin to think they are "helping out" the slow ones to make the same amount of money the entire crew is making. It seems best, therefore, to make up a crew of about the same speed and strength. Or, have it understood by each member of the crew that there will be no squawking whether one goes fast or slow; that every one does his best and share in the total wages paid to the crew.

This year, the recruiting was done on a haphazard basis. I think the next year will be much better since the boys themselves have gained some knowledge as to the complicated system of farmer-contractor, farmer-sugar company, labor-sugar company, and farmer-evasee labor relations.

"A" LEAGUE BEGINS TITLE RACE SUNDAY

Tule Lake's top basketball players will go into action Sunday afternoon as the Class A league begins its season.

Sitting as pre-season favorites to cop the "A" title are the Sacramento Miks, who have already become the team to beat. But the question of the moment is whether any team can be too highly favored on an outdoor court when, with the wind whistling through the nets and the sun shining into the players' eyes, shooting becomes a game of chance and dribbling becomes an obstacle race.

But anyhow, the Miks are favored and they begin their season against the Placer-All Stars, an aggregation composed of players from the Newcastle Golden Raiders and Penryn Green Devils. Golden Raiders and the Green Devils were deadly rivals before coming here, but they combined their squads to enter the league.

JUNIOR TEAMS PLAY TOMORROW

Opening round in the Junior Basketball League begins tomorrow with eight of the nine teams entered pairing off.

As yet the relative strength of the clubs are not known since many of the teams did not organize until they came here. But one thing that stands out is the fact that nearly all the squads are from California.

All games will start at 10 a.m.

NOTICE

Isleton-Bear football game scheduled for Sunday will be played tomorrow on field 2, near the library, starting at 2 p.m.

CLASS B BASKETBALL SCHEDULE WILL BE PUBLISHED TOMORROW.

Marysville's Crimson Tide, one of the powerful league contenders, meet the Eureka Clippers. Crimson Tide, with their famed "Peach Bowl twins", are expected to be in the thick of the battle for the championship.

Outside the Tacoma Bussei whose players are all from the State of Washington, the only other non-California entry is the Question Mark, who is just exactly what their name implies. Their roster includes players from both Washington and Oregon and although they have played some fine practice games the question is whether they can stand up to the high class competition. The yet unknown Golden Bears is the Marks first opponent.

Since the Loomis Red Lions dropped from the league, the Tacoma Bussei will play the Sacramento Wakabas.
