

THE ALLIED OFFENSIVE IN THE PACIFIC

THE most important fact about the operations in the Solomon Islands is that United States forces are engaged in an offensive operation. The battles of Midway and Coral Sea, as the navy admitted at the time, were defensive victories. In the Solomons American forces are having their first try at one of the most difficult of military operations--the landing of sea-borne troops and the setting up and maintaining of bases for further operations. Any such operation involves heavy risks, and the certainty of considerable losses.

BUT the value of the attack on Tulagi does not lie entirely in the fact that it marks the beginning of an offensive in the Pacific area. In addition to opening the way for further action against Japanese bases in the New Guinea area, it offers needed protection for the United States supply line to Australia. Ever since the Japanese landed troops on New Guinea and New Britain last January, they have moved gradually south and east, creeping ever closer to Port Moresby and to the Australia-United States shipping lanes. Bases were established at Lae, Salamaua and other points on New Guinea, and at Rabaul on New Britain. These and other bases were attacked by American planes as part of the offensive operation.

THE American drive to establish centers on Guadalcanal Island was based on evidence that the enemy was constructing air fields there. Only a few of the Solomon Islands (page 4, col. 1, please)

With 450 laborers, Tule Lake farm's 2500 acres of black alluvial soil are being tilled to raise various vegetables as "victory food" for the Colony and other relocation centers.

Although the Colony dining halls are supplied with nappa and mustard greens at present by the local farm, the next week will find more vegetables from the farm on the table, such as: peas, spinach, turnips, and beets.

No part of the crop will be sold in the open market, according to the present schedule, but will be consumed here and the surpluses sold to other WRA centers.

The first frost is expected any time this week. The next frost will come after a pleasant period of beautiful Indian summer. Potatoes are the first to be hit by the cold weather, while carrots, cabbages, turnips and rutabagas will survive the longest.

Five thousand acres of cultivation is being anticipated next year, while 32,000 acres of farming is the total acreage expected for the local project.

"W.R.A. is not a research agency," declared E.L. Utz, chief of agricultural production from Washington, before a meeting of technical staff last week. "What we are interested in is good production at reasonable cost," he said emphasizing the cost on the basis of yield.

Time: 7 to 9 p. m.

While playing under the barrack at #5111, three youngsters unearthed a human skeleton Sunday morning.

Tom Yogo, Jr. #5104-A, Earnest Nomura, #5111-F, and Bill Nakata, #5113-A, were digging a hole under the barrack. A shiny object was uncovered. Thinking it to be a rock, one of the boys picked up the object only to find that he was holding a human skull in his hand.

Terrified, the youngsters crawled out from under the barrack. Curiosity overcame their fear and they returned for further excavation.

More bones were uncovered. These were put inside a carton box and taken to Louis Oki, #51 block manager. He immediately telephoned authorities.

When interviewed by the reporter, the youngsters wanted to know if they were to be rewarded for discovering the skeleton.

"If there's no reward, we ain't gonna dig for anymore," said little Tom Yogo, Jr. "There's some more buried too," he added.

To support his contention he pointed to bits of bones scattered about the ground.

Earnest wanted to know what the authorities were going to do with the bones. When told that the skeletons were to be reconstructed, he said, "You mean they're gonna bring him back to life? You mean they're gonna put the meat back on his bones?"

The block manager has issued instruction prohibiting further digging as there is danger of undermining the barrack foundation.

WARDEN IS A POET:

KEN YASUDA LISTED IN POETS' "WHO'S WHO"

Ken Yasuda, #5115-B, and formerly of Los Angeles and Seattle is a very extra-ordinary WRA warden.

Yasuda, who matriculated at the University of Southern California and was more lately a senior literature major at the University of Washington volunteered for his present job to kill two birds with one stone. The literary inclined warden whose name appears under the pen name of Ken Bysen in "WHO'S WHO IN AMERICAN POETRY" (1939-41) finds time from his policing duties to compose poems and do other writing.

The nisei poet was at first an assistant teacher of English Poetry here, but this position gave him little time for his real work so he resigned. He then applied for farm labor but was rejected on the grounds that he was not officially terminated from his first job. His next step was volunteer duty and Yasuda chose the wardens.

At the present time Yasuda is writing a book on "AESTHETIC ANALYSIS OF JAPANESE POETRY" and it is sub-titled "How Japanese Poetry is Possible in English". Prior to the outbreak of the war Yasuda was collaborating with Dr. Lawrence L. Gillman, Professor of English at the University of Washington and well-known author of several books on Keats and a new book on poetry.

AFTER the Coral Sea battle the Japanese announced that the American fleet was now incapable of offensive action. After the Midway battle we were told that our fleet was annihilated, and after the landings on the Aleutians the Japanese boasted that we could not even protect our Pacific Coast. Now we are being told all over again that nothing remains of the American navy.

With the entry of Bellevue, Marysville, Has Beens, and Hood River the new Tule Lake Hardball League now has nine teams entered.

Has Beens started their season Sunday against Bellevue and came out on the short end of an 8-7 score.

GIRLS' ALLSTAR TEAMS TO PLAY LABOR DAY

An all-star game between the two girls' leagues will feature the Labor Day athletic program.

Both all-star teams will be chosen by the all opponent method. Every girls' team is requested to make a selected team composed of members of opposing teams in their respective leagues. Players with the largest numbers of votes will represent their leagues.

Team managers in both the Western and the Tri-State loops are asked to hand in their selections to Flo Kato at 1808 as soon as possible.

Married women will come into their own on Labor Day when the matron contingents of California and the Northwest will oppose each other.

All attached women are asked to sign up at 1808 at once.
