

WATER PURE HERE, ANALYSIS SHOWS

"FINDINGS: This water conforms to accepted bacteriological standards of purity for drinking purpose."

This was the report issued this week regarding the Tule Lake Project water after it was sampled and tested by Lloyd Sealey, county sanitarian, and Dr. P. H. Rozendal, Klamath county health officer. Four samples were taken both from well source and from taps in the Project for analysis before the above findings were announced.

DON'T QUIT YOUR SECOND WAGER WORK TOO SOON CHECKS TODAY

Office of administrative division, with Gilbert L. Niesso as Chief, is reported facing considerable trouble because enlistees have transferred from one division to another without securing a termination notice. Niesso cautioned the enlistees not to go to work for a different division until they have been officially terminated by their former division.

Cigars are being passed out in Block 44 but circulation is limited to columns of Mr. Joe Kubo—the jubilant father of a bouncing 8 pounds baby girl. The stork had arrived at the Orville County Hospital and current reports indicate that both the mother and the child are doing well. They were formerly residents of Palermo, Calif.

WHAT IS CO-OPERATIVE? START EDUCATION SERIES

In view of the mounting interest in the cooperative movement in Tule Lake, the Tulean Dispatch will publish a series of educational articles, in the form of Questions and Answers, to help the colonists better acquaint themselves with the theoretical and historical background of this movement. The knowledge thus gained will aid the colonists in their appreciation of the practical phase of the cooperatives now being planned here. The first of the series follows:

Q. What is a cooperative? A. A cooperative is principally a business enterprise whose objective is service and not profit. To some, it is an instrument for social reform.

Q. What does cooperative mean? A. It comes from a Roman word "working together": teamwork.

Q. Why should I, as a Tule Lake resident, be interested in cooperatives? A. Because it is a business enterprise in which a group of people work together, its principle motive being service and not profit. The implication is obvious.

Q. What types of cooperatives are there? A. There are marketing, producers, and consumers cooperatives.

Q. What kind is a consumers cooperative? A. Here the members share in the ownership and control of any property which is doing service for consumers such as the Community Store.

Q. How old is the movement? A. It is as old as government, but the principles of formalized cooperatives now in operation originated in Rochdale, England, in 1844.

DR. CHAPMAN GIVES TALK IN JAPANESE

Although the present circumstances for the Japanese people in the Project may be adverse in many ways, they should continue to pray for a better life-for prayers can do many things that seem impossible to human thinking.

That was the gist of sermons delivered to the colonists Saturday night and Sunday morning by Dr. Gordon Chapman, secretary of the Protestant Wartime Commission from San Francisco. He speaks Japanese fluently having been in Kobe, Japan for many years.

SMITH ASSURES CO-OP CANTEENS

The actual management of the Community Stores in the Project under a cooperative organization was assured by Kendall Smith, Chief of Community Enterprises, as soon as this organization is properly chartered under the corporate laws of California.

Don Elberson will meet with cooperative movement leaders Wednesday night.

DISPATCH CIRCULATION OVER 3000

With twelve newspaper addicts on the staff, The Tulean Dispatch now appears daily in this community. Starting out as a crude one sheet it had grown to a neat twice a week six pager with a circulation of over 3000 and is now being exporimented on as a two page daily.

It is interesting to note the facts and figures involved in the output of the paper. For each week a total of 12 stencils, 16 cans of ink, and 40 reams of paper are used; which, with few incidentals, would cost the government about $60 in round figure. At present two mimeographs are in use.

Thrown together with the Recreation Department, "Tempo", social workers, selective service, legal advisors, sign makers, etc., there's never a dull moment in the populous Dispatch office.

Frank Tanabe, editor, is daily seen at #1808 either posting assignments or making lay-outs. Puffing away on his favorite pipe and critically analyzing the stories is Harvard Imazaki, the erstwhile city editor.

Running in and out of the building are the scooping reporters with their news. The technicians who turn the crank about 40,000 times per week adds true newspaper atmosphere to the place. These technicians also have the additional task of running the recreation bulletins as they are handed down to them.

Cutting stencils and typing dummies the typists of the staff add life to the newspaper as well as make the work interesting.

The Tulean Dispatch has a considerable circulation on the outside. These include sociologists interested in our affairs and treatment, university and private libraries, private individuals, army officials, other assembly and relocation centers. In fact the demand is so great, especially from those who are about to be moved to relocation areas, that it is impossible to fulfill with the present staff and under the present conditions. It is the hope of the staff to have a four to six page daily, well coordinated, under a competent staff.
