Volunteers Needed Or Shipment Of Freight May Be Delayed Indefinitely

Packing personal effects and loading them on the trains at the Tent Factory is an enormous job. Several requests for colonists to assist in this undertaking have been made with very little response. If it is important for colonists to have their luggage arrive at their new project as soon as possible, they are urged to assist in this undertaking. The early arrival of these goods will add materially to the comfort and well being of those to whom they belong.

All colonists know the day on which their personal effects are being boxed and shipped. It is up to the able bodied male members of each family to volunteer their services in packing and loading their goods on the trains.

Volunteers are urged to report to the office of the Tent Factory on the day their personal effects are packed for shipment. They will not only see with what care their goods are being packed and shipped, but they may also expedite the shipment of their own goods. If they are busy during the day, volunteers should report in the evening for an hour or two.

Unless volunteers respond to this call, shipment of personal effects may be delayed indefinitely.

It is to the colonists' own interest to see that his goods are shipped at the earliest possible date.

(The following editorial is reprinted from the August 28th issue of the Chicago Sun.--Ed.)

At last a member of the Dies committee, Representative Eberharter of Pennsylvania, has challenged the irresponsible attacks of the majority of the War Relocation Administration's handling of Japanese-Americans.

No government agency has faced a more difficult task than WRA. Some Japanese moved from the West Coast were dangerous aliens, but tens of thousands were American citizens, devoted to democracy and having no allegiance to Japan's emperor. The emotional fury burning against them was intensified in the West by the economic motives of Anglo-Saxons who wanted to get rid of competition.

The head of the Dies subcommittee, Representative Costello, is a Californian, whose personal political fortunes are tied to California's prejudices. The majority report cried horrendous charges against WRA, hinting that inmates of relocation camps were pampered and charging that WRA had released subversives.

Mr. Eberharter has the courage to dissent and to cite facts to counter the majority's generalizations. He listed food costs at the relocation centers at only 40 cents per person per day. He pointed out that not a single report of disloyalty or subversive activity had been filed against the 16,000 individuals released. He showed some concern for constitutional principles in dealing with persons who, whatever their ancestry, are citizens of this republic. He sharply attacked "unfair criticism" of WRA which ignored the truth.

This is something unknown on the Dies committee since Congressman Voorhis resigned the fight. If Mr. Eberharter keeps up the good work, it will be less easy for the Dies committee majority to make political capital by irresponsible procedures and loose charges.
