

Evacuees Warned Against Use of Explosives

Evacuees on leave are cautioned by WRA against violating federal regulations regarding the possession and use of explosives. The Federal Explosive Act, approved December 26, 1941, provides that no person shall possess, purchase, accept, receive, acquire, or use explosives unless licensed by the director of the Bureau of Mines. The Bureau of Mines will not grant a license to any alien of enemy nationality in the United States or to any person of Japanese ancestry within the Western Defense Command because such persons are prohibited by federal proclamations from using explosives. It will also not issue licenses to companies allowing the unauthorized use of explosives by persons in the two restricted groups.

It has been called to the attention of WRA by explosives inspectors of the Bureau of Mines that there have been innocent violations of these regulations on the part of evacuees employed in work such as mining or excavating. So that further violations will not occur, relocation officers and project directors have been asked by WRA to notify prospective employers of evacuee labor and evacuees themselves of the existence of the regulations.
