U.S. NAVAL AIR STATION

IWAKUNI JAPAN

WELCOME ABOARD!!!

This booklet has been prepared for you, the newcomer to Naval Air Station Iwakuni. It is hoped that by glancing through these pages you will find the necessary information to make your tour here a pleasant one.

This booklet does not set forth effective rules and regulations of the station which may be found instead in the regulations, instructions and notices published by the various commands on the station.

Our station is a comparatively young one, having been commissioned 1 October 1954 and we are in the process of rapid growth. We hope that you find duty here to your liking and that you, too, will grow with us in knowledge and success in the days ahead.

W. E. Premo, Jr.
Captain, U. S. Navy
Commanding Officer

THE PAST--AND THE PRESENT

Before making that first, get-acquainted tour around the base maybe you would be interested in knowing something of its history—from the date it was first created from reclaimed land in 1936 by the Japanese Government until the present time.

Originally constructed as a Naval Air Training Ground the base augmented the Japanese Naval Academy on the island of Eta Jima, just a few miles to the northeast of Iwakuni. However, during the latter part of World War II it became a base for Kamikaze planes engaged in the air defense of the Japanese home islands.

Following the end of the war the station became the home of units of the Royal Australian Air Force in March 1948. These units were reduced to just one squadron, No. 77, toward the end of the Occupation days, but when the Korean War broke out in 1950 groups from the Royal Navy and the United States Air Force were sent to Iwakuni by the United Nations as "reinforcements."

Squadron 77 became known in RAAF circles as "The Squadron Which Has Never Been Home" because it had remained in Japan throughout the Occupation after participating in the Pacific Theater during World War II. Flying their Gloster Meteor jets daily in support of UN ground forces in Korea, "77" pilots returned to Iwakuni's "strip" each evening to refuel and rearm.

The station was placed under the control of the 6418th Air Depot Wing, USAF on 1 April 1952, a group that later became known as Det. #1, 75th Air Depot Wing. During the Korean War many thousands of military personnel enroute to Korea from Japan passed through the processing center here, earning Iwakuni the title of "Gateway to Korea."

The 75th ADW and its Maintenance Group provided base and aircraft support for other USAF groups in Japan, Okinawa, Guam and parts of the Philippines. While the Depot Wing maintained the accounting responsibility for these units the maintenance section performed thousands of major and intermediate checks on practically all types of aircraft.

Small though it was, the base played a major role in the support of frontline forces in Korea.

So it was with a great deal of pride that the United States

Navy assumed command October 1st, 1954—just two and one half years to the day after the Air Force had accepted control of the station from the RAAF.

Today the new air station looks to the future with high hopes of greater achievements. The Marines, as well as the Navy, will play an important part in making this station one of the most important of its kind in the Pacific.

WHO'S WHO

In addition to the usual departments and divisions applicable to any Naval Air Station, Iwakuni is the home of the Commander Fleet Air Wing SIX and the permanent headquarters of Fleet Air Service Squadron 120. Also aboard for temporary stretches of duty are land-based and seaplane patrol squadrons and a detachment of the Seabees' Construction Battalion Mobile Unit 101.

The Naval Air Station group itself is composed of nine departments: Administration, Communications, Operations, Supply, Security, Medical, Dental, Public Works and Industrial Relations.

The ADMINISTRATION DEPARTMENT includes the Administration Division itself, Personnel, Education, Public Information, Legal, the clubs and BOQ, Special Services and the Master-at-Arms Force. The department is charged with the organization, preparation and control of reports, correspondence, files, records and intelligence. It also performs such other functions as personnel utilization and personnel welfare in areas of assignment, berthing, education and recreation.

COMMUNICATIONS, sometimes dubbed "the Voice of Command," serves the station by handling classified and unclassified messages, provides telephone service, maintains ground electronics material and operates the station postoffice.

The PUBLIC WORKS DEPARTMENT, through the use of appropriated funds, performs many functions which include the building and maintenance of all structures on the station, construction of all roads, grounds, aircraft landing and parking facilities, and the assignment and maintenance of vehicles in the transportation division.

Included in the department are the typewriter repair section, electric shop, plumbing, carpenter, paint and sheet metal shops; dependent housing supply, the refrigeration, welding and machine shops, utilities and sanitation section, property control and engineering and designing section.

The MEDICAL DEPARTMENT in the U.S. Naval Infirmary provides a daily sick call from 0800—0900 for all Navy and Marine personnel and In-patient hospitalization for all military and dependent personnel when needed. Sick call for dependents is held twice weekly at 1300 on Mondays and Thursdays. Physical exams are also provided upon request; personnel desiring examinations should make appointments by phone (Ext. 566) at least ten days prior to examination. Emergency treatment is available at all times.

The DENTAL DEPARTMENT provides complete dental care and treatment for all station military personnel and emergency care for their dependents. Military sick calls are held daily from 0800—0815 and dependents' sick call is from 1300—1315 each Friday. Emergencies are treated promptly at all times. Examinations for appointments must be made during sick call hours; additional information may be obtained by phoning Ext. 618 and 503.

The OPERATIONS DEPARTMENT is composed of six divisions which perform the following functions:

(1) AEROLOGY provides weather information and other closely related services for naval operating forces in the area.

(2) BOAT Division maintains and operates all types of personnel, rescue and utility craft and operates the seadrome.

(3) ORDNANCE provides, stores and issues aviation munitions in support of fleet units and maintains an approved list of Special Mobile Ordnance equipment.

(4) The PHOTO section operates and maintains a photographic laboratory which provides photo and processing services as needed for both local and fleet units.

(5) FLIGHT Division provides an air traffic control branch to control air traffic; enforces air traffic and aviation safety rules, maintains an aviation training branch and the records and data concerned with attached personnel and schedules assigned aircraft.

(6) MAINTENANCE Division performs repair and maintenance functions on aircraft assigned permanently to the station.

The SUPPLY DEPARTMENT on board provides secondary supply and storage support for aviation fleet units as well as furnishing logistics support for activities permanently assigned locally. It handles both aviation and general stores and maintains the Clothing & Small Stores Division, Disbursing Office, Commissary Division, Commissary Store and Navy Exchange.

The SECURITY DEPARTMENT is mainly charged with the function of such services which tend to preserve the peace and protect the rights of persons and property. The Department includes the Police, Fire and Shore Patrol Divisions which, in turn, provide such specific branches and offices as the Investigation Branch, Interior Branch, Perimeter Branch, Pass & Registration Office and Armory Branch.

The INDUSTRIAL RELATIONS DEPARTMENT administers the station indigenous civilian personnel program; administers the station Department of the Navy civilian program; and insures prompt reimbursement of the Japanese government for expenses incurred in the administration of the Master Labor Contract in the Iwakuni area.

Turning briefly to the other commands on the station we find FLEET AIR WING SIX whose mission is to conduct Naval air operations, including anti-submarine warfare, search & reconnaissance, aerial mining, rescue and other operations as may be assigned by higher authority. The Wing, acting as a watchful sentinel over the Far East, engages in direct support of United Nations' activities in Korea, Japan and adjacent areas.

The Commander Fleet Air Wing Six, permanently based at Iwakuni, has administrative and operational control of the patrol squadrons and tenders assigned to the station and operational control of the service squadrons and United Nations' units when operating.

FLEET AIR SERVICE SQUADRON 120 also is permanently assigned aboard for support of fleet aircraft. This group provides specialized maintenance and shop facilities, receipts and prepares carrier-type aircraft for transfer, stocks salvage materials on a ready-issue basis, coordinates logistics matters and supervises the fleet section of the NAS enlisted barracks.

Shortly after the Navy assumed command of the station in October of 1954 components of the First Marine Aircraft Wing began arriving from Itami Air Force Base to take up residence locally. Included in the group were Marine Aircraft Repair Squadron 17, Marine Air Base Squadron 17, Headquarters and Headquarters Squadron 17, Marine Transport Squadron 253 and Marine Transport Squadron 152.

Like all of the Marine activities on board, MARINE AIRCRAFT REPAIR SQUADRON 17 is a major unit of Marine Wing Service Group 17 of the First Marine Air Wing. Its primary function is to provide and operate Class B aircraft repair facilities in support of the Wing.

MARINE AIR BASE SQUADRON 17 provides facilities and services for locally-based Marine personnel including food service, base maintenance, communications station security, transportation, air traffic control, materiel and property, medical and dental, chaplain's service, crash crews and special services.

MARINE TRANSPORT SQUADRON 253 provides airlift and air supply for units of the Fleet Marine Force in amphibious operations. The squadron also has a secondary mission of providing air transport service for Marine Corps and Navy units when such service is unavailable through normal air transport facilities.

The mission of HEADQUARTERS & HEADQUARTERS SQUADRON is to provide administrative support for the Headquarters, Marine Wing Service Group 17 and for the First Marine Air Wing as required.

GEOGRAPHICALLY SPEAKING

If you like to travel or are photographically inclined, then you've come to the right place. Located some 400 air miles southwest of Tokyo, Iwakuni is ideally located for leave travel and weekend excursions on three of the four major Japanese Islands: Honshu, Kyushu and Shikoku.

Some of Japan's finest scenery and vacation country lies within the easy range of Iwakuni personnel. A one-hour train ride takes you to Hiroshima, historically interesting as the site of the world's first atomic blast; two hours by train will land you in Kure, former Japanese naval base and present headquarters of the British Commonwealth Forces in Japan; or if you're a sailor who likes to sneak in a little extra sea-duty while travelling, then perhaps you'd enjoy a short boat-trip across from the mainland to Miyajima, site of the famous Itsukushima Shrine Torii, considered one of the three most beautiful landmarks in Japan.

Or maybe you'd prefer a longer voyage such as the one offered each evening on the overnight boat run to Beppu on Northern Kyushu, site of one of Nippon's most frequented hot-spring spas.

Tokyo, Yokohama, Nikko and other renowned places of interest are a bit too far from Iwakuni to be reached by the weekend excursionist but provide excellent possibilities to local personnel on leave and are easily accessible by rail or air. Another outstanding possibility is the British Crown Colony of Hong Kong which is an authorized liberty port to U. S. military personnel and which may usually be reached through military ship or flight transportation.

All of the above suggestions are worthwhile and are available to the person willing to take just a little time and effort to see them. Quite often the cost of transportation and hotel lodging is almost negligible, and in many spots throughout Japan the Army's Special Service section has provided excellent hotels which are available to both officers and enlisted men.

And don't forget to take along that new American or Japanese camera; you'll find that it will see plenty of action!

AFTER-HOURS ACTIVITIES

Though most new personnel in Japan like to spend as much free time as possible off the station taking in the strange wonders of a foreign country, it isn't always necessary to leave the NAS to have a good time.

A number of Special Services facilities and activities of interest to almost all military personnel and their dependents are available on board each day. There is a theater, library and a hobby shop, and for those who enjoy athletics the station offers a gymnasium with a variety of equipment, a swimming pool, tennis courts and a golf course.

The EM Club, CPO Club and the Officers' Club also are available and beckon to those who prefer a little special entertainment or a good meal.

New facilities for added spare-time enjoyment are in the offing and will be available in the near future.

Here are the schedules of base entertainment activities:

Weekly entertainment features include a combo band on Monday nights, Tuesday night Bingo, a dance band each Wednesday, Hillbilly Jamboree nights on Thursdays and Saturdays, Friday night floor show entertainment and afternoon and evening dancing each Sunday.
