Dearest Kei: - Yesterday was the Father's Day and we all missed you ever so much and thought of you so hard but we did not speak much. On last year's Father's Day little Kiyo asked me if we could all be together on this year's Father's Day so I told her to pray to Jesus our God, but for some reason He did not hear our prayers. It was another lonely Father's Day.

Yesterday in the midst of play with her play-mates, Kiyo began sobbing and wept for sometime. This morning as I was combing her hair, she said "Oh, I wish daddy was here with us."

Kei, I am now beginning to feel that it does not matter where we be put together, either at WRA center or at the family camp, just so we can have our family reunion. Children want to be with daddy so much. I don't think there is much difference where we are and besides you will not be happy here. In Texas or in N. Mexico, climate is warmer and is suitable for us, while winter in Idaho is very cold. One thing I am worried about you is your heart-trouble. How do you feel now at where you are, the altitude is so high and I am worried about your heart all the time.

I was looking for your letter this morning but did not come. Hope this will find you well, and write us soon. Love, Mom.
