Nine Japanese Americans Die In Utah Highway Tragedy, Worst in State's History

Nine Japanese Americans, five of them children, were laid to rest in Salt Lake City Cemetery in a mass funeral Thursday of this week as the aftermath to the worst auto accident in Utah history.

The crash, which occurred Saturday, Aug 2, took eight lives as a dump truck loaded with 12 tons of sand hit a car driven by Mrs. Masako Yano Imada, 32. Death of the ninth passenger, Gene Imada, 8, followed at 4:45 p.m., six hours after the accident.

The tragedy, which took members of four separate families, came at 10:35 in the morning at Nisei Soldier an intersection in Union, a farming community in south Salt Lake Escapes Death Country.

Joint funeral services for the nine accident victims were held in West High School Auditorium in Salt Lake on Aug. 7. Fifty-four pallbearers carried the nine caskets.

Services were read by the Rev. Tosuke Ota, pastor, Japanese Christian Church, and the Rev. C. H. Terakawa, pastor of the Intermountain Buddhist Church.

The Imadas' third son, Gene, died at Salt Lake General Hospital without regaining consciousness. Hospital authorities administered blood transfusions and gave him oxygen through a catheter, a tube inserted in the nostril, in an effort to save his life. He had a concussion and multiple limb fractures.

The trucker, Charles Emory Briggs, Salt Lake City, was shaken and shocked, but otherwise uninjured.

The sand-laden truck collided with the automobile near the middle of the intersection and carried it for 120 feet beneath its wheels. impact ripped the interior from the late-model can and carried several of the occupants out onto the highway.

A temporary morgue was set up at the hospital for the bodies. Paul M. Mazuran, Salt Lake deputy sheriff, said it was "the worst accident I've ever seen." Deputy Mazuran said it looked as though someone had "shot the insides out of the automobile.

President Inagaki Announces National JACL Program to Aid Naturalization for Issei Group

LOS ANGELES-A JACL program of naturalization assistance to aid Issei in obtaining American citizenship was announced by George Inagaki, National JACL president, in a statement this

In his statement, Inagaki called attention to the JACL-ADC's success in working for passage of the law as being attributable to the joint effort of Issei and Nisei in a common endeavor.

Inagaki pointed to the "stop gap" achievements of the JACL made necessary by Issei ineligibilfor citzenship and indicated JACL's continuing concern in the naturalization of Issei, assuring the fullest cooperation and assistance of the JACL to facilitate this process.

SATURDAY, AUGUST 9, 1952

The complete text of Inagak's statement follows:

"The elimination of Issei ineligibility for citizenship, a major objective of the JACL as expressed by its 1946 National Convention in Denver, has been achieved due to the vigorous and unrelenting leadership of the JACL and its legislative arm, the JACL Anti-Discrimination Committee, and its National Legislative Director, Mike Masaoka.

"With the cooperative effort and resources of JACL chapters and offices throughout the country and the consistent support of thousands of appreciative Issei, Mike Masaoka has fulfilled this objective. In so doing, the Issei's dream of decades and the hopes of Nisei GI's who gave their lives to attain equality of status for their parents have been realized.

"'Stop gap' remedies made necessary by the ineligibility status of the Issei, required the JACL to work for piece-meal solutions, such as the enactment of legislation to stay the deportation of hundreds of Issei and the amendment of the Soldier Bride Act, United States Supreme Court victories in cases involving Issei commercial fishermen and the California Alien Land Law, and other representations to Congress, the courts and govern-their need for assistance in the naturalization program. JACL's continuing concern for the facilitating of their naturalization is expressed in the following national JACL program to be undertaken immediately:

"1. Publicize information as to official interpretations of the recently enacted Omnibus Bill on Immigration and Naturalization, specifically as it relates to provisions affecting persons of Japanese ancestry.

"2. A positive program of naturalization assistance by the regional offices and local chapters. This will include the organizing of citizenship classes in Japanese communities wherever possible.

"3. A citizenship manual in the Japanese language, based upon official interpretations and proced-ures outlined by the Department of Justice and its Immigration and Naturalization Service will be published by the JACL to assist the preparation by the Issei for citizenship. (The JACL will seek clarification from the Department of Justice as to the possibility of naturalization examinations for the Issei being given in the Japanese language.)

"4. Planning of a 'Naturalization Day,' as recommended by the National JACL Planning Committee, to promote and encourage the largest possible number of Issei throughout the United States to take the oath of American citizen-ship on this particular day." It was learned that the JACL-

ADC's long struggle to emancipate the resident Japanese from the stigma of ineligibility and unde-sirability would be chronicled in a JACL publication in the near

Shibata said the total legal expenses in connection with the Masaoka test case from Dec., 1949 to July, 1952 were $520.88. Attorneys in the case, all of whom contributed their services, were Guy C. Calden, A. L. Wirin, James C. Purcell, Loren Miller and Saburo

"All of the lawyers contributed their services without compensation because of their interest in the welfare of Japanese Americans, also because of their conviction that the Alien Land Law constituted statutory discrimination against persons of Japanese ancestry in California," Shibata said.

The Fujii case involved connection with the successful completion of the Masaoka Alien Land Law test case were reported here this week in a report from Yoshimi Shibata, chairman of the Northern California Civil Rights Defense Union, on behalf of the five organizations which cooperated in the panese ancestry under the law.

Those who supported the test of the law in the Masaoka case believed that the effect of the Alien Land Act on American citizens of Japanese descent would present the picture of discrimination more clearly, Mr. Shibata declared.

In a ruling by Superior Judge Thurmond Clarke in the Masaoka case, the Alien Land Act was ruled unconstitutional and in violation of the Fourteenth Amendment to the U.S. Constitution.

The State Supreme Court of California, in a 4 to 3 decision, also ruled the Alien Land Act invalid when Judge Clarke's decision was appealed by the State of California. The State Supreme Court verdict was handed down on July 9, 1952.

JACL Recommendations Given Evacuation Claims Division on Future Indemnification Policies

WASHINGTON, D. C. - Resolutions of the 1952 National JACL Council on the future development of the evacuation claims program were presented to the Department of Justice officials, heading the Evacuation Claims Division, by Edward J. Ennis, legal counsel of the JACL ADC, Mike Masaoka, former national JACL ADC legislative director, and Richard Akagi of the Washington office of the JACL ADC.

First of the issues, named by the National JACL Council as legislative objectives of the Washington office, to be presented to the Justice Department officials was the necessity of securing supplemental appropriations for the awards already made by the Evacuation Claims Division under the compromise settlement formula.

The sum of $12,500,000 appropriated in the closing weeks of the 82nd Congress for the payment of awards of these compromised claims has been completely expended.

There is at the moment more than $4,000,000 outstanding in awards, which cannot be paid because of lack of funds, the JACL ADC representatives were told.

JACL ADC representatives indicated to the Justice Department officials that the Washington JACL ADC office, in accordance with the National Council directives, would work to get the neccessary apropriations to meet the remainder of the awards made under the compromise formula just as soon as the new session of Congress convenes in January, 1953.

Pressing for the other objectives mandated by the National JACL Council at the 1952 National Convention in San Francisco, Masaoka urged that "internees" be compensated for the losses they suffered since such losses would not have occurred except for the total evacuation of persons of Japanese ancestry from the west coast in 1942.

Ennis argued that "as a matter of economic fact, the losses sustained by the Japanese internees stemmed directly from the evac-uation, and not from their intern-

JACL ADC representatives pointed out that German and Italian internees suffered no such losses because persons of German and Italian origin were not uprooted from their homes and places of business.

The JACL ADC representatives also urged that the Department of Justice make a favorable determination on "corporate" claims filed by apanese corporations, which in-clude Buddhist and Christian

The fire had devoured some $50,000 worth of equipment in the kitchen and bar-everything from huge walk-in refrigerators to pep-per shakers. There wasn't even a match left to start another fire, and the main dining room was soot-covered and water-logged.

That's when the mess sergeant in Joe Itagaki came out again.

The ex-sergeant drew back on his experiences in feeding the Nisei GIs of the 442nd and cleared a spot in the kitchen, set up a homemade wood-burning broiler, army-style, and three days later he started serving the customers again.

Ennis, Masaoka and Akagi met with Herve L'Heureux, chief of State Department visa division, and Robert Alexander, assistant of the visa division.

Although the new Immigration and Nationality Act does not go into effect until Dec. 24, 1952, the Washington office of the JACL ADC declared that to avoid deluging American consular officers with last minute applications and to insure an orderly flow of immigrants into the United States, Japanese applicants for immigration visas should begin immediately to register at the consular offices to be placed on the quota

The Washington office of the JACL ADC stated that under the new Immigration and Nationality Act, applicants for immigration visas will be reated on a "first come, first served" basis.

Since the applications will be handled in a chronological order, those who are registered earliest with the American consular offi-cers stand the best chance of being placed on the first quota lists, said the Washington office of the JACL ADC.

It is quite possible, said the State Department officials, that the Japanese government will establish a similar type of screening process before issuing passports to Japanese immigrants.

Since the State Department and its consular officers will be working with a completely new set of regulations and a new law, both the Department and its representatives will need time to adjust themselves to these operational procedures, stated the Washington JACL ADC office.

It would be well, therefore said the Washington office of the JACL ADC, for the Japanese naoffice of the tion as desiring to enter the United States to register early with the American consular officers to facilitate handling of the applications.

Also, in response to numerous requests for copies of the new Immigration and Nationality Act, Washington JACL ADC office stated that persons interested can obtain them in the following way: write to the Government Printing Office, Washington 25, D.C., and ask for copies of Public Law 414 (which is the new Immigration and Nationality Law 414) costs 30 cents.

Restoration of Liquor Permit

LOS ANGELES-Immediate re. toration of the off-sale general liquor license of a Nisei war reeran was ordered on Aug. 1 h eran was ordered on Aug. 1 of Superior Judge Frank G. Swa who scored the "abuse of discotion" of the State Board of Equa ization in suspending the permit in Jan., 1952.

Toshikuni Taenaka, 34, the li censee, is the operator of a market and liquor shop in a suburbands trict of Los Angeles. His lique sale license, originally suspend in 1942 on grounds that the holder was of Japanese ancestry, was to instated in Nov, 1951, after the California legislature passed a amendment to the Alcoholic Bever age Control Act to restore license to persons of Japanese ancestry who lost their permits after the outbreak of war.

Two months later the State Board of Equalization ordered Taenaka's license suspended of grounds that a school and a church were within 400 feet of the prem ises.

Taenaka, a second lieutenant in the U.S Army intelligence come during World War II, took the is. sue to court when the board de nied him a local hearing and his petition for reconsideration was no jected in April.

Judge Swain pointed out in its ruling the school was in existence in the pre-war period when Taenaka had the liquor sale license and was operating at the same lo cation. He added the church building was moved into the neighborhood shortly before the protest hearing.

"We thus have the anomalous the board attempting situation of the board attempting to deny a license which has been granted," Judge Swain added.

Civic Unity's Ed Howden Starts Program on Racial Relations

SAN FRANCISCO - Intergroup relations news concerning Nisei will be included in the new week-ly radio program, "Dateline Freedom," which was inaugurated on Sunday, Aug. 3, at 10:15 p.m. over KCBS, San Francisco, in cooperation with the San Francisco Council for Civic Unity.

The program features Edward Howden, director of the San Francisco CCU, and will consist weekly of summary and analysis of the week's news in intergroup relations, with emphasis on problems and progress in securing to racial and religious minorities equality of rights and opportunities.

While news of Northern California will be featured, coverage will include significant events and issues around the nation, as well as

Mr. Howden indicated that the premise of "Dateline Freedom" is that the problems of ethnic minorities in America and around the world are high priority news to-day. He said this stems in part from increased sensitivity of most Americans to their remaining problems of racial and religious discrimination—and to the relation of those problems to the outcome of global competition with Commun is t movements aggressively propagandizing the "colored" peo-ples of the Far East, Africa and the Middle East.

Scheduled initially for a thirteenweek period, the program will continue indefinitely if listener interest warrants.

Assisting on the script will be Joanne Stern, CCU assistant direc-tor, and Earl Raab, writer and producer of the recent radio series, "Communism, a Critical Analysis."

Noting that news of Nisei in intergroup relations will be of par-ticular interest, Mr. Howden noted that the "Pacific Citizen is one of our key sources of news appropriate to this program."

ADC Reports No Cut in Japan's Immigration Quota Under Law

WASHINGTON, D. C .- The immigration quota for Japan is not cut, declared the Washington office of the JACL Anti-Discrimination Committee on Aug. 4, in answer to fears expressed from some quarters that the Japanese quota has been reduced by the number of persons who have been given permanent residence status through private bills and suspensions of deportation.

Japanese nationals will have available, as a result of JACL ADC representation, the full quota number of 185 when the new Immigration and Nationality Act comes into effect, stated the Washington Office of the JACL ADC.

After being strongly urged by the JACL ADC representatives, the State Department officials, charged with administering the immigration section of the new law, agreed that the immigration quota for Japan should not be cut by the number of Japanese persons given ad-ministrative and legislative relief through suspensions of deportation and private bills, said the Wash-ington JACL ADC Office.

This favorable interpretation was secured from the State Department officials by Edward J. Ennis, legal counsel of the JACL ADC, Mike Masaoka, former national JACL ADC legislative director, and Richard Akagi of the Washington JACL ADC Office, after the conference of these JACL ADC representa-tives with State Department Officials.

Under the law, each person granted permanent resident status through suspension of deportation or a private bill is charged to the quota of the country of his origin. There have been well over 2000 persons of Japanese ancestry, during the past six years, who have benefitted through suspensions of deportation and private bills.

Up to 50 percent of the annual quota can be reduced by the num ber of persons accorded this administrative and legislative relief.

If these more than 2000 Japanese,, who secured suspensions of deportation or came into the United States under private bills, were charged to the Japanese immigration quota, the Japanese quota would be reduced by 50 percent for the next quarter of a century.

This reduction of quota is known as "mortgaging."

The JACL ADC representatives argued that since Japan had no immigration quota in the past, it would be patently unfair and certainly not the intent of Congress to "mortgage" the newly authorized Japanese quota.

By securing from the State Department a favorable determination of the law, the JACL ADC assured Japan its full immigration quota number.

Earlier in Los Angeles, Edward J. Ennis, former general counse of the Immigration and Naturalization Service, in discussing this subject with Issei west coast leaders, expressed himself as fearing that the Japanese quota may be "mortgaged." Ennis' comments at the time were given wide circula-

Ennis this week said he was enormously pleased that the JACL ADC, contrary to his fears, was able to get from the State Department this highly favorable interpretation of the law, which will allow the Japanese immigration

The JACL ADC representatives also urged that the quota number of 100 be made available immediately to the Japanese as of December 24, 1952, the effective date of the Immigration and Nationality Act, although by Presidential Proclamation the officially allotted quotas are not scheduled to be available to the Japanese on December 24, 1952, as urged by the JACL ADC, instead of waiting until January 1, 1953, as stipulated by the Presidential Proclamation.

The reasoning advanced by the JACL ADC representatives, in requesting immediate availability of a quota number of 100 for Japan, was that prior to the enactment of the Immigration and Nationality Act of 1952 Japan was technically allocated a minimum quota of 100.

However, this immigration quota was of no practical use to the Japanese, since visas could be issued only to those who were eligible for naturalization. The Japanese up until the passage of the Bill were not eligible for naturalization. Therefore, this old quota of 100 could not be used by the passage. of 100 could not be used by the nationals of Japan.

With the removal of the racial ineligibility clause from the naturalization law, this quota of 100 now becomes immediately available to the Japanese. This availability extends only to December 31, 1952, and after that date the new quotas authorized by Presidential Proclamation go into effect.
The Washington JACL ADC

Office stated that it was extremely gratified with the results of the conference between its representa-tives and the State Department

Hawaii Moves Toward Statehood

Recognition of the JACL's role in obtaining passage of remedial legislation of benefit to persons of Japanese ancestry in the United States and Hawaii was given by Territorial Senator Thomas Okino of Hawaii in San Francisco last week.

"There are some back in Hawaii who are not willing to concede that the JACL should be credited with much of the favorable legislation enacted by the recent Congress, but I am proud of the record of the JACL," Sen. Okino said in an interview.

Sen. Okino, a member of the key credentials committee, was an active participant in the Democratic National Convention in Chicago recently. He was one of three Nisei leaders from Hawaii who comprised one-half of the territory's six-man delegation. The others were Rep. Mitsuyuki Kido of Honolulu and former Rep. Thomas Tagawa of Maui. The Hawaiian delegation took a firm stand in favor of clear-cut civil rights declaration throughout the convention.

Hawaii's primary objective, statehood, is now within the grasp of the territory's 500,000 residents. The star-spangled loyalty of Hawaii's population and the sacrifices of Hawaiian men in World War II and in the Korean conflict, in which the territory's casualty ratio is higher than any of the 48 states, have made statehood no longer a partisan political issue. Both the Democratic and Republican conventions called for "immediate statehood" for Hawaii.

When statehood becomes a reality, Hawaii will be represented in Congress by men who will not be afraid to fight on the side of full equality for all Americans, as Hawaii's delegations to the two poitical conventions already have proved.

Regarding Sen. Okino's recognition of the JACL's role in obtaining passage of favorable legislation for Japanese Americans, it should be noted that the JACL's work would not have been possible without the generous financial support which the people of Hawaii have given to the JACL and its Anti-Discrimination Committee. The passage of the omnibus immigration and naturalization bill, clearing/the way to citizenship for all resident aliens in Hawaii, removes the final argument advanced by opponents of statehood.

Hawaii Hails Performances Of Nisei in Olympic Games

By LAWRENCE NAKATSUKA

Honolulu, T. H.

NISEI NEWS OF THE WEEK IN HAWAII:

Honolulu newspapers gave columns of space to the spectacular performances of her swimmers at the Helsinki Olympics. Never before have the Islands received such a share of the international sports limelight as they did this past week. Hawaii has had Duke Kahanamoku, Bill Smith and Halo Hirose in Olympic competition before. But the triumphs of Hawaii's swimmers in this year's Olympics have eclipsed anything that has been achieved before.

The name that stands out is Ford Konno, the 19-year old Nisei whose record-breaking victory in the 1,500 meter race put the United States team ahead of the Russians for the first time, after the Americans had trailed from the

Konno, now a student at Ohio State University, had won second place in the 400 meters and swam in the winning 800 meters freestyle relay before he capped his performances with the 1,500 meter victory on the final day of the

Another Olympic champion was Yoshio Oyakawa, also of Ohio State. The Hawaii Nisei won the 100 meter backstroke title in the greatest race of his life. His triumph, although not as spectacular as Konno's, was more surprising because he had only recently risen to top-flight caliber.

Evelyn Kawamoto, the third Hawaii Nisei swimmer, placed third in the 400 meter freestyle and was a member of the U.S. meter freestyle relay team which finished third.

Ship Strike Ends

After more than two months, the West Coast shipping strike by AFL sailors has ended and ships are sailing normally to Hawaii again. Hawaii's Japanese merchants, along with the rest of the population, have suffered from this tie-up but not as much as the crippling Hawaii al Parks and the Grand Canyon. From California, Etsu and Mike will fly to Japan.

On their return to the States, Etsu and Mike will swing down through the southern sections of the country, Arizona, New Mexico, Texas, Louisiana and Mississippi, before coming back to Washington,

For Mike, the stateside portion of this trip will be a sentimental journey with a reverse twist.

He and Etsu will roll down the main streets of those places where he pleaded ten years ago to hostile and jittery crowds for acceptance of Nisei and Issei as Americans worthy of the rights and responsibilities possessed by other Amer-

There will be that farming com-

He will remember a sprawling midwestern city, the symbol of America's industrial might, where the cops manhandled him.

In all, there will be eight such towns. There will be eight such jails, in separate places, linked together in the memory of one man. But the climate has changed. Today the anxieties of 1942 are but dimly recalled. Much of that transformation of the American atmosphere of public opinion can be attributed to the unflagging devotion with which Etsu and Mike set out to secure for persons of Japanese ancestry equality in and under the law.

It's understandable why Etsu and Mike haven't had a vacation. We hope now that their phase of nires some doing. It just doesn't of this month. From Salt Lake the job is done that their phase of City, they propose to head for Los it easy. They've earned a good Angeles by way of Utah's Nation-

Air Carriers

Now that the Japanese merchant marine is roaming Pacific waters again, the air carriers of Japan are looking forward to spanning the ocean to the United Stattes.

Former U.S. Senator Chan Gurney of South Dakota stopped in Honolulu after negotiating a new aviation agreement between the American and Japanese government. Gurney, a member of the Civil Aeronautics Board, said the agreement would allow Japanese lines to fly over two routes to the One route would reach the United States via Alaska to a Seattle terminus and the other would cross the Central Pacific through Honolulu to San Francisco and perhaps to South America.

Japanese air line officials who recently visited Honolulu have said they hope to put planes in Pacific operation by October.

A career government official, with previous service in London, China and Japan, Kojima has made many friends among the Nisei in Hawaii and has displayed an understand-ing of the Nisei's place in an American community.

Confessions

A Honolulu newspaper has started publishing a series of "confession" articles by Alexander T. Sumida, self-styled "King of the Fleecers." Japanese, especially elderly couples, have been victims, along with other residents, of racketeers in fake deals in opium, diamonds and real estate.

Dinner at the Waldorf

The other evening I had dinner at the Waldorf along with 75 other members of Manhattan's Kaisha crowd. The tariff was ten dolother members of the six course dinner, which included cocktails, were the prime roast beef and the cherry surprise. "Ambascocktains, sador" Tsushima was the main speaker of the evening, recounting in an expansive mood, his experiences in America in the past 35 years.

I would say there are about 90 Kaisha personnel in New York at the present time. They represent about 50 different firms in all. Conidering the fact that there are some 25,000 firms in Japan engaged in the import-export game, this is very small representation. Prein the imported point is a rely small representation. Pre-war, the Japanese corporation population ran over 500 and they had several clubs and organizations, one to fit each job category.

The 1952 Kaisha managers and field men are youngish, in their thirties and early forties. Most of them are here for the first time, more on an exploratory trip to learn the language, customs and business conditions. They don't have the plush confidence of their predecessors nor their brash manners. The 1952 crop is a little on the beeessors nor their brash mainters. The 1332 clop is a little on the be-wildered side, not quite yet acclimatized to the New York pace and tempo. I met a couple of former Nisei among them. They have been sent to New York because of their proclivity in handling the language. Most of these men were college grads of the 1930s who gave up their citizenship and decided to cast their lot with a Japanese corporation.

As a whole, the post-war crop represent the lower echelon of Kaisha personnel, the first team being too old to make the trip or still on the purged list. They are eager, ambitious, hard-working but very much inexperienced, easily rattled, lacking in shrewdness, trading know-how and confidence.

Personnel Reflect the Parent Firm

This indecision and immaturity on the part of the 1952 Kaisha growd mirrors very closely the status of the post-war Japanese corporation. They have been divided into small units, reorganized under new personnel, and are now being reshuffled into some semblance of power and affluence. The Mitsuis and Mitsubishis have been dissolved but now their successors are banding together to join on a strong common front.

The main reason for the insecurity and indecision of the new Kaishas is their anemic financial condition. They simply do not have the finance and operating capital to do business like the pre-Pearl Harbor days. Most of the corporations in Japan do not have the funds to send men to New York and open up their American branches.

Then again, the 1952 counterparts are not doing the business of the 1939 model. Right now I would judge the total volume of business handled by the Japanese Kaishas in New York would run around $350,000,000 per annum. A decade or so ago, the boys used to do over a billion dollars a year. I would also say that a majority of the Kaisha volume is concerned with exports to Japan. They are actively engaged in buying necessary items for their country, such as coal, cotton, iron ore, wheat, sugar, rice and other essentials. The larger import items from Japan handled by the Kaisha set would include raw silk, cotton textiles, food products, porcelainware, sewing machine leads, cameras, toys and countless novelties.

Just where the Manhattan Nisei fit into the foreign trade picture can be seen from their volume of business. I would judge they do $40,000,000 a year. This would cover about 20 Nisei firms. Most of them handle imports from Japan and their major supplier is Japan. I notice also that a few New York Nisei have closed their own doors and joined the ranks of the Kaishas in a minor capacity.

The 1952 Kaisha Man

To give you an idea of the 1952 edition of Japan's foreign trader, et it be first said that the New York post is considered tops in the overseas stations of the various Kaishas. So, naturally, they send their brightest and most likely-to-succeed young men. Most of these representatives are college grads and served time in the armed forces. Almost all of them are making their maiden trip to the

The average salary runs about $500 a month with another $200 or so for entertainment expenses. Back in the home country these men received an equivalent of $50 a month in yen. Therefore, this is a wonderful experience for these young men and financially lucrative.

The Outlook

It will be a hard long grind for the Kaishas in the years ahead. It is highly unlikely there will be a large influx of Japan Kaishas in the near future. They simply don't have the money. However, for a giant Kaisha to maintain "face" and influence, it is necessary to have a New York office. The state of New York office. Those that can afford it have opened up their of-

Bill Hosokawa:

FROM THE FRYING PAN

Back to the Waterfront

Seattle, Wash. They say anyone born near the sea never quite gets over being attracted by the sea. Perhaps that's the reason I always head for the waterfront on each visit to Seattle.

Here, where land meets water, is no majestic panorama of frothy waves pounding barnacled rocks. it is a less romantic scene-oily waters, debris of any harbor, splintered planking, bustling ferryboats.

But to a person from the arid mountain country, the smell of salt water is heady, and even rusting freighters disgorging cargo from dank holds are symbols of romance.

So, to keep the dream alive, we took a ferry ride to Bremerton and back, ate mightly of shrimp, king crab (flown in from Alaska), and a memorably flavorsome salmon that Rube hooked and landed one morning off Whidby island while fishing with George Tokuda.

Visit to the Home Town

Even a fleeting visit to the old home town is an event. We didn't do even a tenth of the things we wanted to do, nor did we see more than a small handful of friends we'd have liked to see. But we were amazed once again at the city's growth, and how progress (meaning new highways for the ever swelling streams of traffic) has leveled many an old landmark.

Seattle has more darned cars, and they all seem to be in a hurry. Foresighted city fathers have kept pace, well almost, by building a maze of thoroughfares that seem to move vehicles much faster than

One day we raced down Yesler Way with a cab driver, who disdaining second gear, put on the brakes half way down and kept them applied until we came to a stop at the bottom. How long, we asked, do a set of brakes last on Seattle cabs?

About 10,000 miles, he said. Brakes have to be taken up approximately every 1,000 miles, as regularly as a grease job. Which may account for the high cost of riding cabs in Seattle.

The Streets of Childhood

Neither Main nor Jackson streets resemble the place I knew as a youngster. Once upon a time I could tell you the name, rank and serial number of every business house on those two streets. I knew the owners and some times even a little scandal about most of them. But no longer.

The streets are lined with unfamiliar shops, peopled with unfamiliar faces. Things change, Kids I knew vaguely as snot-nosed small fry have three, four small fry of their own now. Charlie Masumoto is a great-grandfather, twice Charlie Toshi's first-born was graduated from high school, and a fellow I went to camp with as a Boy Scout is chief of

It's Fishing and Golf

Oh, yes, the Nisei angle. I saw Nisei driving more darned Buicks. Chick Uno said the outlook of the athletic-minded youngsters was changed. It wasn't like in the old days when you could get up four Nisei football teams, and more baseball teams than you could shake a stick at. Now it's fishing and golf.

Porgie Okada, who's an executive in a big dry cleaning plant, reported his youngster was playing a lot of baseball. Barney Yasuda says his grocery keeps him too busy for either basketball or tennis. Frank Muramatsu is in the air conditioning research department at Boeings and he works in what is proably the hottest, uncooled offices in the entire plant.

Incidentally, it can get just as hot in Seattle as it can in Denver. But that cool breeze that blows in off the sound at night—that's something to go

MINORITY WEEK

No Problem

What started out to be a "man bites dog" story in Omaha fizzled out this week.

The first accounts said that residents of a Negro neighborhood were protesting the entry of a white family—a sort of discrimination-in-reverse story. The NA-ACP promptly wired the white family, offering its services, and the Urban League announced it did not subscribe "to this sort of thing." The newspapers gave it big play.

The story, when it finally got straightened out, was a little dif-

The neighborhood is about evenly mixed between whites and Negroes and race prejudice had very little to do with the happenings.

The white family had purchased a vacant lot with plans to move a house onto it. An elderly Negro had been raising a garden on the lot. The Negroes petitioning against the entry of the white famly had merely been concerned about the man's garden.

This week the elderly gardener said he was giving up his plot. The petition was withdrawn.

"Japanese in the Americas" IMMIGRANTS IN CANADA

By ELMER R. SMITH

The selection of British Columbia for the settlement of Japanese in Canada rested upon many of the same factors making the settlements along the Pacific Coast of the United States possible. First, British Columbia was the closest region to Japan, and Vancouver was the principal port of entry. Few immigrants upon arrival had money to move inland, and what they later acquired was needed to establish themselves in their new homes and businesses or to help relatives in Japan.

The economic life of the British Columbia region made it possible for the new arrivals to find a standing with Japan in 1908. ready means of making a living. During the time Japanese were moving into British Columbia the Canadian boom was in full swing. During this period over two bil-lion dollars of British capital was poured into business undertakings on the Pacific Coast. Labor was scarce and the Japanese found ready jobs at a good wage. The climate, topography and fishing were much like that found in Japan, and thus these played important parts in keeping the Japanese in the region.

The great wave of Japanese immigration took place between 1885-1912, and was not centered in North America alone. Australia, Korea, China and some islands of the Pacific were absorbing the Japanese in their period of industrial development. It is of interest to note that between the years of 1885-1908 immigrants from Japan to Hawaii Australia, the United States and Canada numbered 269,525.

The years of greatest influx of Japanese into the countries of the United States, Australia and Can-ada saw the birth of strong adverse reaction toward what was called "the rising tide of color." Australia was the first to take action against the Japanese migrating to that country. It was argued that Australia was so close to Asia and to Japan that it was being endangered by non-whites, especially Orientals. As a result of this feeling Australia embarked on a policy of a one hundred percent White Australia. This policy is still the dominant one regulating immigration.

Policies of the United States and Canada were more cautious for a short period of time in relation to Japanese immigration. The U.S. and Japan instituted the Gentlemen's Agreement in 1907 effecting voluntary restriction of the move-ments of Japanese to the U.S.

up. Forty-four received suspended sentences on payment of fines.

Hamilton organized the Klan in reign of terror.

Thomas L. Hamilton, imperial Wizard, drew four years at hard labor, and his followers received labor, are received labor, and his followers received headed night riders.

standing with Japan in 1908.

As we look back upon this period of "the Gentlemen's Agreement" we can see that the agitation carried on by certain racist groups along the Pacific Coast created dissatisfaction with the workings of this agreement. Due to the propaganda and political efforts of the Hearst interests, the labor unions, and some radical patriotic groups in California, Washington and Oregon force was brought to bear upon the U.S. Congress. In 1923 the Exclusion Act was passed against all Orientals, but especially the Japanese. Can-ada in this same year modified its agreement with Japan involving a material reduction in the number of Japanese admitted annually to the Dominion. In 1928 Canada further revised the 1923 ruling and reduced the maximum number of Japanese immigrants permitted to enter Canada to 150 annually.

The closing of the doors of Australia, the United States and Canada to the migrant Japanese compelled them to look elsewhere. South America was open and it was to this continent that more and more Japanese migrated. We have seen in previous columns that the great influx of Japanese into Brazil and Peru took place after agitation for restricted immigration became embedded in the political and economic thinking of North Americans. However, as conditions became more negative in South America the Japanese outlet for its large population turn-ed to the Asiatic mainland and island areas. This demand for "population outlet" and economic satisfaction of needs did much to contribute to the forces ending in World War II.

The numbers of Japanese in various parts of the world in 1936 has been well represented by and Shirasaki in their book. "Nippon, A Charted Survey of Japan." These authors pictured 20,-000 Japanese in Canada, 120,000 in the United States, 20,000 in Peru, 5,000 in Mexico, 5,000 in Ar-Peru, 5,000 in Mexico, 5,000 in Argentina, 175,000 in Brazil, and 150,000 in Hawaii. The same chart pictures 20,000 Japanese in the Philippines, 5,000 in British Malaya, 5,000 in Java, 55,000 in China, and 245,000 in Manchoukuo.

Japan's Furuhashi Runs Out of Gas

A tragic figure at the Olympic Games in Helsinki was that of Hironoshin Furuhashi, acclaimed only a few years ago as the world's greatest swimmer. Furuhashi, now past his prime, barely qualified for the finals of the 400 meters freestyle and finished dead last. The Japanese gave the tipoff on Furuhashi when they took him out of the 1500 meters and placed him only in the 400. He also was left out of the relay squad.

The much-touted duel between Furuhashi and Hawaii's Ford Konno fizzled because the "Flying Fish of Fujiyama" is now over the hill, competitively speaking, at the age of 23. Swimmers, as a rule, don't have a long expectancy as a competitive athlete. The best-known ones, like Johnny Weissmuller, Esther Williams, Eleanor Holm, Buster Crabbe and Duke Kahanamoku went on to exploit their swimming fame in other fields. None of the 1948 swimming champions repeated at Helsinki. Allen Stack, who set the world's record in the backstroke and won in the Olympics in '48, was fourth behind Yoshinobu Oyakawa at Helsinki while Jimmy McLane, 1948 champion at 1500 meters, finished fourth behind Konno.

The Konno story is that the slim Nisei exceeded pre-meet calculations and proved himself a great competitor besides. The competition, in fact, proved much tougher than expected. Konno won the 1500 meters but was forced to swim 42 seconds faster than the old Olympic Games record of 19:12 by Kusuo Kitamura of Japan in 1932. Shiro Hashizume, Japan's successor to Furuhashi, matched Konno stroke for stroke most of the way and finished in 18:41.4 while Tetsuo Okamoto of Brazil was third in 18:51.3. (The fact that the first three finishers in the 1500 meters were all of Japanese ancestry but were nationals of three different nations proved you couldn't tell the athletes at Helsinki without a scorecard.) In fact seven of the first eight men in the 1500 meters beat Kitamura's old record.

Konno's performance is remarkable in that the Nisei star has been suffering from a sinus ailment most of the year and was unable to train for a time before the U.S. tryouts. A couple of U.S. officials at Helsinki, uninformed about Konno's affliction, were quoted as saying they believed the Nisei star was "tightening up" and that he had "changed his style."

Konno also missed by a stroke of winning the 400 meters which he raced in the fastest time he has yet recorded for the distance. He lost to France's Jean Boiteux, a 19-year old "unknown" in international swimming. In this event, also, Konno's time exceeded the previous Olympic record for the distance. He was six-tenths of a second behind Boiteux's record-making 4:30.7.

The 19-year old Konno's lap in the 800-meter relay also helped the United States victory over a great Japanese team.

If Konno's performances were expected, on the strength of his "grand slam" in U.S. swimming during the past season, the gold medal won by 18-year old Yoshinobu Oyakawa of Hilo and Ohio State was the surprise of the swimming meet. Oyakawa's performance, the second fastest 100-meter backstroke race in history and a new Olympic record at 1:05.4, showed the bronzed Nisei had reached the height of his competitive prowess at Helsinki. Oyakawa, in fact, was little regarded in U.S. Olympic plans until his surprise win in the National AAU 200 meters earlier this year.

The third member of the Nisei aquatic triumvirate from Hawaii, 18-year old Evelyn Kawamoto, also came through with brilliant performances. She established a new Olympic record in the 400 meters freestyle, only to see it broken by Valerie Gyenge of Hungary who won the finals in 5:12.1. Miss Kawamoto, who also finished under her previous mark, lost second place by a stroke to Eva Novak of Hungary. Miss Kawamoto's time in the finals was 5:14.6. The University of Hawaii freshman also was a member of the third-place U.S. relay team.

Together with the record-breaking performances of Tom Kono from Sacramento in weightlifting, the performances of the four Nisei at Helsinki were remarkable. The Nisei won three gold medals. A fifth Nisei, Richard Tomita of Honolulu, U.S. champion featherweight weightlifter, made the trip to Helsinki but was not entered by Coach Bob Hoffman of the musclemen who preferred to concentrate U.S. efforts in the heavier divisions.

The fact that swimmers of Japanese ancestry won two of the five individual gold medals in the Olympic swimming events was not received with any show of exultation in Japan, according to reports from Tokyo. The Japanese, making their first appearance in the Olympics since 1936 when they dominated the swimming events at Berlin, failed to win a single first place in swimming at Helsinki.

Konno 'Tickled' To Put U. S. Ahead Of Soviet Team

HELSINKI — Ford Konno, whose record-breaking victory in the 1500 meters freestyle swimming race put the United States ahead of Russia in the race for the unofficial team championship of the Olympic Games, said after his victory on Aug. 2 he was "tickled to death."

"I didn't have any idea about the team total," the modest 19year old Nisei said, "but I'm glad I put the United States ahead."

Until Konno's victory the U.S. had trailed Russia in team totals.

"Before I went out I just wanted to do my best. Nobody told me anything except that they hoped I would win. All I can say is that I am tickled to death that I could do this for my country."

Ford Konno Wins 1500-Meter Race at Olympics; Nisei Win Four Gold Medals at Helsinki

HELSINKI — Four Nisei members of the U.S. team won four gold first place medals, one silver second place medal and two bronze third place awards in the Olympic Games which were concluded on Aug. 3.

The Nisei performers, three swimmers and a weightlifter, contributed mightly to the United States team victory in unofficial point tabulations. The four Nisei, in individual and two relay races, scored 53 points toward the United States total of 610. Soviet Russia was second with

The Nisei quartet, Weightlifter Tommy Kono of Sacramento, Calif., and Swimmers Ford Konno, Yoshinobu Oyakawa and Evelyn Kawamoto of Hawaii, scored more points than 31 nations in the Olympics

All of the Nisei broke previous Olympic records in their events.

Konno, 19-year old freshman from Ohio State University, came from behind to defeat Japan's Shiro Hashizume in the 1500-meter freestyle race on Aug. 2.

Konno's victory shut the door on Japan's last chance to win a gold medal in swimming. The Hawaiian Nisei established himself as one of the greatest swimmers of all time with his victory in the 1,500, in which the first seven swimmers to finish broke the 1932 record of 19:12 set by Kusuo Kitamura of Japan.

Hashizume had set a new Olympic record in the semi-finals with an 18:34 race but Konno was greater when the chips were down in the finals.

From 400 to 1,100 meters Hashizume led by margins varying between a length and a length and a half. Then the Nisei started to inch up on the Japanese star and caught him within 50 meters. Once Konno was on his way, Hashizume was helpless to stay with him.

With a smooth gliding motion and a six-beat kick on which his feet scarcely broke water, the 140-pound Nisei just barely beat his rival to the touch at 1,200 meters. At the 1,250 mark he had an arm's length lead. From there on it was no contest. Hashizume, thrashing water faster and faster, tired badly and Konno went away from him like a streak, leading him by a length and a half at 1,350 and winning by 20 meters at the finish in 18:30. Hashizume's time was 18:41.4. Tetsuo Okamoto of Brazil was third in 18:51.3. Konno's teammate, Jimmy McLane, the 1948 Olympics champion, was fourth in 18:51.5. Joseph Bernardo of France was fifth and Yasuo Kitamura, younger brother of the former Olympic titleholder, came in sixth. Bringing up the rear were Peter Duncan of South Africa and John Marshall of Australia.

Konno previously had contributed a lap to the winning United Konno also broke the previous Olympic record with the greatest 400 race of his career in 4:31.3 but Boiteur was unbeatable at 4:30.7. The performances gave Konno two gold medals and a silver medal for second place in the 400.

Two surprising Hungarian women swimmers upset Evelyn Kawamoto in the 400 meters women's freestyle and the Honolulu gid was forced to settle for third place although she broke the former Olympic Games record with her time of 5:14.6. The winner, Valerie Gyenge of Hungary, won in 5:12.1. Miss Kawamoto had broken the old Olympic record in the trials by winning her heat in 5:16.6.

Miss Kawamoto also swam a lap on the United States women's relay team which placed third.

The talk of the Olympic swimming championships was the gold medal won by Yoshinobu Oyakawa of Ohio State and Hawaii who took the 100-meter backstroke finals in the new record time of 1:05.4. Gilbert Bozon of France was second in 1:06.2.

The other Nisei gold medal winner was Tommy Kono of the U.S. Army and Sacramento, Calif., who won the championship in the 148-pound division of the weightlifting competition with a new record total of 797½ pounds.

A fifth Nisei who was present at Helsinki did not get an opportunity to compete when he and another weightlifter were dropped from the squad in a maneuver so that the United States could enter more weightlifters in the heavier divisions. He was Richard Tomita, U.S. featherweight weightlifting titlist and a member of the 1948 Olympic team.

Soichi Sakamoto, noted Hawaiian swimming coach, attended the Olympic Games and helped coach the United States team.

Miss Kawamoto swam the anchor lap for the United States team in the relay and lost a game bid for second place to Irma Heyting-Schumacher of the Netherlands who pulled away from the Nisei girl in the last 25 yards.

In the backstroke Oyakawa was second behind Jack Taylor of the U.S. at the 50-meter mark. At 75-meters Oyakawa, Taylor and Bozon were virtually even. From that point Oyakawa burned up the pool and Bozon went up with him past Taylor but the French youth could not match Oyakawa's closing kick.

ton office of the JACL-ADC conferred on July 29 with Herve L'Heur-eux, chief of the State Depart-ment's visa division, and Robert Alexander, assistant chief of the visa department, reported the Washington office of the JACL Anti-Discrimination Committee.

Ennis, former general counsel of the Immigration and Naturalization Service, Masaoka and Akagi raised with L'Heureux and Alexander various questions regarding immigration procedures and the future State Department regulations affecting the issuance of visas for Japanese nationals desiring to come into the United States.

Generally the JACL ADC representatives inquired into and suggested ways in which the State Department can implement the immigration provisions of the new Immigration and Nationality Act.

The JACL ADC representatives were heard cordially by the State Department officials who expressed themselves as being favorably inclined to the JACL ADC's point of view on these matters. However, L'Heureux declared that the regulations on the newly enacted Immigration and Nationality Act are framed not by the State Department alone, but the State Department in collaboration with the Department of Justice.

Since the new Immigration and Nationality Act completely vamps existing procedures, L'Heureux said that the drafting of the regulations would be a large and difficult task. He guessed that the regulations would be ready for promulgation by mid-October.

By that time L'Heureux said he hoped that the American counsular officers would have in their possession copies of both the text of the new Immigration and Nationality Act and the official government regulations regarding its op-

Urge Justice Department Drop Ann Nisei's Kitchen: DefunctJapaneseOrganizations From List of Prescribed Groups

WASHINGTON, D.C. - Contending that there is neither practical nor legal reason for including the now defunct pre-war Japanese organizations on the Attorney General's list of subversive organizations, Mike Masaoka, former national JACL ADC legislative director, urged Attorney General James P. McGranery to drop these Japanese organizations from the proscribed list, reported the Washington office of the JACL Anti-Discrimination

In a letter to the Attorney General of the United States, Masaoka argued that the pre-war Japanese organizations no longer fall under the definition of "totalitarian" provided by the new Immigration and Nationality Act and that the continued listing of these now defunct organizations give uninformed or malevolent persons an excuse for erroneously charging that there exists in the United States today organizations of Japanese origin hostile to this government.

Masaoka pointed out that although the list of subversive organizations was drawn up as a guide for federal employment purposes only, it was now being used in other extraneous matters.

Citing two cases now pending before the Board of Immigration Appeals, in which two Japanese alien fathers have been ordered deported for pre-war membership in Japanese organizations on the west coast, Masaoka called attention to the fact that the central office of the Immigration and Naturaliza-tion Service had ruled that suspension of deportation should not be made available to persons who were members of proscribed organizations.

Masaoka asserted that the proscribed listing was never intended as a standard for determining eligibility for suspension of deportation and that in the case of these two Japanese alien fathers denial of suspension of deportation, if upheld, would result in the arbitrary separation of American children dependent solely upon them for support.

These arbitrary listings, particularly with respect to Japanese organizations, said Masaoka, remain a constant threat to the happiness and security of homes and families of persons of Japanese ances-

Recreation Group Tells Outing Plans

CHICAGO - A midnight beach party, sand skiing, and a golf tournament will be featured at the coed weekend outing of the City-Wide Recreation Council on August 16 and 17 at Forest Beach YWCA Camp near New Buffalo, Michigan, announced Yukio Ozima, chairman of the affair.

Open to all youthful Chicagoans, the outing will give heat-worn residents an opportunity to enjoy sport activities and socials away from the city at bargain prices. Swim-ming at a private beach, dancing under the stars, tennis, archery, volleyball, and square dancing will round out the informal program arranged by committee chairmen Alma Kurisu and Nob Wakumoto.

Fee for the outing will be $6.25 plus $.50 for transportation and include meals, lodging, and midnight snack.

Registration will be accepted with a $2.00 deposit which will be credited to the total fee. Interested people are asked to contact the Chicago Resettlers Committee, 1110 North La Salle Street, DE-7-1076 by Monday, August 11th.

Transportation will be provided in private cars with Tuney Otani and Gene Wakabayashi in charge of the arrangements. Registration at Forest Beach Camp can be made with Tom Horiuchi, Kay Nishi-moto, or Hank Matsui.

Registration is limited to 40 per-

Let Rice Keep Its Character

It's our guess that it's only here in the United States that housewives ruin rice by drowning it in quarts of water and cooking it to a soggy mass. Elsewhere women have learned to let rice retain its character.

Now if you're one of those who wash rice with a swish of the wrist and measure the water by sticking your finger into the pot, the following is not for you. Otherwise, you may find some of the following tips helpful.

The pot in which rice is cook ed should be very thick and have a tight-fitting lid. Be sure it's sufficiently large, since rice swells in volume on cooking.

Generally speaking, rice requires about one and one-fourths cup of water for each cup of rice. This, however, will vary with the rice the age of the rice and your own Blue Rose personal preference. rice (Arkansas) needs more water than California rice. And rice from a crop freshly harvested needs less water than rice from last year's crop.

All factors considered, you may find that the rice you use will need as much as two cups of water for each cup of rice, or as little as one cup. Start with a ratio of 11/4 water to 1, and increase the liquid if the rice appears too dry.

It's difficult to cook extremely small amounts of rice and have it turn out right. Kept covered in the refrigerator, rice will keep for several days and can be steamed back to first-day freshness; so if yours is a small family, cook double the amount you'll need.

Wash desired amount of rice in several waters, washing until water runs clear. Drain. Add 11/4 cups of water for each cup of rice.

Let stand 2-3 hours. Just before cooking, give rice a swish to loosen. Cover and set pan on medium-high heat. Cook until rice reaches full boil and steam emerges. Turn heat down and cook 20 minutes longer. Turn heat off and let rice stand 10 minutes.

And there it is, plain boiled rice, but each kernel is separate, the rice is tender and flaky.

Now for a few more recipes. For variety's sake, we've chosen recipes from different countries, all of them using rice as the principal ingredient.

Here's a Japanese one:

Rice With Chicken

21/2 cups rice

cups chicken stock

lb. chicken

21/2 tablespoons soy sauce tablespoons sherry teaspoon ajinomoto

Cut chicken into fine strips. Dip into mixture of soy sauce and sherry. Remove.

Add soy sauce-sherry mixture to chicken stock. Wash rice and cook in chicken stock. When mixture comes to boil, add chicken and ajinomoto. Cook, with lid on, until all the liquid has boiled away. Turn off flame, but let rice stand, covered, for ten minutes.

Mix rice before serving.

If desired, rice may be sprinkled with toasted nori (seaweed) or sesame seed.

The following is an East Indian recipe, but you'll find neither the ingredients nor the final result to be real "foreign." Except for the chili peppers, it might be a recipe you worked up yourself.

East Indian Fried Rice

cups rice

onions, thinly sliced

clove garlic, minced small dried chili peppers cup salad oil cups diced, cooked chicken cup diced, cooked ham salt and pepper

Cook rice in  $2\frac{1}{2}$  - 3 cups of water as directed above. Let Saute onions, garlic, and finely ground chili peppers, in heated salad oil, until onions are soft. Add chicken and ham. Continue cooking 5 minutes, stirring frequently. Add cooked rice, small amount at a time, mixing well with rest of ingredients.

Another method for fixing fried rice is to coat each raw grain of rice with oil and then proceed to cook it. This is the way you do it in Fried Rice, Mexican.

Fried Rice, Mexican

11/4 cups rice

tablespoons olive oil medium-sized onions

cloves garlic

cup tomato juice salt and pepper water

Wash and drain rice. Pour oil into thick iron frying pan. Add rice and stir until each grain is coated with oil. Cook over low heat until rice is lightly browned. Add onions (whole, not sliced) and garlic (ditto!) Add tomato juice, seasoning and about 11/2 cups hot water (or enough to bring water one inch above rice). Bring to boil, cover with tight-fitting lid and cook, over very low heat, until rice is tender and water is absorbed, about 25
