Critics of new immigration act warned by Walter at testimonial

Hot-headed critics who want to repeal the Immigration and Nationality Act of 1952 before it even has a chance to operate will be shown the "exit door," so warned Rep. Francis E. Walter, who co-authored the bill with Sen. Pat McCarran.

This measured advice was made before the National Testimonial Banquet last Saturday night at the Biltmore Hotel. The Pennsylvania Democrat, among those who were honored by the Japanese American community, stoutly defended the bill which Pres. Truman charged as discriminatory.

He told the audience of nearly 600 that the new law actually remove discrimination by lifting bans on immigration of Orientals into the U. S. as well as extend naturalization privileges to Asians for the first time since the founding of the Republic. Walter warned against unlimited immigration into this country, declaring that all-out efforts to win approval of the outside world "are grave mistakes of foreign policy because they invariably lead to the loss of one's own strength and resources."

"It is the carefully planned and constantly checked balance between our domestic and foreign obligations that must govern our economic and our immigration policy, if we are to survive strong and prosperous," he added.

He defended as a basic concept of American immigration policy the "national origins" system under which quotas are allocated, of which Japan has 185 annually, according to the population ratio of each such national group in the U. S.

He wanted to know where those who charge the quota system discriminatory today were the past 25 years when the system was in use.

Walter declared: "To be sure, there was discrimination in our immigration laws—we were discriminating where we had barred completely certain races. We had discriminated against Oriental people. But, numerical limitation based on a sound social formula is not discrimination."

Cal-Poly to enter Nisei designed float in '53 Tournament of Roses

San Luis Obispo
Cal Poly again will enter a float in the 1953 Pasadena Tournament of Roses. Ray Yamasaki of Auburn, sophomore ornamental horticulture student here, is designing the entry which will feature a 17-foot high early California mission with bronze bells which will chime. "Mission Bells," matching the "Melodies in Flower," the '53 parade theme.

Early settlement of the dual nationality problem—a highly technical one involving international relations—affecting so many Nisei Americans was predicted yesterday by George J. Inagaki, national JACL president, after hearing a report on the subject by Mike Masaoka, Washington legislative consultant.

He said that he had conferred with Japanese government and Diet officials and found them generally sympathetic once the problem was explained to them.

Members of both houses of the Diet as well as Foreign Office and the Ministry of Justice were contacted, Masaoka reported. Attorneys Saburo Kido of Los Angeles and Katsuro Miho of Honolulu also participated in some of the discussions.

Inagaki said that a memorandum outlining the complete problem is under preparation and the Japan Diet will be asked to amend its law in order that Nisei Americans will lose their Japanese nationality except where specific acts are taken to maintain it.

The dual nationality problem is not unique to the Nisei but the Nisei hope to be the first American group to resolve it satisfactorily.

The problem arose because Nisei born prior to Dec. 1, 1924, under operations of Japanese law, are automatically nationals of Japan as well as citizens of the United States.

Because the Japanese government provided an expatriation procedure, thousands of Nisei whose parents registered them at birth with Japanese consular officials had divested themselves of their Japanese nationality prior to the war.

But other born prior to the Dec. 1, 1924, deadline and whose parents either neglected or refused to record their births with the Japanese officials in most cases were unable to expatriate themselves.

After the war, Japan provided in its 1951 Civil Code that the pre-war procedure for expatriation be reinstated. This means that for tens of thousands of Nisei Americans the only way in which they can lose Japanese nationality is to appear before a Japanese diplomatic official, prove their Japanese citizenship, and then have it removed from the family record.

Not only is this method cumbersome and expensive but it might result in the loss of American citizenship because the act of registration in the family record for the purpose of having it removed may technically be used as an act of expatriation.

Therefore, the National JACL Convention in San Francisco this past June unanimously resolved to seek other means to resolve this status which has proved humiliating, embarrassing, and even costly to some Nisei. Accordingly, when Masaoka was in Japan, he conferred with the appropriate individuals and agencies regarding general legislation declaring that Nisei Americans are not Japanese nationals.

The JACL, therefore, is proceeding carefully in preparing a draft bill to be considered by the Japanese Parliament in order that every aspect of the problem will be properly resolved.

Citizenship of strandedes voting in Japan sought

Restoration of American citizenship through legislation to Nisei who expatriated themselves by voting in the postwar Japanese elections of 1946 and 1947 while Japan was under occupation will be urged by the National JACL, its president George J. Inagaki announced this week.

He said this decision was made at a special JACL National Board and staff meeting held Sunday after the group heard Mike Masaoka, Washington legislative consultant, report on his survey of the problem in Japan.

Masaoka reported that he, Attorney Saburo Kido of Los Angeles and Attorney Katsuro Miho of Honolulu conferred with the supervising consul-general, the consul-generals and consuls in Japan during the past two months regarding the problem of Nisei strandedes.

Strandedes are generally classified into four groups, Masaoka explained.

Citizenship was lost either (1) by voting, (2) by serving in the armed forces, (3) by their wartime employment, or (4) by renunciation. He estimated perhaps that 4,000 or 5,000 Nisei were in these classes.

The Washington lobbyist said that he found considerable official sympathy for those who had voted in Japanese elections of 1946 and 1947 because most of them voted for fear of losing food rations and in order to help demonstrate the election process to the Japanese citizenry, thereby helping American occupation authorities.

In many cases, Masaoka found that the occupation officials themselves had urged Nisei working in their respective offices to vote in the elections as an expression of democracy in action.

When Nisei have been able to preserve their United States citizenship all through the difficult days of war and then are deprived of that citizenship because of the suggestion of American occupation personnel or because of the fear of losing food rations, they ought to be given an opportunity to regain their U. S. nationality, Inagaki noted.

Masaoka declared that the legislation to be introduced in the 83rd Congress would be patterned after the one sponsored by the JACL-ADC in the last Congress and introduced by Rep. Chet Holifield (D., Calif.) of Los Angeles.

"This time, since we will have much more first-hand information to present to Congress, we hope to secure early passage," he said.

JACL to assist internees collect evacuation claims

Los Angeles

Evacuation claims are still a major item for the Japanese American Citizen League, when larger claims are still unexpedited and payment of awards already settled is still due.

The evacuation claims program took on another facet with reference to losses suffered by internees. Mike Masaoka, consultant for the —ACL at Washington, D. C., will confer with Attorney General—Designate Herbert Brownell, Jr., immediately after the inauguration in an effort to secure consideration for claims of internees, evacuees, as well as expedite processing of larger claims.

This announcement was made Monday by George J. Inagaki, national JACL president, after a special JACL National Board and Staff meeting held Sunday at the home of the president.

The detailed and lengthy discussion featured implementation of mandates unanimously approved by the last National JACL convention to aid internees recover evacuation claims and push handling of larger claims.

Since the losses which internees suffered were a consequence of evacuation, they are entitled, as a matter of justice, to the same consideration as other evacuees, Inagaki declared. He pointed out that when German and Italian aliens were interned, their families were able to carry on their respective businesses for them, but in the case of the Japanese internees, evacuation of their families created an entirely different situation.

Possibility of instituting a court case to test the right of internees to file and recover claims was also discussed.

Frank Chuman, national chairman of the JACL Evacuation Claims Committee, declared that Nisei and other attorneys interested in the program, as well as legal experts of administrative law, will be consulted regarding the filing of a test case to establish the right of internees to file claims.

In the meantime, Masaoka will confer with congressional leaders regarding a possible legislative amendment to specifically include within the meaning of the law internee evacuees.

"We shall explore every possibility in order that the internee evacuee will be treated justly," Inagaki said.

As to larger claims, the new Attorney General will be asked to expedite their consideration administratively while the JACL, if necessary, will seek further amendments to the law to allow possible compromise of even these larger claims on the same basis as the smaller claims up to $2,500 were compromised.

14 Hawaiian-born strandeers file suits for restoration of American citizenship

Honolulu

Fourteen suits seeking judgments on American citizenship for Hawaii-born persons of Japanese ancestry have been filed in Federal Court recently.

The suits are on behalf of persons overseas who have been denied American passports on the grounds they are no longer citizens or those whose passport applications have not received action.

Nine were in the Japanese armed forces or worked for the Government in a job open only to a Japanese citizen and five voted in Japanese elections.

The suits for former members of Japanese armed forces are being filed with an ele upon the date on which the Walter-McCarran act becomes effective—Dec. 24.

After that date, no American citizen who has lived in a foreign country and who has served in a foreign army may be declared still an American citizen.

The eight men who served in the Japanese armed forces and for whom suits were filed here this month are: Koji Takushima, Hisao Yamasaki, Charles Okimoto, Kenneth M. Ishida, Junichi Oshiro, Koichi Shibuya, Saburo Sakamoto, Kiyoshi Takata and Harry M. Igarashi.

All born in Hawaii, the men went to Japan and were there when the war broke out. They contended in their complaints at Federal Court that their service in the armed forces of Japan was not a "free and voluntary act" on their parts.

Supreme court hearings on school segregation starts; decision delayed

Washington

Is it legal to have separate schools for Negroes and Whites? This is the major issue being discussed before the Supreme Court this week.

Negro lawyers pleaded with the court to strike out a doctrine it laid down in 1896 providing separate facilities for the races are equal if they are equal.

Robert Carter of New York contended that "no state has any authority" to divide its citizens by race. Regardless of whether Negro schools are just as good as White, he said, the very fact of segregation deprives Negroes of equal opportunities in education and development.

And that, he said, violates the 14th Amendment to the Constitution and its guarantee of equality of treatment for all people.

(It is this "separate but equal" doctrine which the National JACL disavows in filing an "amicus curiae" brief recently in Kansas school segregation case.)

Thurgood Marshall, another New York attorney, picked up the same thread of reasoning later.

But Paul E. Wilson, assistant attorney general from Kansas, pointed out there is a long history of court decisions and legislative action built on the doctrine that separate facilities for the races are constitutional if they are equal.

In Kansas, Wilson said, the schools are equal in buildings, teachers and courses. With that Carter agreed, but he declared:

"Here we abandon any claim of constitutional inequality that comes from anything but segregation itself. We say that on the basis of separation, Negroes do not have equal protection before the law and equality of opportunity."

Lumped together were four other cases from South Carolina, Virginia, Delaware and the District of Columbia.

The Supreme Court is not expected to render its decision till sometime next year. When it does, the ruling will touch 13 other states which have complete or partial segregation in their schools.

The Kansas case centers on segregation in the Topeka school system. Negro parents appealed to the Supreme Court to reverse a ruling by a special three-judge U. S. District Court upholding a state law that permits cities over 15,000 to set up separate elementary schools for Negro and White pupils.

Wilson has conceded that integration of Negro students in White schools would not have serious consequences in his state. Kansas maintains mixed schools above the sixth grade.

$100,000 suit filed for electrocution

Honolulu

A circuit court jury is hearing a $100,000 damage suit brought by the survivors of a man electrocuted nearly three years ago.

The suit was brought against the Takai Electric Company, which installed a wiring system in the home of Yuusei Ginoza at Honouliuli.

The suit was brought by Mrs. Doris K. Ginoza and the two Ginoza children. It is alleged in the complaint that the head of the house died Dec. 17, 1949, because of electrocution from a defective wiring system. Ginoza was 30 years old at the time of his death.

The complaint claims the Takai Electric Company's workmen failed to properly ground the wiring system, failed to obtain a permit from the city-county to install the system and did not have it inspected after it was installed.

Two prospects in line for prosecutor post

Honolulu

Prospects of either James Morita, first deputy prosecutor, and Sakae Takahashi, territorial treasurer, to be named by Mayor John H. Wilson to a long vacant post—city-county attorney—were in the air again this week.

While the mayor is non-committal, the important position remained unfilled throughout the currently expiring two-year term because his appointments were unacceptable to the board, which has power of confirmation.

Though to rank high on the mayor's list of eligibles is Morita, who sat in on the inner circles of the mayor's successful political campaign. The post of public prosecutor was vacated earlier this year by Allen R. Hawkins, now circuit court judge.

Takahashi was a former deputy city attorney and supervisor who will be out of a job when the Democratic exodus begins at Iolani Palace next Jan. 20. His wide experience in government is regarded as a great advantage to the city legal department.

ADC urges early payment of awarded evacuation claims

Los Angeles

Funds to pay evacuation claim awards already approved by the Dept. of Justice will be among the first jobs to be undertaken by the JACL Anti-Discrimination Committee in Washington after the new Congress convenes Jan. 3, George J. Inagaki, national president, announced today.

Inagaki reported that the special meeting of the JACL National Board and Staff directed Mike Masaoka, Washington legislative consultant, to give this matter top priority.

"Although the government last year paid out more than $13,000,000 in compromise claims, there are more than $3,000,000 to be paid to claimants who compromised their claims and whose claims were approved by the Dept. of Justice," Inagaki pointed out.

At the same time, Masaoka anticipates the new Congress may be more reluctant than ever to appropriate funds for the payment of claims. The Republican party platform called for the elimination of all possible expenditures in order to reduce the huge federal budget.

COMPLETE TEXTS OF SCROLLS PRESENTED AT TESTIMONIAL

The following are texts of the scrolls presented at the National Testimonial Banquet by the Japanese American community for distinguished leadership in the campaign for equality in naturalization and immigration to:

Sen. Pat McCarran

Among the giant legislative landmarks established by Senator Pat McCarran in his many years of service to his country is the Immigration and Nationality Act of 1952.

Recognizing the need for codifying and revising the many statutes on this subject which have been approved by the Congress since the early days of the Republic, as chairman of the Committee on the Judiciary of the Senate, he supervised a four year study and investigation of the immigration, naturalization, and nationality acts which filled several volumes of statute books.

Based upon this study, he drafted an omnibus bill which brought up to date in the light of the current world situation as he saw it the immigration and naturalization laws of our nation.

Against bitter opposition, he steadfastly urged passage of the Immigration and Nationality Act and its enactment over the President's veto is a tribute to his influence and prestige in the Senate of the United States.

Notably this law, by repealing the unsavory Oriental Exclusion Acts of 1924 and eradicating the racist restriction in our Nationality Code, abolishing the twin evils which have long penalized and offended persons of Asian ancestry, and particularly the Japanese.

The Immigration and Nationality Act 1952 is a significant milestone in legislative progress for it represents for the first time the elimination of race and sex as qualifications for naturalization and immigration opportunities.

For bringing into being a new day for persons of Asian ancestry, the Japanese American community is profoundly grateful to Senator Pat McCarran.

Sen. Ernest W. McFarland

A democratic society is dependent on men like Senator Ernest W. McFarland to insure that both its ends and the means securing the ends are just.

Holding offices of great prestige and influence, he exercised his power with sensitive regard for the needs of all Americans.

Quietly, without public show, he worked to erase the discriminatory provisions in our immigration and naturalization laws.

As chairman of the Senate Majority Policy Committee, he led the all important right to place the immigration and naturalization measure on the Legislative Calendar for debate and vote.

As Majority Leader, controlling the action on the Senate floor, he stood firm in his decision to act on the immigration and naturalization issue, when it would have been expedient to capitulate to opposition pressures.

For his wise and courageous leadership in the United States Senate, for his sensitivity to the aspiration of all groups, without regard to their race, creed or national origin, the Japanese American community gratefully gives thanks to Senator Ernest W. McFarland.

Rep. Francis E. Walter

Decency and justice inherent in a free society have found clear and dynamic expression through the person of Congressman Francis E. Walter.

He is one of a handful of men, who by their unflinching advocacy of fair play for all, revived the faith of Americans and immigrants of Japanese ancestry in democratic procedures and principles.

As chairman of the House Judiciary Subcommittee on Immigration and Naturalization, he has long been an outspoken champion of racial equality in federal law. In the 81st Congress, he authored the Walter Resolution which would have extended the privilege of naturalization to all resident aliens without regard to race, color, creed, or national origin. In the 82nd Congress, he joined in sponsoring the Immigration and Nationality Act of 1952, which features provisions for equality in both immigration and naturalization.

In spite of bitter and vigorous opposition, he led the legislative battles in the House to secure passage of the Omnibus Bill which bears his name. Its enactment over the President's veto testifies to his courage and judgment, as well as to his influence and prestige in the Congress of the United States.

The alien Japanese residents who may become naturalized citizens, their American born children, and the people of Japan who may once again look to the United States as a haven join with the millions of others of goodwill throughout the world in paying tribute to Congressman Francis E. Walter for strengthening immeasurably their belief in the democratic enterprises.

Rep. Walter H. Judd

Long a prophetic voice in the Congress of the United States, Congressman Walter H. Judd has over the years assailed the inequities inflicted on persons of Asian ancestry by American immigration and naturalization laws.

He fought for practices consonant with his democratic convictions. He breached the racist wall erected by the Oriental Exclusion Acts when, through his efforts, the restrictions against the Chinese, East Indians and Filipinos were successively repealed.

As the author of the historic Judd Bill, which sought to establish equality in immigration and naturalization for all peoples, he is the spiritual father of the Asian provisions of the Immigration and Nationality Act of 1952.

Time and again he has urged

Nat'l testimonial speeches in brief

Los Angeles

Capsules of the greetings and addresses made at the National Testimonial Banquet are as follows:

Dr. Roy Nishikawa, banquet chairman: The JACL is not through. We must translate the theoretical into practical realities.

Gongoro Nakamura, president, So. Calif. Japanese Chamber of Commerce: Japanese tradition deems gratitude to whom gratitude is due. We trusted and had faith in Congress for giving us the right of naturalization.

Hon. Kenichiro Yoshida, consul-general of Japan: This solid achievement wipes out the psychological barrier which has hindered improvement of relationship in the past.

Hon. Fletcher Bowron, mayor of Los Angeles: I was the most outspoken at the meeting of officials in the San Francisco Presidio (in 1942) and Asst. Attorney General Tom Clark later told me I had convinced Gen. DeWitt to order the evacuation. I was wrong. I didn't know. Today, I am happy to greet them back home.

Mike Masaoka: There is no perfect legislation in this imperfect world. The act is a definite progressive step forward. Administration of the law is the key. While the law wipes out anti-alien laws in eleven states, it does something more to the soul.

Z. Simpson Cox, representing Sen. McFarland: Testimonial should be reversed. We should give testimony to the citizen Nisei and Issei for their proud record.

Edward J. Ennis, chairman, National Committee for Equality in Naturalization: Today we are reaching out for a greater understanding of all men.

Eva B. Adams, administrative assistant to Sen. McCarran: I could tell by tonight the work was not a thankless job.

Hon. Walter H. Judd: This has been the only piece of civil rights legislation passed but it is being criticized because it isn't a Utopia. Those who voted to sustain the Presidential veto (of the bill) were illiberal. We should give it chance to work and correct it as experience dictates. I congratulate the United States for the first time for having no race bias in naturalization and immigration. No human being is barred from American citizenship.

New receipt forms kicked 1953 membership campaign

Innovated at the last National JACL convention, the new 1953 membership receipt forms are now being mailed to chapters, it was announced this week by national JACL director.

In the case of Northern California-Western Nevada and Pacific Southwest districts, distributions will be made through the respective regional offices in San Francisco and Los Angeles.

Satow said that membership fees will remain at $1.50 per year in response to a query if the fee would be reduced in view of the suspension of the JACL Reporter monthly newspaper.

Chapter solicitors were being advised at the same time that subscriptions to the Pacific Citizen, which is a part of the multiple membership receipt form, should be forwarded to the P. C. business office, 253 E. 1st St., Los Angeles 12, Calif.

Bowlers who are planning to participate in the National tournament in San Francisco next February are being reminded that among the rules of participation, membership in the JACL must be of good standing and at least 60 days prior to the tournament.

Specifically, Satow declared, JACL membership for bowlers in compliance with the tournament is Dec. 28, 1952.

Chapter solicitors were also expected to submit money collected from memberships immediately to National Headquarters here.

VERY TRULY YOURS Christmas Party

By Harry K. Honda

Wonder how many Nisei position today to determine whether there is to be a Christmas party for their employees this year . . . There are too many, but the one we pass on started in Hartford, Conn., last year and was a good one.

Later the office parties have been a sad commentary on the meaning and spirit of Christmas . . . Employees as well as employers are beginning to realize the excessive amount of bottled spirits . . . The employer still feels that the festive should be a part of their office morale program . . . "Well, my office staff going to the party," Mr. Employer asks, "sit around?" . . . "Can't have fun?" . . . The Hartford movement suggests the best way in the world—the fun of others have fun . . . Many heads are being urged to open their office parties to underprivileged children. Each town has its community welfare agency, an orphanage possibly or any other group interest to attend Christmas parties . . . The Hartford movement was presented as a "safety measure"—for automobile accidents and traffic fatalities, because of drinking, have spoiled the holiday for so many in just one short second it takes an accident to occur . . . But more than that, it is in keeping with the real joy of Christmas—of making the children happy . . . After all, as kids, the wonders of Christmas were most impressive—the anticipation of gifts, the glitter of lights around a Christmas tree, the copious amount of nuts and candy in red and green boxes . . . Among the adults, Christmas has become such a burden—Christmas cards, gift shopping—but that's another subject and another paragraph.

ADULTS—The imposition of licking stamps and envelopes, addressing and possibly signing the card within a week, is through by this time . . . More thoughtful friends add to suffice for the utterance of the passing year . . . The custom of exchanging Christmas cards outgrowing its character of cheer and goodwill for some cannot be denied . . . They tell you it has become too commercialized . . . The extent is known by a random check of a salesman's collection of greeting cards . . . So many cards have no semblance of Christmas or hint the real meaning of Christmas.

Peace on earth, goodwill to men is a common tribute on Christmas cards . . . A Latin phrase on the same greetings recited by the angels of Bethlehem to the shepherds reads: "et in terra pax hominibus bonae voluntatis" is" . . . "And on earth peace to men of good will" would be a more precise translation . . . The two have a great variance in meaning. The former is applicable to all men—to men, be they good or bad. The latter is applicable to men of goodwill only . . . The latter, to me, appears sound—peace to men of goodwill . . . Men of goodwill deserve peace on earth . . . If anyone comes to the defense of the first phrase, we get into a theological discussion which is hardly a place for me to delve. However, goodwill to all men is a romantic idea—based on the proposition that all men are good and can't do no wrong because men all are created with a little bit of God in themselves. The romanticist forgets that we have freedom of choice in our human make-up—a choice to pick between good and evil.

ONE MORE NOTE—There is to be said of Christmas . . . We must not forget picturesque proportions of stable and manger, Mother and Child . . . "Jesus was born in a barn with only Mary and Joseph and the ox and ass to welcome Him" . . . And a child can ask: "But, barns are so smelly" . . . Nothing sentimental there . . . The child's query and no amount of cologne or perfume will transform the old story of Bethlehem into a garden of delight.

the rest of our readers buy a December issue is that I don't sit on my desk to do my work—that was strictly Hollywood make-believe for convenience of Jack Iwata, Scene photog for Li'l Tokio . . . Incidentally, Shig (Mazawa, managing editor of Scene), I've lost 10 pounds since the photo was taken—the long hours putting the P. C. to bed has started to show its effect. Of course, I ought to lose it, says my kid sis in Chicago.

● GRIPES—Some think statehood for Hawaii in the 83rd Congress won't be easy as it was once pictured in this column . . . Easier in one respect I still think, but assuming the energy to push the enabling act still remains the same.

● TRIVIA—Calendars for 1953 are beginning to show up. Somewhat bewildering—all those dates and only one girl . . . Where is the guy who said Ike was a captive of Taft? . . . I suppose we'll continue to have women sign as treasurer of the U. S. as long as we have a deficit.

Outnumbered 8 to 1 Nisei helps in defense of post

Honolulu

A Honolulu soldier's exploits on an isolated outpost in Korea are described in a recent dispatch from the 3rd Infantry Division which is in the thick of the fighting in Korea.

He is Pfc. Charles H. Nishida, son of Mr. and Mrs. Muraichi Nishida of 1760-C Palolo Ave.

Outnumbered eight to one, Pfc. Nishida and six companions were the only defenders of a 3rd Division listening post that had been cut off from the 7th Regiment.

The enemy assault began at 9:30 p.m. and was met by heavy United Nations fire. Pfc. Nishida and a companion, posted on the flanks of the position, laid down a deadly crossfire and took a heavy toll.

The Chinese Communists withdrew and attacked a second time but again were thrown back by the gallant band of defenders.

At five the next morning a relief platoon managed to reach the embattled listening post in time to help repulse a third and final Red attack. The enemy paid with 35 dead and nine wounded.

Two daughters of Asahi newspaper chain start cross-country U. S. tour

San Francisco

Two attractive Japanese career women brought a refreshing glimpse of democratic Japan as they embarked on a cross-country study tour of the United States. The visitors are Fumiko and Michiko Murayama, whose father is chairman of the Asahi newspaper chain.

While displaying enthusiasm for the American college co-ed wardrobe, both are revolutionary specialists in Japanese Kabuki dances. They may give a few recitals in the U. S.

Both admitted newspapers were close their hearts. Furthermore, they do not plan to be career girls. When their trip is ended, they may consider matrimony. Said younger Fumiko: "And to assist our father as much as possible when we marry, we will marry newspapermen."

Trial of 'walking arsenal' scheduled for May, 1953

Kamloops, B. C.

Court hearing of the trial of 56-year-old Kosaburo Masuda has been scheduled for next May at the preliminary hearing which took place recently.

Masuda was formally charged with murder of his daughter, Mrs. Lily Bing, wife of a Chinese taxi-driver. Mrs. Bing, mother of a three-week-old son, was shot in the back by a shotgun charge fired through her bedroom window on Aug. 7.

Described at that time as a "walking arsenal," the middle-aged Japanese is said to have missed three pursuing policemen and his son-in-law.

George Kobo bangs 700 to cop WLA JACL kegling title; team hits 3223

Los Angeles
"Pie" alleys" seem to contribute the voluminous tallies of scores in the second annual West Los Angeles JACL tournament last Sunday at El Rancho bowl. Leading the field of 30 teams was Kay's Hardware winding up with 3223 including a 1011 game.

Other champions are George Kobo in the singles with a 700 (26) 726; Joe Murakami and Joe Tanaka, 1165 (156) 1321; and Mas Takahashi, all-events.

Kobo's 700 was posted early in competition Saturday, winning both high scratch and singles trophies. He was threatened by Mas Takahashi, however, who pounded out a 661 (52) 713 in the singles race. His effort did not net him all-events.

Joe Tanaka in winning the doubles hit a 264 for a high scratch game of the tournament and a 250 pin from the management. A field of 120 keglers rolled in both the singles and doubles.

Name two gridders to S. C. all-jaysee

Los Angeles

David Yamashiro, 145 pound halfback at Compton College, was among the six Tartars selected by the United Press All-Southern California junior college football team this week. Selections are based on the choices of conference coaches.

Yamashiro carried the ball 289 yards on 50 carries, averaging 5.78 yards per tote. Last year, his teammate Ralph Kubota made the third team but injuries this year has kept him off the playing field for more than half the season.

Umeda bows to Teran, second loss for Nisei bantam in two weeks

Los Angeles

The boxing world was proud of the comeback of Keeny Teran, the Mexican-American who had his own personal battle with heroin the past six months. Teran, battered to the canvas by Tommy Umeda in the sixth round, counter-punched his way to a unanimous 10-round decision last Tuesday night before 6,500 at Olympic Auditorium and the televiewers.

The young Mexican lad was in too good a condition for the 27-year-old Nisei battler who had lost a close fight a week previous to state bantamweight titlist Oscar Torres.

In the eighth, Tommy opened an attack which penned Keeny in the corner. It was here that he began his assault which continued non-stop till the 10th round gong.

In the late rounds, Umeda offered token resistance. If nothing else, as the Rafu Shimpo sports writer reported, "the Hawaiian Nisei proved his durability never going off his feet despite the numerous hard punches."

World Citizen

Masaru Mike Masaoka, national legislative director of the Japanese American Citizens League, is leaving Japan today (Dec. 3) after a two-month visit to this land of his ancestors that has further cemented American-Japanese relations.

Mr. Masaoka has proved himself truly a citizen of the world as he works to deepen the ties of understanding and friendship among the various peoples of the world and to further the cause of world peace. He has achieved great deeds for the citizens of the United States who are of Japanese ancestry and for the non-citizens who will soon be eligible for American citizenship.

Mike, an unassuming man, is of great spiritual stature, and his visit here has done much to bring about closer and even more amicable relations between the United States and Japan. He has told leaders of this country the story of the Japanese Americans—the Nisei—in the United States, of their progress, their respect for the land of their parents, and of their desires for a peaceful, sound world where men of all nations can work in peace and harmony.

Although he takes pride in his Japanese ancestry, Mike is an American through and through. He is a living proof that the United States is truly the great "melting pot," where men and women of every race, creed, color and religion are able to co-exist and co-prosper as equals. His strong belief in the precious nature of American citizenship was responsible in a great measure to his visiting Japan, and his message to the Nisei who have presumedly forfeited their birthright is that they exert every effort to ascertain the legal facts of their case.

Mike has done a splendid job during his short stay here. We are confident he will continue his good work.

New look at 'alien law'

(Editorial)

The Walter-McCarran law, relating to immigration and naturalization, was passed through the congressional wringer as the result of a presidential commission appointed by outgoing Mr. Truman.

Proponents of the Walter-McCarran act, as the immigration bill generally is called, feel that it is the greatest step forward since the days when the U. S. passed the disgraceful Oriental exclusion act. Those opposed to the McCarran act either feel it didn't go far enough, or that it was unfair to certain groups even though making it possible for many loyal residents to become citizens.

The new immigration bill passed over Pres. Truman's veto in one of the biggest battles of the 82nd congress. Although its friends called the act a codification and revision of immigration and naturalization policies, and a strong protection against communists, Pres. Truman thought differently. He denounced it as un-American and discriminatory, and he claimed it worked against certain European groups.

The law becomes effective Dec. 24. In a typically Trumanesque move, the President assigned a commission to "completely restudy the immigration and naturalization policies of the nation." He obviously thus hopes to extend his influence beyond the time he leaves office.

Biggest danger, of course, is that a conservative Congress might find technical reasons to halt benefits of the Walter-McCarran act. Strangely enough, division in Congress was not along party lines. Generally the conservatives fought against any change, or liberalization of immigration laws.

When the new hearings open, after the next congress convenes, there is likely to be a great and confusing cloud of claims and counter-claims. Spokesmen for religious, welfare, relief, legal, labor, veterans, farm, displaced persons and peace movement groups have been promised a chance to introduce testimony and to air their feelings on both the Walter-McCarran bill and any proposed bills or amendments to immigration and naturalization laws.

There is a very real danger that the advances promised by the act will be lost or postponed if Congress throws the hearings open to every pressure group with even a minor interest in the subject. Those who fought so long for a progressive law must not relax and assume that full victory is won.

Often, when opponents of a certain bill lose their fight in congress they manage to hold up benefits of the bill through one subterfuge or another. It might pay to watch the maneuverings of the Walter-McCarran act opponents in the opening days of the coming congress.

To Cherish Democracy

By Bill Hosokawa

Denver

The man who publishes one of the world's great newspapers, Arthur Hays Sulzberger of the New York Times, spoke in Denver recently. I had the privilege of hearing him. Mr. Sulzberger, a quiet, gray man with a gentle sense of humor, spoke of many things. He defended the publishing industry, refuting President Truman's charges that America's newspapers are the kept press of the advertisers.

He admonished newspapermen to be alert, fair, studious. He cited the specialists on his newspaper who, by long and intelligent study, have learned as much about the subjects they specialize in as the experts they interview. And then Mr. Sulzberger said a surprising thing.

He said it helps sometimes for a newspaper reporter to be an underdog, or a member of a minority group. It makes them more aware of the nation's problems, he said, more zealous about such things as democracy and principles. He said he himself was a member of a minority. I don't remember the exact words, but Mr. Sulzberger said he was welcome in some clubs as a guest but not as a member. He said he couldn't buy a home in certain sections of his city, and his children could not attend certain schools. He associated with some men in business, but he was an outsider to their social circles.

All this, he said, makes him cherish democracy the more, more understanding of its shortcomings and its importance to all of us.

I marveled that the respected publisher of a powerful, wealthy newspaper, held up in schools of journalism as an example of professional excellence, should have problems of race and creed even as you and I. And I was glad that he spoke out without fear, anger or bitterness, as dispassionately but strongly as one of his newspaper's editorials. I think I came away, too, with a better understanding of the importance of democracy.

In a house like ours where kids are all over the place, we're more aware of the Yuletide's approach. Of course the kids spend a lot of time in anticipating the gifts they're going to receive, but this year things almost got out of hand.

The cause of it all was Susan, who at the age of 8 is something of a romanticist and dreamer as well as a tomboy. She got her head that she wanted a real, live, hay-eating reindeer for Christmas. She's madly in love with the western life, and what would be more natural than finding a reindeer her Christmas tree?

I think we've talked about accepting a watch—Mouse type—this year. I'm not quite sure how we'll handle the horse problem.

Which reminds me of Mechau's playful trick. He took a little girl and slipped into her ear: "Tell daddy to buy you a pony for your birthday." Fortunately he practiced his prank on the people he quite well.

Alice has been doing her Christmas shopping on days when the two older ones are in school. This means she has to tow Pete along. Now think this gives Pete an extra track in finding out what the rest of the kids are getting for Christmas. The older ones were trying to pump him on other day but Pete dismissed them: "I can't see on top counter yet," he said.

What's Up?

By Lawrence Nakatsuka

Honolulu

Times have changed, as the expression goes, since Pearl Harbor Day 11 years ago. I remember that Sunday morning because I was there when the attack came.

More to the point, I should say that I was sleeping at the moment Japanese planes flashed over the island and blasted Pearl Harbor and other military bases.

An hour later, the jangling of the phone in my home broke my Sabbath slumber. I sleepily answered the call. My city editor's voice roared, "Get down to the office right away!" My classic reply—which I still haven't lived down to this day—was, "What's up?"

By now, white puffs of anti-aircraft shells bursting high up told me we were being attacked.

I called a cab. One came in a hurry. Recalling now, I'm amazed any taxi responded on that terribly confused morning.

Within minutes, I was driven to the Star-Bulletin city room. Several reporters already there were busily and efficiently rounding up the biggest war story ever. I began taking stories phoned in from the hospitals, where casualties were mounting.

Before long, the first extra was on the streets of Honolulu, even as the last waves of enemy planes were still hammering away at "Battleship Row" at Pearl Harbor five miles away.

A woman reporter returned from the Emergency Hospital. She collapsed just as she reached the City room . . . she had seen too much blood, and mangled bodies.

I rushed to the Japanese consulate general when I heard trouble might start there. The consul general weakly assured me he thought all the shooting was "maneuvers" by American forces.

When I went back to the consulate the second time, police were raiding the offices. Inside they found the staff burning papers.

I wrote the story of the raid for the next extra. I believe the Star-Bulletin put out three extras that day. It extra-ed before any other newspaper in the country on the Pearl Harbor attack.

Somewhere, among my old papers, are those precious war extras.

Next day, the Star-Bulletin put out more extras. Everyone was jittery because rumors of sabotage and fifth column activities had spread through the city.

Issei and Nisei alike were suspect from the outset, and they could do nothing to counter the rumors.

Many weeks passed before these stories could be pinned down as outright lies. But the damage had been done. So the cloud of suspicion hung over the Japanese community for a long time.

In those uncertain times, some stout friends of the Nisei would not desert them. They reaffirmed their faith in the loyalty of Americans of Japanese ancestry —a faith vindicated by the long record displayed through the war.

Now, 11 years later, Pearl Harbor Day still remains in my memory, as it always will. But how times have changed!

Who today questions the loyalty of the Nisei to this country?

If another war comes, others perhaps will become victims of unthinking and hasty judgment. It is consolation for the Nisei that they would escape being victimized in the next war if they are aware that others become the scapegoats in place.

on the American people the clear and obstinate truth that Asians are an integral part of the world community.

The Japanese American community gratefully pays tribute to Congressman Walter H. Judd, who helped to bring into being not only a new respect for persons of Asian ancestry but a fresh understanding of the meaning of brotherhood.

Mike Masaoka

Probably no individual has contributed more to the welfare of persons of Japanese ancestry in the United States than Mike Masaoka.

Highest on any honor roll of his contributions is his leadership which culminated in the congressional enactment over the President's veto of legislation providing for racial equality in naturalization and immigration.

By eliminating race as a qualification for citizenship, for the first time in American history loyal resident alien Japanese may become naturalized citizens and several hundred legal discriminations which have humiliated and restricted them for more than half a century are nullified and invalidated. More than 85,000 alien Japanese may now share in the citizenship of their children in the land of their adoption.

By providing immigration opportunities for all independent nations, the Japanese Exclusion Act of 1924 which helped ignite the spark of World War II is repealed and the Japanese people are welcomed into the United States on the same basis as the nationals of other countries. Though the numbers to be admitted are few, the principle of national acceptance and equality will contribute much to future peace and security in the Pacific.

For courage and vision in the darkest hours, for leadership in the common fight for equality and justice, for equal status in and under the law for Americans of Japanese ancestry, for making the American dream more meaningful to all Americans, and for exemplifying democracy in action, best, the Japanese American community gratefully expresses its appreciation to Mike Masaoka.

Edward J. Ennis

Following World War II, the gallantry of the Nisei in combat and the loyalty of the Issei parents won the admiration of all Americans. Edward J. Ennis was among the first to advocate the repeal of the bars against the naturalization of alien Japanese as recognition of their contributions to the American way of life.

He assumed the leadership in organizing a hundred distinguished Americans into a committee for Equality in Naturalization and as its active member cooperated closely with the Japanese American Citizens League in drafting and securing congressional approval for legislation embodying the principle of citizenship through naturalization for all qualified residents, without regard to race, creed, or national origin.

Enactment of the statute features quality in naturalization as a tribute to the American way of life and democracy of which Edward J. Ennis is a recognized pioneer.
