Equal rights (for women) amendment

"Keep women out of college . . . Cut down the number of the women allowed to go to coeducational schools" is the recommendation made by Professor Philip Ward Burton of Syracuse University in a recent issue of This Week as a solution for the anticipated overcrowding of our universities.

This proprosal is only a slight indication of what similar lines unless they are protected from discrimination by an amendment (SJ 80), is now on the Senate Calendar and may come up for consideration at any time. It reads: "Eqaulity of rights under the law States or by any state on account of sex."

The lack of such a guarantee against discrimination makes it possible for any state legislature or Congress to pass a law limiting women's educational opportunities, or barring them from certain types of work, prohibiting the employment of married women on the grounds of public welfare, health, and so

You will recall that discrimination because of religion was ruled out by the First Amendment to the Constitution; then discrimination because of race or color was outlawed by the 14th Amendment.

The support for the Equal Rights Amendment in Congress is most gratifying and it has staunch supporters in the Senate. In the House of Representatives, 290 members are pledged to vote for it. Please write to your senators and congressmen, asking them to support SJ 80.

In the eyes of other nations who look to us for leadership, this places us at a disadvantage. We have lagged behind, while Burma, Egypt, Greece, Japan, West Germany and Pakistan have given constitutional equality to women.

There are, however, some members of both the Senate and the House, who are attempting to add a rider to the Equal Rights Amendment, which would provide that it should not be construed "to impair any benefits, rights or exemptions, now or hereafter conferred by law on persons of the female sex." If such a rider is added, it would annul the amendm ent and even worse, it would write sex discrimination into the Constitution of the United States.

Glenn M. Anderson, endorsed Democrat running for the office of lieutenant governor, this week called for leadership in the field of civil rights.

Speaking before a community, business and labor leaders' gathering at the Whitcomb Hotel in San Francisco as keynote speaker, Anderson called for state leadership in the field of human rights and human relations.

"The problem," Anderson told can happen to women along the San Francisco gathering, "will not be solved with only a Fair Employment Practice bill. "We must have laws which are vigorously enforced to forbid discrimination in the use of public accommodations. We have such laws; the Republican administration has not enforced them with proper vigor.

"Minority representation on commissions and other government bodies is essential. In government agencies dealing with human relations, participation of minority representatives is vital.

"We must have a Democratic victory for all our state-wide candidates . . . a Democratic State Legislature so that we can implement our program of human dignity and human rights," he concluded.

THE GOOD OLD DAYS?—The orchestra was swinging through a lively foxtrot as we entered the Albany Hotel ballroom, but no one was dancing. Everyone seemed to be waiting for some couple to start things off, and no one was quite in the mood to take the initiative.

"It's like the good old days among the Nisei," Dr. John Rademaker observed. "Remember how we had to exhort them not to waste good music at their dances?" Remember, indeed. Sometimes a third of the evening would have slipped by before anyone got up the courage to get out on the floor and stop the waste of fine music. An donce a couple or two or three broke the ice, the others followed quickly.

John Rademaker had good reason to recall those days when the Nisei were younger and shyer. If you'll pardon the expression, nearly a quarter century ago he earned his doctorate at the University of Washington with a thesis on Japanese farmers in the state of Washington. And in the course of gathering his material, he got to know a large number of Nisei both urban and rural and gained a deep insight into their problems, inhibitions and triumphs.

He was visiting Denver for the regional convention of the American Association of University Professors which, by coincidence, took place at the same time as the thirteenth annual Nisei Intermountain Collegiate Conference. He was attending his meeting as head of the department of sociology at Willamette University in Salem, Ore., but made time to slip away long enough to attend the NICC dance.

NEW ERA — Actually, as Dr. Rademaker soon discovered, the Nisei today are quite different in many respects from their predecessors of the mid-thirties. Not only did they refuse to waste music, they made good use of it with considerable verve and skill.

Nor are their dancing habits the only thing that has changed. They waded into discussions about their vocational futures with the same forthrightness.

Yet, underlying the convention seemed to be a vague and gnawing doubt: What effect would their Japanese ancestry have on their efforts to make a living by the skills they were acquiring in school?

They found reassurance in the individual successes represented by attorneys, a physician and a dentist, a sales executive, school teacher, city planner, engineers, a geologist, a science researcher, sundry others. There was not time enough to hear how each of them overcame obstacles to attain their present eminence—these would have been fascinating stories—but it was enough to hear them tell of their work and the qualities necessary to succeed.

ADVICE - Running like a thread through the reports of these various Nisei professional people were these two thoughts:

1. Being a Nisei is not an insurmountable handicap in vocational success. In fact, once you have demonstrated your competence, no one seems to remember o rrealize that you're "different."

2. There's always a place for the well-qualified individual. Don't be too quick to cry discrimination; rather, look to yourself for shortcomings that keep you from qualifying for the job you seek.

As Dr. Rademaker could observe, these are postwar phenomena. Time was that Nisei in demanding professional positions were the exception. Now they are almost commonplace. And that, as the students well know, is the way it should be. Looking back on the advances of the last decade, it is a thrilling thing to contemplate on the progress that might be made in the next ten years.

THE REASON BEHIND THE NEW LOOK . . .

"When the editors away, the copy boy will play." Which just about sums up the somewhat different looking Pacific Citizen this week and for the next three weeks.

The editor, Harry Honda, as most of you have heard by this time, is honeymooning in the midwest.

During his absence, the edition will be put to press by Mrs. Sue Kunitomi Emery and this writer who answers to all sorts of names but who is legally known as George Yoshinaga.

One thing we're sure of. That is, the temporary "new look" will be greeted with varied reactions.

As in the case of the new sack dresses, one group might nod their head in approval. Another might shrug their shoulders and emit a sound which could best be described as a blunt, "heh."

To the latter group we say, "don't fret, there's two more issues yet."

Along the Entertainment Front

This has been a year for Oriental actresses, particularly for those of Japanese ancestry. Miyoshi Umeki has won an Oscar as the "best supporting actress" for her role in "Sayonara." Eiko Ando stars with John Wayne in 20th Fox's forthcoming "The Barbarian and the Geisha," playing the role of Okichi, the geisha whose love for the American pro-consul, Townsend Harris, is now a part of Japanese legend. Michi Kobi, a Nisei, plays the role of a Tokyo girl in love with an American Marine in "Dateline Tokyo," the Nacirema production which was inspired by last year's Girard case. Milko Taka has been touring more than a score of European capitals, making personal appearances with "Sayonara." In faroff India, Yoko Tani has just completed her role of the Japanese girl in love with a Eritish officer in J. Arthur Rank's "The Wind Cannot Read."

Of all of these actresses, Miss Kobi is perhaps the only one with a sturdy background of dramatic training. She left a war relocation center during World War II to go to New York to study for a career in the theater. She performed at the dramatic workshop of the New School in New York, and was cast in a number of off-Broadway plays. Her best role was the lead in the Ted Pollock drama of interracial love, "Wedding in Japan," in which she was a girl in Tokyo who falls in love with a Negro GI. Michi Kobi was Lotus Blossom in the Larry Parks company of "Teahouse of the August Moon" and has been seen in a number of TV leads, most recently in "The Californians" and on "Climax." She is now rehearsing for her Studio One appearance with Sessue Hayakawa in another GI-Japanese love drama, "End of the Summer Season," for May 12.

Eiko Ando, who makes her movie debut in "The Barbarian and the Geisha," was a lightly-clad showgirl at Tokyo's Nichigeki and had studied voice in Europe. Miiko Taka, who got the lead opposite Marlon Brando with no theatrical ex- of the job of hiding the eggs as "Umbrella" is based upon the life phone call from a local attorney perience, whatever, worked in a Los Angeles travel agency when she was discovered by Warner Brothers scout. Yoko Tani, daughter of a Japanese embassy employe in Paris, was a ballet dancer, touring with the Scandinavian Ballet. She was appearing in a cabaret when she was offered a role in a play in Paris, and this led to the role of Lotus Blossom in "Teahouse of the August Moon." She has been in a number of films, including "The Quiet American." Miyoshi Umeki, a favorite with GI audiences in Japan, came to the U.S. as a singer, getting her first break in a San Fernando valley night spot.

But the actress of Asian descent who may make the most of this year of opportunity is a girl of Chinese-French ancestry named France Nuyen. Eighteen months ago Miss Nuyen and her invalid mother faced poverty in their home in Marseilles, France. Then her father, an itinerant Chinese seaman who had obtained American citizenship, sent for his family. France Nuyen, at 16, came to live in the slums of New York.

France get work as a servant, then clerked in a bakery where she could eat sweets to supplement her meager diet. Then she saved enough money to sign up for a modeling course. Her pictur, was seen by Joshua Logan, director of "South Pacific" who was going to make a movie version of this most successful of Rodgers and Hammerstein musicals. France was signed for the role of the Tonkingese girl, Liat, daughter of Bloody Mary in "South Pacific."

This past week France Nuyen was in Denver to attend a regional premiere of "South Pacific." She has been signed for what may be one of the outstanding roles of the year for an Oriental actress, the part of Suzie Wong in the play which Paul Osborn (who also wrote the screenplay for "Sayomara") is making out of the Richard Mason best-seller, "The World and Suzie Wong." This is the story of a young Chinese prostitute whose love leads to the rehabilitation of a British painter, a part which Richard Burton will take on Broadway. Joshua Logan will direct.

Meanwhile, Rodgers and Hammerstein are casting their musical production for the fall, "The Flower Drum Song," which has been adapted from a novel about San Francisco's Chinatown. Pat Suzuki, one of the year's discoveries among popular singers, has been offered one of the leads, while Michi Kobi and Reiko Sato are testing for important roles. Yuriko, the leading dancer of "The King and I", already has been engaged by R&H for their latest musical. The team of Rodgers and Hammerstein may be the most successful in the theater's history, but they have enjoyed only indifferent success in recent years with "Me and Juliet" and "Pipe Dream." They may return to the level of their earlier successes with another musical in the Oriental idiom of "The King and I."

The problem facing Oriental actresses in the films and TV is, of course, the scarcity of available roles. The public, after all, is bound to get tired of the Madame Butterfly theme. Both Miss Nuyen and Miss Umeki have stated for publication that they hope to play American Indian girls, but there aren't too many such roles in dramatic literature.

The National Director's Report

By Masao Satow

Just as delegates at the Pacific Northwest District Council concluded their business session at Hood River, a week's steady downpour let up as if prearranged to enable all of us to view the apple and cherry blossoms in full bloom across the peaceful Hood River Valley. Nice timing, George Nakamura of Mid Columbia and President Nob Hamada. District Council Chairman Henry Kato and Grasham-Troutdale Prexy Jack Ouchida were on hand the night before to greet us at the Portland airport and take us to the informal reception diner set up by Portland Chapter 1000 Club Chairman George Azumano and President Kimi Tambara, with PNW DC 1000 Club Chairman Dr. Joe Onchi presiding. For DC Chairman Henry Kato the forthcoming 15th National Biennial Convention will be their first since he helped to put on the 6th Biennial at Fortland in 1940.

A desert sandstorm reminded us of Amache Relocation Center days as we proceeded to Indio to meet Tom Sakai and members of his Coachella Valley Chapter Board. For Tom this is his second round as President. A delegation of six JACL-ers from Imperial Valley headed by President Tak Momita joined in for the informal discussion of JACL affairs. The recent Imperial Chapter picnic brought together some one hundred residents of the area for the first time postwar. Tak Momita also reported that 152 feet of the 184 ft. Calipatria Memorial flagrale has been subscribed. With the spread about this fine community project in the AMERICAN WEEKLY, the flag at sea level should be assured by dedication time June 14.

Like the meeting at Indio, the Venice-Culver gathering brought together the hard core of staunch long time JACL-ers, plus a number of hard-working earnest newcomers. President Pete Furuya is one of these newcomers, but makes up in enthusiam. We shared the program with a colorful film on Japanese kimonos, courtesy Japan Air Lines. Incidentally, Fred Takata accuses us of wrecking his diet, but who can resist the tempting after meeting snacks our chapters put out? Having the George Inagakis feed us royally before the Venice-Culver meeting didn't help Fred either.

President Frank Suzukida of Downtown Los Angeles promised more action as we met informally at luncheon with the faithful and brought them up to date on inside JACL matters. National President Dr. Roy Nishikawa and Fred Takata joined us in Gardena as we met with JACL stalwarts to consider an effective program to realize the JACL potential in this community. Like other communities, long time JACL-ers are giving leadership to many other community affairs. The Chapter will shift over into a board system to insure more admistrative unity and continuity.

We are indebted to President Moto Asakawa and wife Florence for making our brief stay in San Diego enjoyable. A good group of members turned out for the dinner meeting, including the three charming chapter representatives to the recent Hi Co conference. San Diego is proud of its Credit Union as a real service to its members. We were happy to renew acquaintances on this side of the country with Hideo and Yuri Yoshihara, formerly of Dayton, where Hideo served as Chapter President. In San Diego he is one of Convair's top engineers. Fred Takata makes a good navigator and copilot.

A group of floor scraping bowing JACL Board members in yukatas and kimonos, led by President Ken Yamaguchi caught us speechless as we walked into Tom Ito's home in Pasadena. All of us guests, President Roy Nishikawa and Alice, Blanche Shiosaki, Fred Takata, and the Deacon, were provided with yukatas for atmosphere and comfort, and the Japanese language took a real beating as we exchanged pleasantries over sake. We were then whisked to th Oishi Sukiyaki Parlor, specially opened for a one night stand by proprietors Jiro and Anna Oishi. Ken Yamaguchi as shikaisha proved he | women different from those of New | next, Dr. Natsui said she thinks | conditions. could be as Japanesy as any Nisei we have met. Following the soring of colored films of the chapter's recent 1000 Club luau by Tets Lvasaki, former EDC Chairman while residing in Philadelphia, we suddenly found ourselves transferred to a Las Vegas atmosphere with everyone provided with three million dollars in greenbacks, rate of exchange - three million to one. The usually sedate wives made it tough on our eardrums as they "talked" to the galloping dominos, while our National President cornered the 250 grand notes in a poker game. Ken Yamaguchi and Tom Ito suggested we wash off all the evil contamination of gambling with a swim in the Ito pool, so what could we subservient JACL staff members, including Branche and Fred, do but to jump in. This at two ayem in the morning. Thank you, Pasadena for an unusual and hilarious evening.

Long Beach-Harbor District President Dr. Dave Miura called an informal meeting of the Board at his home to discuss various local and national JACL items, but even as we met, the Chapter's Youth Commission was sponsoring a benefit movie assisted by some of the Board members. Looks like Long Beach is serious about retaining the PSW Chapter of the Year honors.

This past week also saw us conferring with Sue Joe of Long Beach on the national youth program, giving our blessings to Harry Honda and Mikie on their happy marriage, officiated by 1000 Clubber Father Clement. VERY TRULY YOURS:

On polling JACLers over U.S.-Japan affairs

With the Salt Lake national convention 16 weeks away, interest should be mounting on the question: should JA-CL enter into the international political arena? This issue looms to be one of the key policy matters that will-not be easily tabled.

Those opposed to an lowing persons: that the group's participating in foreign affairs would characterize it in the public mind as one with strong Japanese sympathies.

The pro - international segment, on the other hand, felt than an existing, but willy-nilly public identification of Japanese Americans with Japanese in Japan precluded any attempt to remain "neutral"—and, in fact, made it incumbent upon Japanese Americans to keep themselves fully informed on race relations here, and to try to maintain undestanding and friendship between the United States and Japan.

Suzukida (brother of Downtown Los Angeles chapter presiednt Frank) added that the latter group made reference to the many complaints received by congressmen from American textile firms which claim that Japanese imports ruin their industry. Such charges, it was slated, invariably are accompanied by damaging character attacks on the Japanese in general. Such insinuations have seriously lowered the high esteem of the Nisei, draining the resrvoir of goodwill built by the brilliant war record and exemplary peacetime conduct.

Hence, it was suggested that a Gallup - type poll of chapter members to determine the wishes and thinking of members be made. While such ininformation may be useful and representative in some respects, our feeling is that the final answer seems ensconsed in the JACL preamble: "in order to foster American democracy."

AN ASSIGNMENT TO GET AWAY FROM IT ALL

As the Trade Fair was winding itself up in a glorious finale, one of those odd picture assignments came along; the kind that will cause a fellow to go along with it partly from curiosity. A tavern quite far away from our usual haunts was having a grand opening, and there were pictures to be made.

Although not everyone in this new place would be absolute strangers, here was a chance to make new acquain- the Crown Prince," commented the intelligence or skill of the cidal brute that made the best ances, sort of business and pleasure deal. And, like a breath of fresh air, chance to get away from some of the same old faces who won't speak to a feller, or the types who hide behind thick glasses and pretend not to see him come in. And sometimes to go far afield is to become aware of what a small world it is.

We hadn't been around the new place too long, when someone mentioned the name, "Pat Hagiwara" and turning to me, asked if I knew of or had heard of this Pat. Well, every Nisei in Seattle knows Pat has just recently retired from his term as Commander of the Nisei Vets.

So this felier is talking about the Pat Hagiwara (the same) who was a sergeant in the Alaska National Guard during those touchy days just before and after Pearl Harbor when the guard was alerted.

One black blustery night this guardsman was walking his post on a dock. Don't remember which place, he mentioned several: Haines, Chilkoot, Barracks, Seward, Anchorage. His wide brimmed stetson campaign hat was firmly strapped to his chin, but a sudden gust sputniked the hat out on the black waters and he was unable to retrieve it.

"There's lots of reason I'll never forget that Pat," he said, "but one of them is - you know that GI so and so, he was supply sergeant -- got up a statement of charges on that hat and I had to pay it! Two fifty is a lot of money when a guy gets only $21 a month."

He promised to look up his former supply sergeant; to shake him by the hand of course, but if he doesn't, Pat may want to know the guy's name is Neil Bredock.

On short acquaintance in a neighborhood pub, one can also meet characters that one doesn't forget easily.

CHARACTERS NOT EASILY FORGOTTEN

Such a character is a little pug nose jockey-sized kind of guy about five feet two and 110 pounds soaking wet. We remember when a fellow had to be five-ten to even get to Marine Corps boot camp in the old days. But this half pint was a Marine Corps flyer in two wars. Still a youngster ,they must have robbed the cradle to get him in War II from which he emerges as a 1st lieutenant. Then, as a reservist, joined the Korean unpleasantness, and came out a major with a chestful of ribbons and flying citations. Participated in the island hopping campaigns, and jet piloted through the biggest air battles of the Korean conflict, on both land and carrier based planes.

"All the way through, never got a scratch," he said. But we think the scratches are where they dont' show.

Every few weeks of Korean flying earned a few days off in Tokyo. Do yer best to try to blow in the accumulated 15 or 20 hundred before going back. Nevertheless, in spite of everything, wound up with $8,000 in the sock at time of separation. Left most of it with dad in New England. Set out to see USA as a civilian. Got off train at Chicago. Wound up on skid row and in the bucket. A Chicago police captain put him on a bus, care of the driver, provided he get a ticket for some place far away from Chicago, in this case Seattle. After a stay in Seattle, pooled resources with a new buddy and had $7 left after buying two tickets to Florida. They starved out the trip rather than send home for a fresh bite out of the nest egg. But there followed many periods of lucky fortunes and famine. And escapades. Stay out of Texas jails. They are the worst.

At the tavern's grand opening, there was some dancing, which is not just according to the rules for taverns. Some of the girls kidded the small fellow. "All those years as a flyer in the Marines and you can't dance?" His simple retort: "I was too busy fighting," We can believe it, as the salient facts of his boozy yarn check out 100 per cent.

The nest egg long since gone, the ex-major wears a hard hat and packs steel rods on his back on a construction job. No bitterness, no regrets, just living it up as far as a working man's dollar will go. "Nuts," he said, "some people wouldn't even trust me with one of those cheap planes on a crop dusting job."

Just as always suspected - some of us make our contribution to society early in life and then slip into happy oblivion.

George Matsui, who stars in the role of Prince Chulalongkorn in the light opera "King and I", is receiving good notices from the metropolitan press after the opening night performance. The opera is now playing at the Philharmonic Aud.

Dick Williams, Mirror News entertainment editor wrote "Fourteen year old George Matsui, a student at Hollenbeck Jr. High School, in his first stage production (although he has been on TV and in Japanese movies) makes a convincing prince."

"George Matsui is winning as Patterson Greene of the Examiner.

Michiko, who staged the dances for the Los Angeles performance also caught the eyes of Williams who wrote of the Uncle Tom's Cabin sequence, "It is a bizarre and beautiful piece of fantasy and Michiko and a large company perform it impeccably."

The production is scheduled for a five-week performance.

BEST WISHES TO MR. AND MRS. HARRY HONDA

Your PC ed Harry K. Honda finally bit the matrimonial dust and has joined the ranks of the "ball and chain" by saying "I do" with lovely Misako Mayumi last Saturday at St. Francis Xavier Chapel, known to most of us as Maryknoll Church.

Father Clement performed the nuptial rite. He delivered words of wisdom to the newly-weds and to the audience in Japanese. It was indeed a beautiful afternoon for a marriage ceremony and guite a "reunion" for the rest of us who haven't seen each other for sometime. The JACL brass, from national director Mas Salow down were present. Among them were Dr. and Mrs. Roy M. Nishikawa, Mr. and Mrs. Saburo Kido, George Inagaki, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Chuman, Mr. and Mrs. Kango Kun'tsugu, Tats Kushida, Fred Takata, Dr. and Mrs. Tom Watanabe, and Mr. and Mrs. Dick Fujioka, to mention a few.

By the time this column gets into print the Hondas should be somewhere in the midwest and east enjoying a three weeks' honeymoon without a care in the world. Darn lucky people! Brother, them are the best days of your life.

Harry just about brought up the end of the line as far as the Quixotics are concerned—a bachelor's club he was responsible in forming almost a decade ago. "Now he's one of us sufferers," his Quix friends kid him.

We'd like to extend our best wishes again to Mickey and congratulations to Harry on their marriage and wish them long life and happiress. Until they come out of tehir first throbs of marital bliss we'll all miss the guy.

$67,000 AND NO HEIR TO PASS IT ON

The other day we were chatting with attorney Frank Chuman, legal counselor for the JACL, on the peculiar stubborness of some Issei who feel "robbed" if they are forced to write out their will. Consequently, in some cases the next of kin have difficulty in claiming an estate which is rightfully theirs. However, in instances where there are no heirs to take over, there are methods in which groups or individuals could benefit.

The case in point we discussed with Chuman is that of a 76-year old bachelor Issei who died last week leaving an estate of $67,837 in cold cash, securities and bonds. When the hotel clerk discovered the body of Hyohei Kasai slumped over his bed eight days after he had died, found under the mattress were bank bocks, brokerage holdings, stock certificates all crammed in a paper box.

It is quite obvious that since there was no will and no apparent heir in this country or in Yamanashi, Japan, from where Mr. Kasai came half a century ago, the estate will be turned over to the state. It is sheer stupidity, on the part of the deceased commented Chuman, since the money could be well used by philanthropic organizations such as the Shonien child care center, the International Institute, Japanese Chamber of Commerce, JACL, or the veterans associations through the simple drafting of a will.

We can only add that the name of Hyohei Kasai could have been remembered by the recipients of his charitable gesture had he done what his few friends had been urging him to do: write a will.

This way, Mr. Kasai remains a dishwasher soon forgotten who amassed a sizeable fortune through hard work only to die without enjoying the fruits of his labor.

Secretaries and more secretaries . . .

From various correspondence received, it appears that we are confusing some people with our many convention secretaries! We do admit having many capable ones. Since the normal load on the convention board secretary is usually heavy, I have encouraged each committee engaged in correspondence to have their own sceretary. As a result, our secretarial roster boasts of: convention correspondence secretary, Grace Kasai; convention recording secretary, Tomoko Yano; and Sue Kaneko secretary to the convention chairman-myself. Toshi Odow is secretary to the booklet committee and Alyce Watanabe acting for the Queen Contest Committee. She now has a new assignment as the person in charge of the complete convention schedule for the Queen, from hair appointments to watching for spots on her apparels. Each one is doing her job, and we could not do without any of them.

'Getting to Know You' . . .

Mary Ujifusa, one of our younger set JACL members, who is chairing this event, has let it be known the mixer theme will be "Getting to Know You." Can't reveal her secrets, but their plans indicate a fun-packed hilarious evening following the sequences of the "King and I." Just leave it to the youths for originality and versatile thinking. Al Sedgley's 10-piece orchestra has been booked for the dance.

PHILADELPHIA. - A new antibiotic from Japan has shown a marked inhibitory effect against animal cancers and gives promise of helping children whose leukemia becomes resistant to presently used chemicals.

Four research specialists of the Sloan-Kettering Institute said in a report to the American Assn. for Cancer Research that 16 of 28 different types of transplanted animal cancers were retarded markedly by the new agent, known as mitomycin C.

Of the 16, nine were destroyed and seven were inhibited 75 per cent or more in their growth.

The report by Dr. H. Christine Reilly, Dr. Kanematsu Sugiura, Dr. Dorris Hutchinson and Dr. C. Chester Stock said mitomycin C was the most effective antibiotic yet tried against these animal cancers.

Mitomycin C was discovered in Japan and is being tested at Sloan-Kettering at the request of the Kyowa Fermentation Industry Co., a Japanese pharmaceutical firm. It-is available only in limited quantities at present, the report

It said laboratory studies showed that 25 per cent of mice with leukemia which responds to 6-MP, the most effective drug against acute leukemia in man also will respond to the new chemical, the report added.

"This gives promise of being able to obtain further control of diseases in children whose leukemia becomes resistant to presently used chemicals," Sloan-Kettering

Maxwell M. Rabb

LAST WEEK, the White House announced the resignation of Maxwell M. Rabh as Secretary to the Cabinet, effective in mia-May, in order to resume the private practice of law in New York City.

Usually, appointments and resignations of high Administration personnel have little direct interest to Americans of Japanese ancestry. But the resignation of the 47-year old Bostonian means that Japanese Americans generally and the Japanese American Citizens League in particular have lost their most important contact in the White House.

EVER SINCE JACL'S Washington representative was introduced to Max Rabb, as he is affectionately known in the nation's capital, by Irving Ferman, the American Civil Liberties Union Washington representative, in the early days of the Eisenhower Administration, the then associate counsel to the President has been an interested and sympathetic friend to the problems and the aspirations of Americans of Japanese ancestry.

At the 14th Biennial National JACL Convention which was held in San Francisco two years ago, he was the Convention Banquet speaker who suggested that perhaps Americans of Japanese ancestry might well contribute to a better understanding of the United States to the Japanese and of Japan to Americans as part of the President's People-To-People program of international goodwill. He himself was honored with a certificate for his contributions to better race relations by the JACL

At the Convention, he became personally acquainted with JACL leaders. On his return to Washington, he went out of his way to tell the President, Cabinet officers, and other high Government officials not only of the JACL but also of Japanese Americans in this country. Around the White House, he became known as JACL's charnjuon.

LAST FALL, HE attended the First International Nisei Convention in Tokyo as the President's personal representative. While in Japan, he met with many of her leaders, including the Emperor, the Prime Minister, and Foreign Minister.

Profoundly impressed, since his return, he has taken every opportunity to siress the value of Japanese-United States good relations. Indeed, it has been observed by many Washingtonians that no Covernment official ever returned with more enthusiasm and sympathy for Japan's people and problems than

Max Rabb. White House councils will be missed, not only by Japanese

WHILE THERE IS no question that his presence in the White House councils will be missed, not only by Japanese Americans but also by others of goodwill toward all men, officials and members of the JACL join with their fellow Americans in wishing him well as he joins the New York law firm of Strook and Strook and Levan as a partner.

We are confident that he will add to the stature of his chosen profession in his new association.

IN ACCEPTING THE resignation, the President wrote Mr. Rabb that "it has been a truly large service that you have rendered-not only to me but to the members of the Cabinet, your other associates, and the nation. . . .

". . . . As you review in years to come the many complex problems trat have almost constantly engaged our attention, your awareness of the role of the Cabinet in solving them should give you a very rewarding feeling. . . ."

Mr. Rabb, in tendering his resignation, wrote thanking the President for the opportunity to be the first to serve as Cabinet Secretary, a post created by the Chief Executive almost five years ago: "You have changed the Cabinet from a somewhat haphazard, inconclusive conclave into an effective, vital coordinating body."

ONE OF THE FIRST and original Eisenhower-for-President boosters, he has served the Administration since its inception in one capacity or another.

Of special interest to JACLers are his efforts in the field of civil and human rights and immigration.

Mr. Rabe was charged with the responsibility for ending race discrimination in Washington, D.C., and in Federal establishments throughout the nation. He was also the President's liaison officer with the President's Committee on Government Contracts, which has made great strides in ending racial and other discrimination by governmental contractors. He is credited with having nad much to do with setting up the Refugee Relief Act of 1953, and also with the Administration's proposals for liberalization of the Immigration and Nationality (Walter-McCarran) Act of 1952 by increasing the number of immigrants from Japan and the Far East, among other provisions.

A NATIVE OF BOSTON, Massachusetts, Mr. Rabb is a graduate of Harvard College and the Harvard School of Law. | shimura will greet the pioneers He has served as secretary to Sinclair Weeks, then a United States Senator and now Secretary of Commerce, and as secretary to Henry Cabot Lodge, then a United States Senator and now the United States Ambassador to the United Nations.

During the first (1952) Eisenhower campaign, he managed the President's national headquarters and served as the righthand man to Mr. Lodge, the President's campaign manager.

In joining the New York law firm, it is said that he declined some glittering offers from companies that had dealings with the Federal Government. His action in this regard is spical of Max Rabb, who is more concerned with the welfar; of his fellowmen than he is in his own.
