'HISTORY PROJECT' FUND BUILDING UP, NOW AT $84,000

Minimum Goal of $100,000 by July 1 Appears Very Likely

SAN FRANCISCO .- The JACL Japanese History Project fund drive is a little over eight months old and this week the total reads 684,370,38. National JACL Headquarters, in its ninth report on the campaign, reported $6,530.50 in pledges and contributions were received within the previous week.

Momentum of the campaign is strong as the frequency of reports steps up. The last six reports have been issued since mid-April.

Various chapters, in the meantime, have reported their local campaigns are underway. Chicago, which is striving for $25,000, has over $17,000 and has undertaken its biggest mail campaign involving 3,500 letters of appeal to go over the top. Details of this campaign are reported elsewhere in this week's Pacific Citizen

While a "goal" of $100,000 had been announced with June 1 deadline, the amount is a minimum one. A definitive study of the Japanese immigrants, of their sons and daughters in the United States is a major research project which is expected to require from three to four years and cost approximately $300,000.

Last May 1, UCLA announced Fair was taken from the Sky it would co-sponsor the study. By July 1, when the new academic year begins, JACL is expected to say to UCLA that it has met its agreement to have raised or pledged a minimum of $100,000 as its share of project costs. After final plans and budget are approved, JACL will assist UCLA in seeking additional financial support as may be required from private foundations.

The definitive history of the Japanese in the United States be tween 1860-1960 looms to be classic.

Financial Report No. 9, acknowledging latest contributions and pledges received at National JACL Headquarters is as follows:

CHICAGO (Previously Reported $10,661.66) $250-Masaru Funai $200-Bunji Takano Family.

THE POSTAGE EXPENSE

Since JACL conducts a bulk of its business through the mails, let's examine how far $2,000 being budgeted for postage stamps will go. Anyone who becomes a chapter president knows well how much mail comes from Headquarters during a year. The flow is even heavier among members of the National Board and offices. One general mailing from Headquarters involves at least 113 pieces: 88 to chapters, 25 to national board and offices. For $2,000, we figure three general mailings asked: "May we tell the readers about this job you're doing?" Noconfidential. After the job was half completed we came up with the same question-got the same answer. So now the Fair has been going on for almost two months, and to heck with pre-fair confidences.

When we're trying to tell the story of how many Japanese derivatives contribute to the success of this World's Fair, it is hard to stop. For instance, went through the telephone company tour, camera in hand just to get a shot of Mary Fujita (who oldtimers will remember as little Mary Fujino)and a very photogenic camera subject she makes too-but she was out to lunch the day I went.

There are many Nisei and Sansei young ladies employed in different departments of the fair, the information center, as guides and hostesses, and interpreters.

Naturally one expects to see Japanese faces in the food booths of the Food Circus and other installations around the Fair that feature tempura, sukiyaki, oden, and such. But one big kick we got was seeing an attractive Sansei lassie in the middle of a big crew of blondies selling Swedish "FRIJOS" in the food circus, Lousy reporter that I am, I forgot to ask her name. The frijos, by the way costs 20 cents.

Across the way, the prominent flour mill which packages the mix is selling "scones" for 15 cents with a crew of 20 serving the public. And coffee throughout the food circus is usually a dime, some of it served in insulated disposables. So don't believe all the stories you hear about the world fair "gouging". The municipally lowned three story garage across the street from the Mercer Street (north) entrance charges $1.50 for parking regardless of hours, and many other operators have followed suit.

We would like to tell you about the waterfront accommodations for Fair visitor, staterooms on wellknown ships, dining, dancing, entertainment, and everything, but that will have to wait 'til another capacity as director of the War

From the Frying Pan

Denver, Colo.

SIDELIGHT ON THE NEWS—The press hereabouts has been preoccupied lately with a bill before Congress on the proposed Fryingpan-Arkansas reclamation project. The name doesn't mean a great deal unless you're familiar with Colorado geography. The project proposes to take water from the Fryingpan river in western Colorado, under the Continental Divide through tunnels, to the Arkansas river valley in southeastern Colorado. The idea is to divert abundant water supplies on the west slope of the Rockies to the chronically water-short southeast corner of the state.

There's been a good deal of opposition to the Fryingpan-Arkansas project in Southern California. The water that would be diverted by the project belongs to Colorado, and it should be up to the state to determine how it is used. But if it is not used in Colorado, it would flow down the river and be available to the Los Angeles area. And Southern Cal, with a swiftly increasing population, is vitally interested in cornering all the water it can get.

Well, what's the Nisei angle? Some of the biggest and most productive farms in Colorado's Arkansas river valley are operated by Nisei. They defy drouth and hail every year to grow some wonderfully luscious cantaloupes that command a premium price in eastern markets. They also grow considerable acreages of onions and sugar beets and of course they're interested in supplementary water that makes an oasis out of semi-desert country.

FEAST FROM FAMINE-Someone, I forget who, explained long ago that China's periodic famines were responsible over the centuries for the Chinese ability to whomp up delightfully tasty dishes from animal and vegetable matter that most other people throw away. Apparently their chefs and housewives discovered, while seeking desperately to conserve everything edible, that there's food and flavor value in stuff customarily discarded in more plentifully endowed

For instance, there's blood soup, whose main ingredient is just that. And you shouldn't be surprised at a Chinese banquet if you happen on the heads and claws of chickens floating around in your soup. It's perfectly good manners to gnaw on the cartilage of chicken foot and, come to think of it, no more disgusting than eating pickled pig's feet, tripe, boiled beef tongue or moldy cheese.

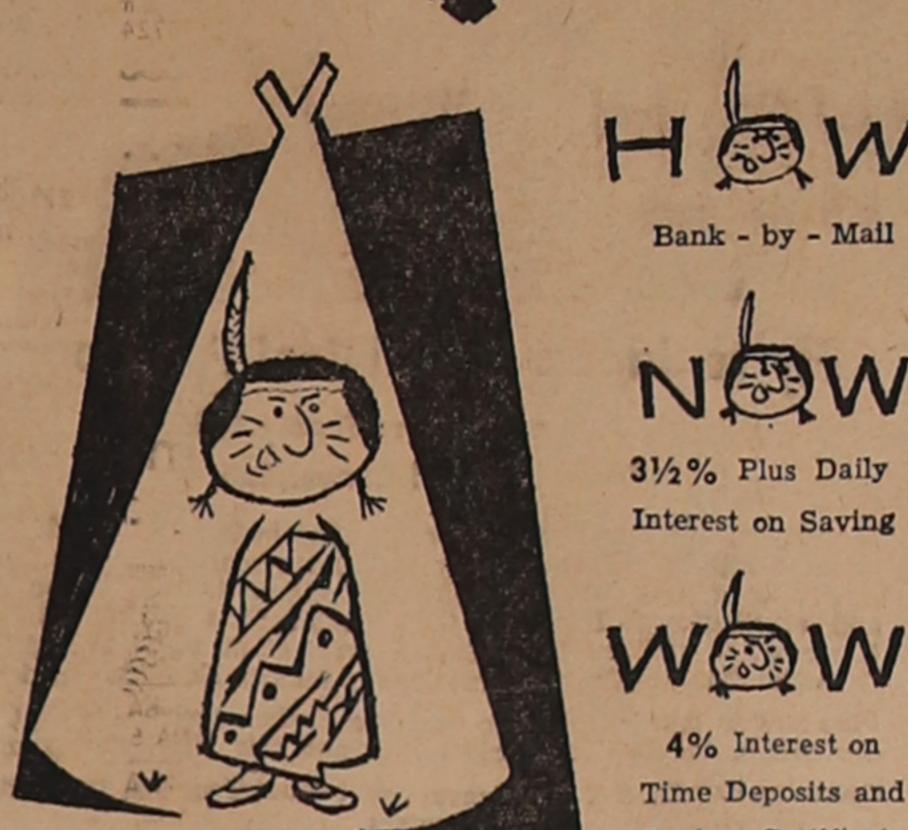

Wonder what China's current food shortages will contribute to delight the palates of international gourmets.

BREAD FOR BREAKFAST—Talking about food, three Japanese were in town last week en route to eastern Colorado and Kansas to inspect the production of hard red wheat which, we understand, is in high demand among Japanese millers. Seems the hard red wheat, which grows in the high plains country, makes the best bread. And Japanese city dwellers, who are eating more and more bread for breakfast, have had their palates educated to the point where they demand the best.

Time was when Japanese bread tasted like a combination of sawdust, rice powder and ground wallboard. Now it rates with the best product of French and Italian bakeries. If Japanese bakers don't keep their quality up, Tokyo housewives threaten to go back to rice, pickles and miso-soup for breakfast, which is the reason the three wheat experts were

AMERICANIZATION—An Associated Press story this week reports that Tokyo is not only the world's largest city, but it has the worst traffic jams. One day, the story says, traffic piled up so tight and for so long that drivers abandoned their cars and it took police several days to untangle the mess. One expert on Japanese culture contends the Japanese have a natural dislike for unoccupied space and their inclination is to fill it up, even though it's on the wrong side of the
