Sakamoto Memorial Award: The Changing of the Guards

(The following piece signed by D.C. News Notes editor Carol Tamura in the April, 1963, issue was cited by the Pacific Citizen Board as the "best editorial" in the 1963 Sakamoto Memorial Newsletter contest.-Editor.)

Will there be another generation to take over the leadership of the JACL when the Old Guard fades away?

The leaders of today's JACL are essentially people who have followed the growth of the JACL since their youth, in the days before and during World War II. At that time, the JACL had meaning for them because of the persecutions they suffered. They have felt a need for the JACL in this form ever since and have felt compelled to continue fighting this type of injustice. Today's young adults lack such vivid memories to sustain their interest in the JACL; they must find meaning in it through their own experience.

The negation of the JACL by the young Japanese Americans is gradually becoming apparent. The young adults do not feel compelled to follow in the footsteps of the present leaders and concomprising the district council will centrating their efforts on fighting injustice against Japanese Americans. They want positive programs that appeal to their needs and

The JACL is already becoming a multi-purpose organization out of necessity. It may well be that the JACL will in fact serve greater function by being an instrument for programs involving the man, will call the meeting to or youth, education, scholarships, cultural activity, community service, welfare, etc. This does not mean that we must give up our fight Okura will address the banquet for equality; it just shows that we must now concern ourselves following the afternoon business with the wider range of problems that face us.

To a Dear Friend

Dear Editor: I would like to pay tribute to the memory of my very good friend and fellow Thousand Clubber, the late Dr. Mutsumi Nobe who passed away on Oct. 3 at Weiss Memorial Hospital here in Chicago.

Dr. Nobe was a most unusual character. For instance, a few days before his death, I dropped in to visit him, hoping to cheer him up. He was lying on his hospital bed, his left arm strapped to a board, an intravenous bottle overhead dripping life-giving fluid into his veins. Impressions

BY ISAAC MATSUSHIGE, PSW Regional Director

There has been little time for idle tunes and fancy fiddlings of summer grasshoppers in the Venice-Culver area. As the story of the fiddling summer grasshoppers and the busy little ants may go, our PSW Venice-Culver chapter president, Jack Nomura, and his committee members have been diligently working throughout the summer vacation months in making thorough preparations for the coming Nov. 17, PSWDC 4th quarterly Chapter Clinic.

With the Culver City Veterans' Memorial Building selected as the site for this important one-day event, our host Venice-Culver chapter has planned this year to provide each new incoming chapter cabinet to a new and fresh look at the JACL challenge for 1964! Included in the Venice-Culver Chapter Clinic program will be informative group discussions chaired by top PSWDC leaders. Al important phases of chapter responsibilities and activities will be covered. To also provide an answer and background information pertaining to the JACL program and also to better inform, prepare and to offer the opportunity to familiarize our new incoming cabinet officers to the JACL, well in advance to their date of assuming office, the Venice-Culver Chapter Clinic program was planned with these purposes in mind.

Welcome to the Southland, Jack

Advance news informs us that our National Director Mas Satow and his new Administrative Assistant, Jack Mayeda, will be due into Los Angeles from San Francisco to add their support and participation in this PSWDC Chapter Clinic of Nov. 17.

To the PSW, this will be our first opportunity to welcome Jack Mayeda as a new member to our National JACL staff and to our PSWDC meetings. In his capacity as the Administrative Assistant, Jack also undertakes special assignments, directs the National JACL Youth program and serves as Regional Director for Northern California! Let's just say, he does a full day's work.

To these two fine members of our National JACL staff, PSW awaits your arrival to the Nov. 17 Venice-Culver Chapter Clinic! Returning now to the job of priming our own pump; let's fill out those Venice-Culver Chapter Clinic registration forms which all PSW Chapters have now received and return them promptly with the correct remittance in the self-addressed stamped envelopes provided for your convenience by our Venice-Culver host chapter. Please do this now . . . for after all, Detroit for '64 is just around the

From the Frying Pan

Denver, Colo. A MAN NAMED VALACHI-In recent weeks a convicted felon and confessed gangster named Joseph Valachi has been getting an enormous amount of newspaper space and television time. Valachi has been singing like the well-known canary before a Senate committee looking into organized crime. He related in great detailin such great detail, in fact, that some officials suspected he was making up his story as he went along-the bloody rivalry between Neapolitan and Sicilian factions of the Cosa Nostra crime ring, and Univ. of Nebraska, Univ. of Illinaming dozens of Italian-sounding names.

Some Americans were fascinated by Valachi's recital, some were bored, and presumably some were embarrassed simply because this hoarse-voiced, ungrammatical hoodlum was airing dirty linen in the He later became chief of the expublic gaze. I suppose there were some Nisei in each of these three categories.

Now, just for fun, let's make a wild assumption. Let's say that rather than an Italian American named Valachi on the stand, it was a Japanese American named Yamadama or Nakagada or Motogoto spilling his guts about gang and gambling activity in the Li'l Tokyos of the American West Coast thirty and forty years ago. Let's say he named the gambling overlords, the enemies that were wiped out, the illicit fortunes that were assembled, the blood- May Uchiyama of Weiser, Idaho, brotherhoods that enforced the law of the underworld.

How would you feel about the airing of this sort of dirty linen? Would you be more fascinated by Yamadama's confessions than Valachi's? Would you be more bored? Would you be more embarrassed because the canary's name was Nakagada or Motogoto rather than Valachi? And if so, why?

AN ITALIAN 'NISEI'S' POINT OF VIEW - Just out of curiosity, I asked a second generation American of Italian descent what he thought about the Valachi hearings. His reaction may or may not be typical, but at least it was revealing.

Sure, he was interested in what Valachi had to say, he admitted, but he guessed his interest was no more and no less intense than that of any other American. Was he embarrassed because Valachi's confessions had to do with Italo-American criminals? Not particularly. My friend pointed out that there are criminal elements in every society, and it was just too bad if some of them had Italian names. And even though his name had Italian origins and he still enjoyed spaghetti two or three times week, he saw no reason to associate himself in any way with a bunch of New York thugs.

"I'm a law-abiding family man," he said. "I've never been in jail. Once in a while I get a traffic ticket, I like a game of poker and I buy chances in the office pool, but that's about the extent of my law-breaking and gambling. There is no reason to feel I'm associated with gangsters just because of our mutual origins. And I don't think my friends and associates look at me in an odd way just because another spaghetti-eater happens to be named as the boss of the Mafia."

HOW ABOUT US?-Would the majority of Japanese Americans take a similarly objective position if they were in a similar situation? I don't know. Would their non-Nisei associates? It's a good guess that they would be somewhat more objective than the Nisei themselves because the Nisei as a group tend to be deeply introspective.

There are, of course, no answers to these questions, but the questions themselves make for some interesting pondering.
