President Kennedy in his State of the Union message plainly stated his concern by stating " believe that the abandonment of the mentally ill and the mentally retarded to the grim mercy of custodial institutions too often inflicts on them a needless cruelty which this nation should not endure.

A LESSON IN LACONICS

Economy of language for one so rich in the knowledge, plans and objectives of the Japanese History Project as its director. Dr. Scott Miyakawa, is an adroit task. He kept brushing his coat sleeve to check the time while speaking at the Venice-Culver JACL installation dinner last Saturday. Yet he invested his half-hour speech with glimpses of the grandeur that embraces the project as well as with some of the little known facts and questions that stimulate this study.

Since Dr. Miyakawa will be on the "creamed chicken" circuit in the coming weeks, addressing several JACL installation and district council meetings, we promised him we wouldn't steal his thunder at this stage. By all means, make a point to hear him and later, if time permits, discuss informally with him on some of the points made in the speech.

We must be honest with Venice-Culver JACL here. It was not "creamed chicken" that was served but baked ham and pineapple. The scalloped potatoes looked tempting with toasted coconut shreds.

Seated at our table was the president of the Mar Vista Chamber of Commerce who thought the chapter should be renamed: Venice-Mar Vista-Culver. Nothing laconic about that name.

In the Los Angeles area, the Venice-Culver installation parties score high in community public relations by inviting many non-Nisei to join them. One year, it was a group of local school administrators. Another year, it was a group of community leaders. This year, it seemed like the medical profession turned out in force. Next year, it might be the legal profession for its incoming president, Jack Nomura, is among them.

Going back to what Dr. Miyakawa had to say, he touched upon the seven "sub-topics" of the History Project. These were treated in detail in the Jan. 4 PC front page: "Why $200,000 Has Been Donated".

EN PASSANT-INCIDENTEMENTE

"Laconics" comes from the Greek, Lakonikos-an inhabitant of Laconia or Sparta, being noted for their brevity of speech and manner of speaking.

Lakonikos is derived from the Greek word, "lakos". meaning "hollow" but I'm sure the Greeks had another meaning besides the inference we see in the word today. In Crabb's "English Synonymes" (we haven't plopped this book open in decades), it is noted that that which is "hollow" is destined by nature to contain; but that which is "empty" is deprived of its contents by a casualty: a nut is "hollow" for the purpose of receiving the fruit; it is "empty" if it contains no fruit. This kind of philological distinction is missing from the handy Webster dictionary.

If we had studied Greek, our "deck head" would have been its equivalent in this language of the great philosophers, dramatists and historians for this parting shot on the Venice - Culver installation but we only trifled with French and Spanish.

AROUND THE TOWN

Whereas the principal address at the Venice - Culver inaugural was condensed, the entire Southwest L.A. inaugural two weeks ago was a compact affair-no speeches, a few guests and new & old members together in a private dining room.

It can be compared with the lull before a storm, knowing its new chapter president Mas Shimatsu as well as we do. A rugged lineman during his prep football days, he still exhibits that charge and drive of old. He was among the masterminds of the upcoming Uptown L.A. JACL, which is being carved out of the Southwest L.A. area.

Tomorrow night, we're invited to the East Los Angeles installation to witness the medical director of City View Hospital, Dr. Robert Obi, sworn in as chapter president. The transition here is a natural for the outgoing president, Mable Yoshizaki, is a hospital office manager. This may be the chapter with the most number of M.D.'s on its roll this year. And dont forget the R.N.'s, Doctor.

Two weeks hence, the Downtown L.A. JACL is installing Father Clement of Maryknoll as its new chapter president. He has been its chaplain for several years. The office of chapter president has seen men and women from many walks of life and in the 30-year history of National JACL, at least 2,000 persons have served in this capacitybut nary a man of the cloth. Election of this veteran Catholic priest of some 25 years as chapter chairman may be a sign -a good sign-whereby clergymen and ministers in other areas may be called to this office in the near future.

Our Northern California friends may point out Haruo Ishimaru of San Mateo, in this connection, who was chapter president in 1960 and an ordained Protestant minister, though not in active service. Since leaving his ministerial duties over a decade ago, he has become a successful insurance saleman after a stint as regional JACL director in San Francisco.

If we could list the kinds of people who have served as chapter presidents, what a wonderful galaxy it would make. These are the stars that brighten the JACL sky-the men and women who have lifted the eyes and hearts of their fellow members.

Inevitable: Death and Taxes

Someone once quipped: "The two things certain in life are death and taxes: The only difference is that death doesn't get worse every time Congress meets."

And while none of us enjoy the prospect of considering the inevitability of death, yet each of us owes it to those we leave behind to make certain necessary plans, which includes your will. The following is not meant to be a technical or exhaustive course in the law of wills; rather, it merely seeks to outline some points for the readers' information.

What is a will?

A will is a writing, in form complying with local state law, which provides for disposition of the signer's property upon his death.

If I'm not rich, do I need one?

Yes. In a very real sense a will is more important to a man of moderate means than to a millionaire because the former must make every penny count and is less in a position to afford the additional expenses of dying without a will. A properly drawn will can provide the following advantages and savings: (a) save administration costs, (b) avoid having your estate escheat to the state under certain circumstances, (c) save time in administering your estate, (d) control the portions and the persons who will receive your estate. (e) provide appropriate trust provisions for minors, including grandchildren who may very well receive portions, (f) avoid potential needless confusion and questions. In addition to the foregoing, those with appreciable estates can make considerable savings in taxes by proper estate plan-

If all my property is in the joint names of myself and my wife, do I still need a will?

Yes, for a number of reasons including the following: (a) Often there are a number of small items which are not jointly owned such as salary due from an employer, a small savings account, etc. and these can cause just as much difficulty as large items; (b) if you and your wife die in a common accident, then property jointly held must be administered; (c) even if your wife survives you, she then becomes the sole owner of all property then jointly owned by the both of you and it becomes necessary for her to have a will.

Can I continue to use my money and property

after making a will?

Yes. Since the will does not take effect until your death, you have complete freedom to do whatever you wish with all your property.

Can I change my will once it is made?

Yes, as often as you wish. Must I "renew" my will?

No, your will remains good. However, it is advisable to review it periodically to make sure it is up to date. Must I notify those named in the will?

No. Keep in mind that the will does not take effect until your death.

What if I have little or no property at my death? There is no "penalty" or any obligation against your estate.

What about any debts that I might leave?

These are deducted first and paid from your estate. Only what is left is subject to distribution under your will. What reasons are there for including in my will gifts to charitable organizations?

Several good reasons. First, Nisei may do well to remember those organizations and local institutions,-your church (Buddhist or Christian), or the American Friends Service Committee, or the JACL, etc.—which have long and unselfishly served the Nisei, contributing much to what we have today. Secondly, most of these charitable organizations qualify-under Section 2055 of the Internal Revenue Code -as organizations, gifts to which will be exempt from federal estate taxes. Federal estate taxes may run as high as 77%. National JACL, for example, has long been ruled to be a charitable organization under federal tax laws and thus will qualify as such an organization referred to hereinabove.

Secondly, also under many state inheritance tax laws, no taxes are imposed upon gifts to such an organization.

Thirdly, by making gifts to such a worthwhile organization, your property continues to work for worthy causes even after your death.

How do I go about making such a charitable bequest?

As to JACL, simply name "Japanese American Citizens League Endowment Fund." As to any other charitable organization you may have in mind, check with your lawyer. Can I simply make my own will?

You can, but should you? Experience has invariably shown that "home made" wills lead only to confusion, necessity of court interpretation and often bitter and costly disputes. It is much more economical to leave the writing of your will to an expert, your lawyer.

Well, how much would it cost?

Surprisingly little. Consult your lawyer; he'll be glad to quote a fee without your incurring any obligation.
