BOWLING STARS RETURN TO DEFEND JACL MEET TITLES

Sacramento Prepped for 18th Annual Nisei Tournament

Complete Team Rosters: Page 6

BY DUBBY TSUGAWA

(Special to the Pacific Citizen) SACRAMENTO. — It appears all the 1963 JACL National Nisei Bowling Tournament champions are returning here next week to defend their titles in the 18th annual at Country Club Lanes.

All the women champions and the Holiday Bowl team will be back, including Sumi Shimada and Nancy Fujita of Eastbay in the the singles, all-events champion Mari Matsuzawa and 4-game sweeper champion Dusty Mizunoue of Los Angeles.

For the men, the Tom Kitayama team from Hawaii are not coming, but two members of that team, David Kanno and Stanford Kaneshiro, will be bowling on other teams. Bill Okubo, all-events champion, of Denver will return and will try to retain his doubles crown, which he won with Tom Muroya, with another partner, Ken Matsuda, also of Denver.

Roy Kunisawa of Garden Grove will be back to put his single title on the line as will Ron Fuji of Los Angeles, the youthful 6 game sweeper winner.

Top Teams

The 22 men's teams comprising Squad 5 are the cream of the crop, all of them boasting 950 team average or better. Two of them are in the 1000 class—the Hawaii Perennial Stars which is Taro Miyasato and James Akasaki; and H & O Produce of Los Angeles, anchored by young Gary Yamauchi with a 208 average.

There are close to 20 bowlers sporting a 200 average or better in the 1964 tournament, the leader being Hank Aragaki anchoring the San Francisco Downtown Bowl team of 971:

SUNSHINE REPORT

President and Mrs. Lyndon B. Johnson are not to be blamed for extending their Washington holiday weekend visit of Southern California. The weather was its winter best . . . Old Sol blazed in its glory no matter where. It was warm enough to frolic about in a bathing suit by the surf; there was enough snow in the mountains to satisfy the skiiers; there were lavendar verbenas in bloom in the southern deserts (circa Palm Springs) for wildflower viewers . . . A steady northeast breeze (it kicked up a choking dust-storm beneath the mountain passes) kept the skies clear of smog -despite the heavier-than-usual Sunday traffic on all freeways and highways. Seems every driver in town had spread out in different directions, preventing the sort of jam of weekday rush hours that's sickening sweet on nerves.

REAPPORTIONMENT RULING

If Californians have trouble remembering in which congressional district they live or who their congressman is now, imagine the prospect of the Supreme Court's 6-3 decision that one man's vote is worth as much as another's upon California.

The 38 congressmen from California—the politician or the voter-will not like it.

The state constitution provides an Assembly of 80 members from districts "as nearly equal in population as may be." Our poli-sci prof used to say: "All assembly districts are created equal but some are more equal than others." Lain district is supposed to contain one-eightieth of the state's population (15.7 million by the 1960 census), but some contain as much as 50 per cent more people than others.

This unequal apportionment occurs (aside from natural population growth and shifting of people) because the state law provides an Assembly district must contain complete counties, or be contained entirely within a county, in which case they may not cross congressional district lines.

Political expedience and with the apportionment committee working even in the best of faith has produced congressional districts with great differences in population. The congressional districts in California are comprised of two or more Assembly districts.

Former U.S. Atty. Laughlin Waters, who chaired the Apportionment Committee in 1951, now asks whether the state constitution is in conflict with the federal constitution as enunciated by the Feb. 17 ruling. Assuming that some change must be made, it is conceivable to Waters that all congressional districts are now invalidated and all representatives must stand re-election by running at-large.

Assemblyman Robert Crown, who headed the 1961 Apportionment Committee, does not believe the ruling involving Georgia would pertain to California.

I wonder if JACL is ready to apply the same principle to its national and district councils. Before the war, that question of proportional representation was raised but it nearly destroyed the fibre that kept the national organization intact.

CHAPTER CENSUS REPORT

Over the years, some JACL chapters have published directories of their membership or of the immediate Japanese community as a public service. The formidable task of gathering names, addresses and telephone numbers, having it reproduced accurately, collating and stapling the pages and distributing the copies is always a frightening prospect. Thus, by our tribute to one of these chapters, we honor the others who have performed this splendid service.

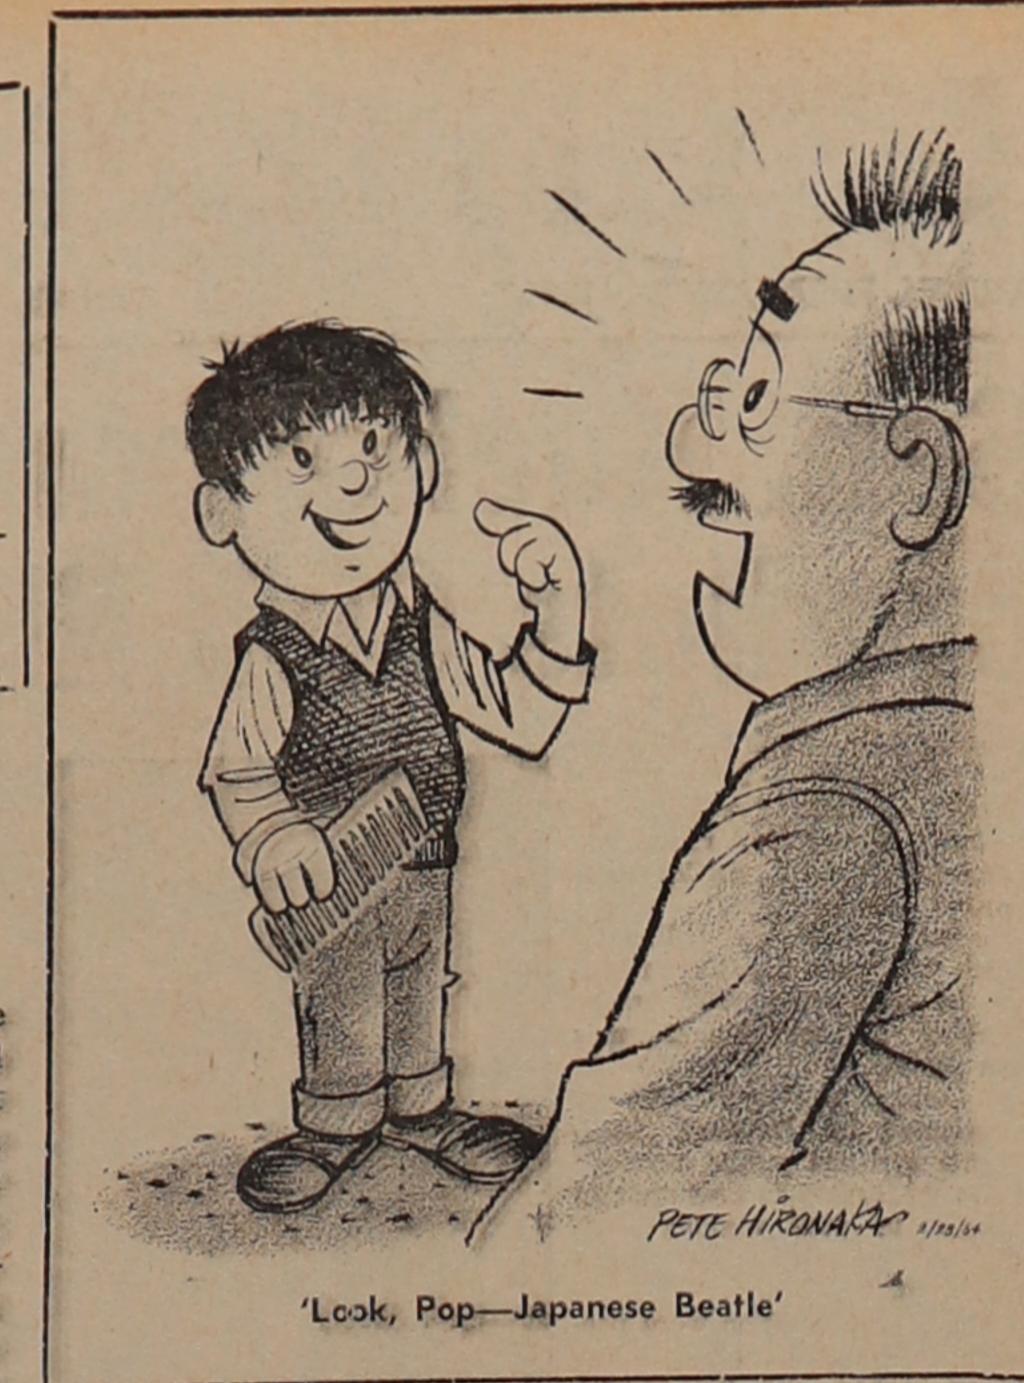

The 17-page mimeograph compilation received from Boise Valley JACL this past week deserves special attention, in that the listing contains a breakdown of occupations. Most numerous was "housewife" at 139, followed by farmers (including the semi-retired and retired at 103. Then comes the variety of some 40 different jobs—the most being 8 for secretaries.

The following breakdown shows the number of families within the nine areas comprising Boise Valley JACL and the number of individuals:

Boise 34 79
Caldwell 45 154 4
Cascade 10 17 - 1
Emmett 7 24 3	1
Homedale 24 90 1
Marsing 4 19
Nampa 49 144 4
Parma 13 56 2	2
Wilder 9 31
* -Non-Japanese: TOTALS: 195 614 1	5

The Boise Valley JACL census report shows no telephe = 3 numbers, but perhaps it'll be there next time. Under each family or head of household are the names of the children . . . Dyke Itami of Nampa has the most with eight children.

Denny, Rickie, Ronnie, Bobbie, Judy, Janine, Joan and Joyce. We haven't seen Puyallup Valley JACL's directory, which was compiled last year, but it is being distributed during the membership drive . . . Salt Lake City's holiday season newsletter contains a memberhip list that probably gets a good workout by users throughout the year . . . Other chapters we recall having published directories in the past include Arizona, Dayton and Idaho Falls . . . Snake River JACL last year placed its membership directory in the PC Holiday Issue. Seabrook JACL's listing was just as imposing.

But Japanese Americans, and Italo-Americans and Mexican Americans and many other groups of Americans in various sections of this country know too well that 'Civil Rights' is a bill for them

I think all of this has had an effect on the people of this Nation-and on Congress. While the roar and cry on both sides of the civil rights question has had many Senate contributors. there has been a noticeable numper of silent members of that body. These indeed may be the greatest reason for optimism. Let's suppose the present civil rights bill-which is labeled strong, yet! has been in effect in Michigan for more than 80 years-was put to a vote tomorrow. If the lines were drawn as in the past, this bill would be defeated.

'Silent Ones' Can Help

However, it is my hope that the lines may have altered, reflecting the crisis of the times. And-I hope-when needed, the silent ones will say "aye" for civil rights.

With that hope in mind, let me speculate a bit further with what -at best-are "educated guesses". Around Washington these days, it is thought that the Senate leadership will try to break the civil rights filibuster without cloture. A filibuster, as you know, is

'Flight from Ashiya'

FOR REASONS best known to Producer Harold Hecht and star Yul Brynner, the latter portrays a Nisei sergeant, of Japanese and Polish descent, in the new United Artists film, "Flight from Ashiya," which will be released nationally in April.

Brynner's role is that of Sgt. Mike Takamori, a tough medical jumper, who is a member of an American Air Force air rescue team which is en route to try to save the survivors of a Japanese ship which went down in a typhom south of the main Japanese islands. The film, from Elliot Arnold's novel, is the story of the Americans involved in the rescue attempt, and the drama is told in flashbacks about the three men principally concerned. Each personal story gives the key to the individual's commitment to the air rescue mission.

The other stars in the film are Richard Widmark, as the colonel whose wife died in a Japanese prison camp and who hates the Japanese but still risks his own life to rescue some anonymous Japanese seamen, and George Chakiris as the pilot who blames himself for an error which caused the deaths of some civilians in a previous rescue mission and who needs to prove himself in the air.

In Arnold's original novel the role played by Brynner was that of Sgt. Mike Warren and presumably the character was changed to that of a Japanese American so that there could also be an element of conflict between the Japanesehating colonel, played by Widmark, and Sgt. Takamori. The Japanese American soldier's personal psychological burden involves his love affair with a Moroccan girl during the war in North Africa in World War II.

In his novel, "Flight from Ashiya," author Arnold had a girl named Tomiko as one of his major characters and one who becomes romantically involved with the Japanese-hating Colonel Stevenson. Tomiko has virtually disappeared from the film story and her role in juxtaposition to the personal prejudice of the colonel is now taken by Brynner's sergeant.

Incidentally, there have been many accounts given by actor Brynner of his origins, but the one he apparently favors most, and one he used when he first became an actor on Broadway more than a decade ago, is that he was born under the Japanese flag on the island of Saghalien to a Swiss father and a Mongolian mother. Much was made of the story when Brynner visited Japan more than a year ago when scenes of "Flight from Ashiya" were filmed there, and the story hasn't been disproved.

Because of its many flashbacks, "Flight from Ashiya" is awkward in the telling. The picture won't win any awards but it does make for a reasonably absorbing experience.

YOICHI OKAMOTO's tenure as President Lyndon Johnson's personal photographer was doomed to be a short one. Following the wide publicity given Okamoto's role on the White House staff, the President was needled by TV commentator Richard Harkness for having a "fulltime personal photographer." As a result Okamoto has left the White House and is back at his old job of chief of graphics for the U.S. Information Agency.

As Newsweek reported it: "Though Mr. Johnson knew that Okamoto had printed only a fraction of the (11,000) shots he had taken, the President decided his favorite photographer had to go ... "

After all, it's an election year.

ISAMU NOGUCHI, then recognized as he is today as one of the world's sculptors as well as a designer, was not sent to a war relocation center for evacuees of Japanese ancestry in wartime 1942. Instead, Noguchi petitioned to go to a WRA camp in the belief that he might utilize his talent for design to better the physical settings of the detention camp. One of Noguchi's plans was for playground areas for children which would be both practical and esthetically beautiful. He also had other ideas for activities which would have made the camps self-sustaining.

Noguchi, of course, was doomed to disappointment. The army which set up the relocation camps and the civilian Var Relocation Authority which took them over were not interested in esthetics in playgrounds or other features of elocation camp life.

However, Noguchi never has flagged in his interest in developing playgrounds which can be beautiful as well as useful. Just the other day he and architect Louis I. Kahn proposed a $1 million playground, which if approved by the City of New York, will be financed by the family of the late philanthropist Adele R. Levy and will be built along Riveride Drive.

"Playgrounds haven't changed since the invention of the wing and the sandbox," Noguchi was quoted as saying. This one will free the child's imagination to create his own ames . . . it's an adventure."

BOWLING ALLEY DOOMS 'CHUSHINGURA' SITE

TOKYO.—A famous garden at changing Tokyo will give way to a bowling alley. Its fame has been popularized by the Kabuki play, "Chushingura", the tale of 47 Ronin who avenge the villanous death of their master by Sanui 162, Irene Sasabuchi 160. killing and beheading Kira Yo-

Kira's bloody head was washed in the well in the garden of the home sold in 1919 to its construct a bowling palace. Some have expressed the hope that the well be retained in a corner of the bowling center, but it would be difficult when construction starts. The stones of the well were burned during a World War II air raid and are quite fragile now, the owners said.
