DU library given Tajiri's collection

DENVER-The book collection of the late Larry Tajiri, drama editor of The Denver Post, has been donated to the Univ. of Denver's Mary Reed Library, university officials said Saturday.

The collection of 931 books was of success that the National JACL trees in the area which were doturned over to the university by Credit Union has enjoyed. Tajiri's widow, Marion, according to H. William Axford, assistant director of libraries. The books will be housed in the library's performing arts section.

Tajiri, 50, died of a massive stroke on Feb. 12.

Axford said most of the books were in Tajiri's home library, and about 150 were taken from his office on the third floor of The Post Building.

The collection includes biographies, histories, plays and criticism, Axford said.

THE SECRETARY OF LABOR

W. Willard Wirtz may go down in history, for better or worse, as the man who caused a major revolution in American agriculture by insisting on the use of domestic farm labor.

As secretaries of labor go, two come to mind immediately but the others require a check with our reference shelf. The two prominent ones are Frances Perkins, first woman cabinet member who served four terms with Franklin D. Roosevelt, and Arthur J. Goldberg on the Kennedy cabinet and later elevated to the U.S. Supreme Court.

President Taft called for separation of the Secretary of Commerce and Labor into two departments in 1913 and President Wilson the following year was able to appoint the first secretary of labor in William B. Wilson, an immigrant who worked in the coal mines and later organized the United Mine Workers. To help other immigrants secure jobs, he expanded the U.S. employment service as well as organize the new department.

James Davis, the second secretary of labor, served under three presidents-Harding, Coolidge and Hoover-until 1930 when he was elected U.S. senator from Pennsylvania, a post he held until 1944. This was the period when the courts were stiff on labor and the farm and labor discontent resolved in the formation of a third political party.

Miss Perkins, a Boston social worker, was an unpopular choice among labor leaders at the time of her appointment.

What is transpiring today on American farms that have employed migrant workers has some parallels in previous periods of the American labor movement.

In the 1890s, newly arrived immigrants from southern and eastern Europe were eager to work for any price and converged on the coal mines of Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Ohio and Illinois. Employment was irregular, wages were low, living conditions were squalid. There were many accidents and no workmen's compensation. The process of unionization was slowed down.

The coal shortage in 1900 turned public contempt into anger as some schools shut down that winter. Teddy Roosevelt worried about its effect on his administration and nearly had the mines federalized so that the public could have its

With immigration checked by World War I, organized labor expanded and prospered as the government instituted improved working standards and wages. Since then, the dignity of human labor has become well established and partners with business in the American way of life.

The revolution caused by Wirtz, particularly in California, had its start a generation ago when migrants from the dust bowls of Arkansas and Oklahoma became available.

World War II introduced temporary foreign farm workers. This is the period that is ending as Wirtz had told growers they must compete for American workers and no longer rely on the use of imported labor.

The scope of this revolution can be gauged by events of recent months: (1) Farm wages have soared over 40 pct. in four months on the average. Workers now often have their transportation paid. (2) Efforts are being made to improve housing. State and federal legislators are pressing for improved farm worker living conditions. (3) And there are serious efforts, aided by growers, to establish a national minimum wage for farm workers, allow them to join such programs as Social Security, unemployment insurance and workmen's compensation (already available in California).

At the same time, some negative aspects have to be considered. The abrupt termination of the foreign farm labor program might wreck or seriously damage agriculture, which is California's largest industry. Those concerned believe no matter how many dramatic improvements are made in farm jobs, not enough Americans want such work. If there were enough Americans willing and qualified (knowing which ones to pick for the market, for instance), the growers would not be as worried as they are today.

Wirtz has insisted that Congress has made its decision in killing the farm labor import program, but he is administering the final rites. Hence, the public attention being cast upon him. Two senators, Murphy of California and Holland of Florida, have stated two weeks ago they would urge his removal.

The move to eliminate foreign labor has been a long time in coming, judging from the quotation of Charles Warren, a fruit grower who addressed the Commonwealth Club of San Francisco in 1918:

"We all know we (growers) need labor. There is only one thing that will furnish the labor for the state of California. What we need is 40,000 to 50,000 good young Chinamen." If Wirtz succeeds with no serious damage to the agricultural industry and simultaneously helps provide jobs for unemployed Americans and raises living standards for farm workers, he will be long remembered as something of a hero.

If there is chaos, history will remember him anyway, but as something less than heroic.

QUOTE OF THE WEEK

"Traditionally, we of the press and the bar, despite our occasional differences, have been partners in the preservation of the American system of justice, in fostering respect for law and in defense of liberty. This partnership should not be lightly dissolved, for it has stood the test of time."

- Palmer Hoyt, Denver Post editor and publisher.

By coincidence, on that centennial, the Senate Judiciary Committee and the House Judiciary Subcommittee reported out voting rights bills which reminded all Americans that racial problems out of which the Civil War arose are far from being resolved, that among those unresolved problems are those involving the constitutional rights to the franchise.

The Washington Post editorially commented that "One hundred years after Appomattox, the solution that eluded the battlefield is still being sought. The War freed the Negro of his chains but not of a thousand other disabilities arising out of his race and origin. The decades since frequently have been marked by violence only a little less terrible than the War itself. For long periods of time, the plight of the Negro seemed to escape the attention and elude the conscience of the country.

From the Frying Pam

Denver, Colo.

BEATING THE BUSHES-This week, Joe Grant Masaoka is making his way through the boondocks on behalf of what his business card describes as the Japanese American Research Project, which is the effort to tell the story of the Japanese who came to the United States. His schedule takes him though Cheyenne, Wyo., into Scottsbluff and North Platte in Nebraska, back through Sedgwick, Colo., and thence to Denver.

At each point he is doing what very well might have been done profitably some years earlier-explaining what the project is all about, eliciting local support in gathering facts, looking for documentary material. Once the story of the project is told in terms that are easily understood, Masaoka says, there is great enthusiasm for it and offers of cooperation. The unfortunate thing is that it was not realized until almost too late that personal contact must supplement written pleas and instructions in an undertaking of this kind.

Masaoka reports that almost universally there is little knowledge about-and a great desire to know-what the Japanese have contributed to the total that is America. And when he tells his audiences about some of the things that have been uncovered already, appetites are whetted to hear more.

THE MARCH OF SCIENCE—Every once in a while I am reminded that while tuberculosis is still a serious health problem, it no longer is the dreaded scourge that took the lives of so many Nisei youngsters 30 and 40 years ago. Medicine has learned to control it.

This thought came to mind again when, while leafing through "Think" magazine published by International Business Machines Corp., I came across a story on how an astronaut's centrifuge may soon provide a new method of treating detachment of the retina, a not uncommon cause of blindness. Dr. Donald Hayashi, an opthalmologist at Stanford University, is among those making the study.

When the retina is torn away from its normal position in the back of the eyeball, the story says, the patient must be kept perfectly still. Usually the torn retina is drawn back into place after several days by the force of gravity. But only rarely does gravity do the complete job, and surgery is necessary.

Dr. Hayashi and his associates are experimenting with the theory that if the patient is whirled on a centrifuge at a force twice that of normal gravity, the retina can be returned to its place in a much shorter time—within as little as 20 minutes—and so completely that surgery is not needed.

Jimmie Sakamoto, publisher of the Japanese American Courier in pre-war Seattle and my first boss in the newspaper business, lost his sight due to a detached retina.

TAJIRI IN AMERICA-Shinkichi Tajiri, one of the talented Tajiris, is being honored with a one-man show of 14 sculptures, called "Tajiri in America," at the Minneapolis Institute of Arts until May 11. Although he makes his home at Castle Scheres, Baarlo, The Netherlands, Tajiri is in Minneapolis as visiting professor at the Minneapolis School of David Sylvester, writing about Tajiri's sculpture says: . . . his work is unmistakably Japanese in character. This, above all, in its serious mixture of extreme delicacy and refinement with a spiky aggressiveness which speaks of both sexuality and cruelty. There may also be something characteristically Japanese about its element of sexual exhibitio-

Silver Pins awarded at Contra Costa fele

RECHMOND - Two JACL silver pins and a chapter award were presented at the recent Contra Costa JACL's colorful installation banquet at Golden Gate Lanes.

National Director Mas Satow made the silver pin presentations to Meriko Maida and Joe Oishi for their decade of outstanding service to the chapter and the chapter membership performance citation for surpassing each successive year for the past five to Yoshio Hot.a, 1034 president, and Joe Oishi, membership chairman. Assemblyman John Knox, the main speaker, discussed the proposal to coordinate various land districts under a state commission or board to save taxes. Satow installed Teddy Tanaka, chapter president, David Maisushino, Jr. JACL president, and their respective cabinets.

MADISON AVENUE REVOLUTION

How many noticed this past week a sensational, quiet revolution which took place without fanfare? At least I had to look twice in a mixture of disbelief, surprise and even a touch of bewilderment; I looked carefully to see if my eyes were not deceiving me. But sure enough, there it was: in the Philadelphia "Evening Bulletin" ("In Philadelphia nearly everybody reads the Bulletin") appeared the weekly ads by one of the larger department store chains - and one of the drawings of the model (wearing a raincoat which was featured) was distinctly that of a Negro male! No preface, no explanation, just an ordinary ad like any other ad as if the paper had been doing it for years.

Now if there be any reader fuming at this observation with the challenge "Why should he be surprised, does he expect an explanation?", may I ask you to calm down, hear me out . . . and then berate me. (Incidentally, the Philadelphia "Evening Bulletin" was the only newspaper in this area which, some years ago, responded and apologized for its inadvertent use of the epithet "Jap" and since then has never employed this opprobrious term.)

INTEGRATED SOAP SUDS

As a matter of fact, I guess we've all noticed the appearance of Negro ladies in TV ads who naturally find that those washday products work miracles in their washing machines as well. Soap suds certainly have no color barriers, and indeed various products boast of color contents: blue granules, green beads, etc. Cigarette commercials also show vibrant Negro couples gamboling over a daisy-showered hillside while deeply inhaling nicotine. And it's no longer fashionable simply to have "clean, white" filters without being supplemented with charcoal ingredients.

Color is everywhere and we're all the better for it.

SEGREGATED ADVERTISING

It never occurred to me that Negroes might appear in any advertising displays until I first rode through Chicago's South Side and on a billboard ad I saw a sepia complexioned lass holding a Camel and vowing she was prepared to walk that mile. Even then it did not escape my attention, however, that as soon as we crossed Drexel Boulevard, suddenly only blondes looked out from the billboards. At least psychologically it was perhaps fortunate that I was not a smoker: I would not have been sure if I, too, were expected to walk a similar mile and, if so, in which direction.

TIBETANS IN THE ACT

And have you seen that Oriental gal on TV spot commercials who, in a quaint accent, soothingly urges the male audience to try "Boormah Shayb"? I wonder if any of you reader-viewers have figured out that girl's ancestral origin as a matter of academic interest? She strike me as being indigenous to one of the Southeast Asian countries . . . but she's probably a Tibetan co-ed working for her Master's degree at Wellesley College in Shakespearean history who actually speaks flawless English with a deep British accent.

Yes, we're improving but it's surprising and a bit frightening in one sense to realize the extent of "brain washing", unintentional or otherwise, that was inherent in my and perhaps our educational environment.

Marutani pays tribute to late Dr. Pickett

PHILADELPHIA-One of the more eloquent tributes expressed at the Mar. 26 memorial for Dr. Clarence Pickett at the 4th and Arch St. Meetinghouse was expressed by Clarence Pickett will always have a special place in the hearts of the 110,000 Japanese who were forced to leave their West Coast homes after Pearl Harbor, Mr. Pickett and the American Friends Miyo Ota, Suzie Kawahata, Mrs. Mu- Service Committee fought and lost the battle of preventing the Evac-Rokunins (Mike Fujimoto, Russell uation of Japanese off the West Coast, Marutani said.
