COMMUNITY SERVICE

A provocative editorial appearing last month in the Fresno JACL newsletter deserves wider coverage than it is able to provide and we want to pass it along here because it phrases well some of the questions that have wrinkled the brows of Nisei elsewhere.

"What is the role of the JACL in our community? Are we merely a source of funds for the National JACL? Are our activities to be confined to two or three gatherings per year, mostly for the purpose of getting the members acquainted with one another -not an unworthy purpose, but is this enough?

"Community projects entail work and time on the part of the members. With individual members belonging to many other organizations, civic, religious, social and service, are they willing to devote a portion of their time to a JACL community project?

"Suggestions as to participation in various fund drives for United Givers, Red Cross, International Institute, etc., have brought the answer that contributions are being made through integrated groups covering their employment, their business or their profession. Is ethnic identity with our contributions necessary or desirable? Is a part of integration this merging of our community efforts with others—this deliberate loss of racial identity? Is there some contribution that we can make to our particular ethnic group, or to the general community, which is not already being done by some other group-or, perhaps, we can do better because of non-sectarian, non-partisan political nature?

"All of the above are questions—not answers or solutions. Let us be the first to say that at this moment we do not know the answers. Let us all ponder and try to come up with some answers."

The PC Letterbox has been empty of late and could stand some action. We're hopeful this editorial will beckon some response. Our Jr. JACLers might also try to answer these questions.

EFFECTS OF PROP. 14 RULING

Oral arguments have been made before the California Supreme Court on the constitutionality of Prop. 14, which was adopted by the voters last year by a huge majority and in effect outlawed any attempt by the legislature to forbid owners of residential property from discrimination against prospective buyers or renters because of their color or other reasons.

We all recall the Prop. 14 campaign was bitter and expensive. Opponents of the proposition warned that if the measure was adopted, it would be tested in the court because it violated the 14th Amendment. While we feel the case will be eventually heard before the U.S. Supreme Court, it is also time to consider what might happen after the court makes its decision.

If the courts uphold Prop. 14, many feel the stage would be set for more demonstrations and thus heightened the difficulties now experienced by Negroes and other minorities in trying to find decent housing. On the other hand, many feel Prop. 14 will be nullified in view of the trend of recent decisions. But an equally difficult atmosphere will have been created for those who voted Yes on 14 despite their wishes, they can't have that law. This may engender an even more intense emotional pitch than the campaign, which could result in reaction from many people who haven't taken active sides against the whole civil rights movement.

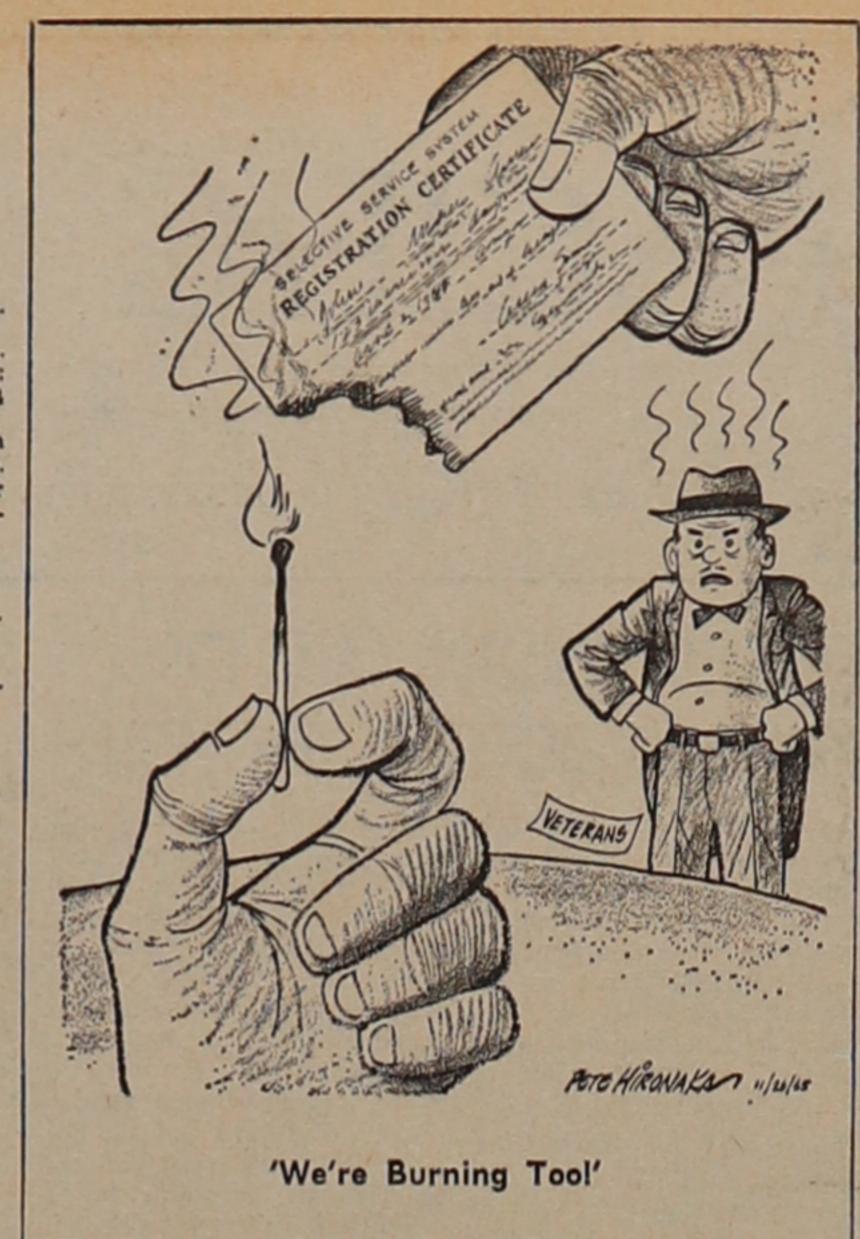

Obviously, it is none too early to start thinking now about what to do to ease these stresses now building up from the Prop. 14 ruling-no matter which way.

If these stresses can be removed voluntarily, as is being promoted by the realtors today, the cause of equality for all under the law will be greatly enhanced. It is well to bear in mind that as people we have the ability (if we make up our minds to see it through) to secure that highly-desirable state of mind where people simply do not discriminate in the sale of housing or any other form of human activity for the best of all reasons: that discrimination is repugnant to them and not just because a law says it's forbidden.

1965 HOLIDAY ISSUE

Another four weeks from today, the 1965 Holiday Issue will be off the press. As in the past, we are planning on 48 pages. One section will be devoted to the Immigration Law of 1965 and the role JACL played in its enactment. The other section will feature articles emphasizing the Youth in JACL (though we have only one story to date), chapter reports (which we trust will come in the next week or so) and stories.

The business office will appreciate immediate submission of whatever display advertising copy is ready and we shall reserve whatever space required for ads that will come in by Dec. 7.

From the Frying Pan

Denver, Colo.

CONVERSATION—A few Sundays ago we went, with not a little misgivings, to a meeting of high school teenagers and their parents at the Simpson Methodist Church where the Rev. Paul Hagiya is the English-speaking pastor. The occasion was a panel discussion on teenage problems, with two Sansei high school types and two Nisei parents taking part.

It turned out to be a rather interesting evening. All participants were articulate and not at all shy about expressing themselves. What they had to say, they said well. I couldn't help but compare the performance of the Sansei participants with what most Nisei would have done at their age. Most Nisei, as I recall, were terribly reluctant to express themselves. In meetings they'd sit with eyes downcast, hoping they wouldn't have to say anything, leaving the discussion to the few oddballs among their number who seemed to do all the talking.

At the Simpson Church discussion, there was a good deal of Sansei audience participation, too, which was a heartening sign. Some of the thinking was confused, which was to be expected, but the point is that they were thinking.

PROBLEMS—I was surprised at first to learn that the Sansei seemed to think they had serious problems, but as it turned out they weren't really problems in the adult sense. They had to do with such matters as what time a high school sophomore should be home after a party, what limits should be placed on the use of the telephone, whether parents ought to wait up until their youngsters get in, and the like.

Still, from a teenage point of view, I'm sure these are important matters and it was a healthy thing to have them aired and given earnest consideration. It is a sobering thought that in some other societies, youngsters of this age group might be seriously concerned with such matters as drinking, sex and the use of narcotics.

It seemed also to be a healthy sign that the Sansei teenagers could sit down in free and open discussion with their parents. If the years and changing customs stood as a barrier between them, they still could communicate through a common language and each know what the other was talking about. In their youth, the Nisei were separated from the Issei parents not only by a vast difference in cultures, but by the lack of a language that both understood adequately. Considering the handicap, the Nisei did pretty darn well, and perhaps that experience will enable them to understand their own children better.

CHANGING TIMES—Strangely enough, not one of the issues raised in the discussion had to do with the Japanese heritage of the Sansei. The fact of their "difference," the fact that they are members of a minority group with a background different from their Anglo-Saxon associates, seemed to pose no particular problems in working out their lives. I could not tell whether they shied away from this subject intentionally, or whether it never occurred to them to be a problem, but virtually all the discussion centered on their relationship with their parents.

Does this mean, that the gap that separates generations is, among the Sansei, more of a problem to them than the fact of their racial background in a predominantly Caucasian society? If so, the Sanseiin this community at least—have made for more "progress" than their Nisei parents had believed possible. The Nisei had trouble communicating with their parents, but whenever anyone talked about the "Nisei problem," it had to do with people with Oriental faces adjusting to life in a white world. It seemed impossible in those days that the problem would cease to be a problem in one generation's time.

Basin of Washington and this farm country of Idaho the development of water irrigation systems bring 25,000 acres of new land into production yearly. Nisei farmers growing several hundred acres of crops are not unusual hereabouts. But Nisei growers as all farmers, are facing water shortages whether it be lowered water tables or diminished stream flows.

And the need for water is growing. Industrial and city pollution have destroyed many water sources. To maintain agriculture at an increasing level, to provide power for larger populations and greater industrialization more water is needed.

John Arima, active local JACLer and former evacuee, works for Crookham Seed Co. The owner George L. Crookham, Jr. noted that seeds now have to be developed for higher altitudes and poorer soil as expanding populations take over desirable flat valleys and drive the farmers to the hills. And new sources of water will have to be tapped for the cities as well as the federal commissions considering new ways and means of water acquisition and distribution. He cited water costs in various localities including places where Nisei farm, such as $600 per acre foot in Palm Springs, $60 in Redding and $50 in Fresno. Crookham mentioned one master plan for continental water use which involves damming the Yukon River and bringing the water to the parched acres of the West including Canada. This grandiose system (see map) includes building a 500 mile long reservoir in the Rocky Mountains using existing mountain gorges and valleys. It would trap unused water running into the Pacific and Arctic Oceans. From the water so controlled it would release quantities as needed and allow electrical

By Hiro Mayeda, MDC Chairman

Getting settled into the MDC chairmanship is no easy task, as we've found since being honored to fill this office at the EDC-MDC Convention last Labor Day in Philadelphia.

Appointing chairmen for various standing and special committees is still going on, with some of the vitally important ones most difficult to fill.

Henry Tanaka of Cleveland, Roy Kaneko of Detroit, Bill Doi of Minneapolis and Ken Sugawara of Dayton are the vice-chairmen on the MDC Cabinet. Merry Oya and Esther Hagiwara, both of Chicago, have taken on the burden of seeing that my correspondence gets out in good order. My "kitchen cabinet" includes people like Kumeo Yoshinari, Shig Wakamatsu, Dr. Thomas Yatabe, Dr. Frank Sakamoto, Lincoln Shimidzu, Joe Sagami, Jack Nakagawa and others we see from time to time here in the "Windy City."

Am barely keeping up with the heavy correspondence that MDC officers and chapters are pushing our way. If this is any indication of the activity in the MDC, it forebodes much fine activity in the MDC.

Have already made visitations to Cincinnati and Dayton chapters and was privileged to install their 1966 officers. Cincinnati has a fine newcomer by name of Ben Okura, a young professional accountant. We're expecting great things from Bennie and Cincinnati. Dr. J a m e s Taguchi has again for the umpteenth time taken the helm of the Dayton chapter, guaranteeing another fine year for them.

We'll be in Cleveland on Dec. 11, Chicago on Nov. 27, Milwaukee on Jan. 15. Am hoping to visit all eight MDC chapters by early next year.

And this is one of the great rewards of working in JACL-visiting JACLers everywhere and enjoying the fellowship and friendship that prevails among all JACL people. It's a wonderful and warm feeling to be welcomed and to be one of them, even in a strange city.

The 1966 MDC Meeting is scheduled for the coming spring in St. Louis, Mo. Dr. Al Morioka reports informally that they are ironing out the details before publicizing the date and place, which are already reserved. MDC council sessions are held only once a year due to the far-flung proximities of the eight chapters ranging from Minneapolis to Cincinnati, Detroit to Milwaukee, Cleveland to Chicago, and Dayton to St. Paul. Our limited finances do not allow quarterly meetings, which, in my estimation, would be ideal. However, we do convene the MDC cabinet whenever it is vital to do so.

Am looking forward to meeting all the District chairmen from across the country next July, in San Diego.

I hope to relate some of my thoughts on various aspects of National JACL in my next column. Until then, so long from Chicago, and the great Midwest.

Vietnam: Think Before You Speak

A lot of people seem to be disturbed about Vietnam these days. Some are disturbed about our policy over there. Others are disturbed by those who are disturbed. Charges and countercharges fly back and forth. Epithet after epithet make their way into newspaper headlines. One group cries "genocide," "immoral America," and "burn your draft card." Another group screams "Commie, Commie," "beatnik," and "treason." Opponents of the Vietnam policy call supporters of the policy "reactionary dupes of the imperialistic establishment." Administration supporters brand the anti-war demonstrators as "disloyal dupes of the Communist conspiracy" if not out and out hard-line Communists. Pro Viet Cong demonstrators proclaim that imperialistic America is smashing the indigenous national liberation forces. Ardent administration advocates often portray America as a virtuous knight on a white charger leading a moral crusade against the devil hoards of Communism.

These generalizations come easy and are too often used as substitutes for thought. Too bad there are no meaningful substitutes. Wouldn't it be nice if the issue were black and white and we could easily separate the good from the evil, the loyal from the disloyal? We all like to cheer the heroes and boo the villains. But, what do we do when most of the villain lies within ourselves?

None of the generalizations come face to face with the complexities and ambiguities of the issues. People who use them are either lazy thinkers buried by apathy or unbalanced fanatics.

From our heritage as Japanese in America we should be especially leery of using any such sweeping generalizations and be aware of the moral selfrighteousness which they usually betray. I recall that about 40 years ago there was a man who swept many thousands of people off their feet with his generalizations and enlisted them in his moral crusade. His name was Valentine Stuart McClatchy. His crusade was to halt the immigration of the "Japanese invader." McClatchy was obsessed by great Japanese conspiracy to subvert America in a manner similar to the way many people today are obsessed by the great Communist conspiracy to overthrow our government. He saw everything as part of the insidious plot to colonize America for Japan. The immigrants became to him faceless soldiers of the Emperor whose sole purpose was to grab land and breed children. By weaving together bits of evidence he helped to create the myth of Japanese disloyalty. The damning accusations of his sweeping generalizations never died but only lay dormant to revive in a much more virulent form during World War II. With this memory can any of us ever mimic the easy generalizations of our day without investigating carefully the evidence?

As Japanese Americans, also, we ought to be able to stand apart and see with a critical eye some of the more unseemly aspects of the American creed. We ought to be sensitive, as non-whites around the world are, to the threads of the idea of the white man's burden and the attitudes of racial superiority and self righteousness which are interwoven with nobler motivations into our Vietnam policy.

But, perhaps we are too "Americanized" to be able to look at America critically. Perhaps, on the other hand, we are so insecure in our acceptance as Americans that we protest our "Americanism" in unison with the American Legion and never dare to "rock the boat." Are we too afraid to take stands that seem unpopular to the majority? I hope not. I hope that our desire to be considered first class Americans does not cause us to sink into the blind "patriotic" babble of easy generalization.

The great issues of our day like that which Vietnam symbolizes demand deep consideration. The dodge of easy generalization which seeks to evade this responsibility is inexcusable.

We often say "Americanism is a matter of the mind and heart, and not of race or ancestry." Let us be neither too afraid nor too lazy to use our minds as well as follow our hearts.
