

By the Board

By Lily Okura, Mountain Plains District Chairman

Like many of you, this is a bad time of the year—file income tax returns, prepare annual report for the Medical Center, prepare budget for the coming year, wait and sweat to see if your contract is renewed for another year, meet with the Board of Trustees of the Center, etc. I could have died when I received a memo from the PC editor stating that I had been assigned an article for the end of January.

In a few weeks, the National Board will be meeting in Los Angeles for their interim meeting and many of you may be wondering if it is necessary—if anything is accomplished and if our money should be expended for such a meeting. I for one know that it is vitally important and definitely necessary to run a smooth operating organization such as the Japanese American Citizens League.

Having served on the Board several years ago, as Secretary to the National Board, I can from experience, make this positive statement. Being the only female member on the Board did not give me any special privileges. One meeting kept us going until 2:00 a.m. and I was determined not to falter and continued taking notes.

Believe you me, it was difficult to look bright-eyed the following morning, but I was ready to continue the next day's program.

A preview of the 1965 agenda indicates that we will have two full days and mighty important items to discuss.

The Mountain Plains District will participate in the discussion of the Anti-Miscegenation Statutes. In our neighboring state of Wyoming, this ugly law still exists. Bill to repeal the Wyoming Anti-Miscegenation statute (Law of 1913) has now been introduced in the legislature by Sen. Richard Tobin of Natrona County (R-Casper, Wyo.) and by Rep. James Thompson of Niobrara County (R-Lusk, Wyo.). Min Yasui of the Mile Hi Chapter in Denver was recently appointed to represent our District in assisting our good friends in Wyoming in the passage of this bill.

Two of our fine JACL supporters, Mrs. Mary Ujifusa of Worland, Wyo., and Tosh Suyematsu of Cheyenne have been working very closely with Min in this regard.

(The Wyoming state legislature has passed a bill to repeal the 1913 anti-miscegenation statute and sent it to the Governor for signature last Tuesday. Gov. Hansen (R) has favored repeal in responding to a request from Susan Ujifusa, now a student at Wellesley. Miss Ujifusa became acquainted with the Governor on a personal basis when she served as Wyoming Girls State governor. Similar attempts to repeal the statute in the 1959-61 and 1961-63 sessions were beaten down. — Editor.)

During the National Bowling Tournament in Denver (March 8-13) an interim District Board meeting is being planned. Among the items to be discussed in addition to the anti-miscegenation statutes, will be the Japanese History Project (which has so much to offer in this area, but has not been explored), group insurance and the District Council meeting, which will be held in Omaha, Nebr. over the Thanksgiving weekend.

Well, my budget for the Center has been accepted and approved, my contract has been renewed and my annual report has been completed and thank heavens, this article will beat the deadline!

1964 SAKAMOTO MEMORIAL AWARD WINNERS NAMED

Two Chapters Earn Separate Honors in Two Categories

LONG BEACH — Two JACL chapters are each getting two Jimmie Sakamoto Memorial Awards for their outstanding examples of chapter newsletters. Dr. David Miura, Pacific Citizen Board chairman, announced this week in revealing the 1964 award winners.

In the short history of this award, which began with the 1961-62 commendations given at the Seattle National JACL Convention, no chapter has won more than one award per year.

The D.C. News Note, published by the Washington, D.C., JACL won awards for best editorial (Jan. 1964) and best feature story (May 1964). They were authored by editor Carol Tamura (now Mrs. Saburo Hasegawa) and Gladys Shimazaki, respectively.

The Long Beach-Harbor District JACL was cited for its youth section and the 25th anniversary edition, published in late December 1963. The PC board, which determined the Sakamoto Memorial Award winners, regarded the 25th anniversary edition in a separate, special category.

George Isoda gets Venice-Culver gavel

HAWTHORNE—Before its largest crowd assembled for a Venice-Culver JACL installation affair, close to 190 persons witnessed George T. Isoda, new president, and his cabinet members sworn in last Saturday at the Cockatoo Restaurant here by PSW regional director Isaac Matsuhashige.

Mike H. Shimizu, outgoing president, was handed the past president's pearl-studded pin, and his wife Kay was presented a gift from the chapter. Kaz Adachi, a former chapter president and now president of the Venice Community Center, was awarded the JACL silver pin for his dedication to the chapter for the past decade, especially with youth activities. Dr. Mitsuo Inoue was honored with the Community Service Award, in recognition of his professional achievements, thereby promoting the welfare of persons of Japanese ancestry in the community.

Frances Kitagawa was toastmistress; George Inagaki presented the special awards; and the Rev. Ruyue Masuoka of the Venice Buddhist Church gave the invocation and benediction. Mrs. Betty Yumori was dinner chairman.

The Japanese History Project briefing session was held Jan. 5 with Joe Grant Masaoka, project administrator. Present were: Doaks Moriawaki, Tomio Yeto, Izumi Otsu, Akira Kurihara, Toyo Umeda, Mitzie Oyata, Yas and Ida Yasutake, and Nao Takasugi.

Rep. Mink assigned to House Education post

WASHINGTON — Rep. Patsy T. Mink (D-Hawaii) was named to the House Education and Labor Committee this week, her first choice for assignment to a major committee. Former Rep. Gill (D-Hawaii) was a member of this committee.

Rep. Spark Matsunaga (D-Hawaii), in addition to his assignment to the Agriculture Committee, was named to the Post Office and Civil Service Committee.

REP. MATSUNAGA NAMED TO STEERING COMMITTEE

WASHINGTON—Rep. Spark Matsunaga (D-Hawaii) was named this past week to the 21-member Democratic steering committee of the House. This is the first time Hawaii has had a member on the policy-forming body, which includes the majority leader and whip.

Harry Maloba, 69, of Denver succumbs

DENVER—The JACL mourned the death of Harry Gijiro Maloba, 69, who died on Jan. 17, an accountant and travel agent here in the post-war years who campaigned vigorously throughout the state for Kika Kisei Domei—the Issei bid for naturalization privileges.

When he applied for citizenship in 1952, the Immigration and Naturalization Service rejected him because he had refused military service during the first World War on account of alienage. With JACL assistance, the matter was settled in the federal courts with Issei males allowed the naturalization privileges regardless of their non-military service during WWI.

Matoba was a Mile-Hi JACL board member and assisting with the Issei History Project at the time of his death. He was born in Okayama, came to the U.S. in 1914 and attended school in Portland and later operated a grocery store there until evacuation. He was evacuated to Minidoka WRA Camp, then volunteered to leave for Nyssa and later employed as an accountant for the Perry Canning Co., Brigham City, Utah.

His eldest son, Michiyasu, who was invalided back home from the Pacific in 1947, died that October at Fitzsimons Army Hospital. Because of his death here, the Matoba family settled here.

He is survived by his wife Matsuno, two sons Frank and Isao and two daughters, Mrs. Miyu Hamamura and Teru Hara (Warsaw, Ind.).

Oxnard boast oldest Issei-operated store

OXNARD—Ventura County boasts the oldest, continuously operated Issei grocery store in the United States, the Japanese American Research Project reported this week in light of briefing sessions here for Issei rural survey interviews.

The Asahi Market of Oxnard was originally established and issued incorporation papers in 1907 to operate a grocery store. Several Issei partners pooled their resources to start the business but sold out two years later to the present owner, S. Takasugi. His son Nao is the manager today.

The local newspaper featured a story on this oldest store in the county. It is generally believed that the Asahi is the oldest Issei-founded grocery in the U.S. in which the founder is still active.

The elder Takasugi recalls in the early 1900s that Issei hereabouts were farm workers, mostly engaged in stoop labor thinning, hoeing and topping sugar beets. It was back-breaking work to which local white labor were not attracted. The Issei were single men living in farm labor camps.

The Japanese History Project briefing session was held Jan. 5 with Joe Grant Masaoka, project administrator. Present were: Doaks Moriawaki, Tomio Yeto, Izumi Otsu, Akira Kurihara, Toyo Umeda, Mitzie Oyata, Yas and Ida Yasutake, and Nao Takasugi.

SAN JOSE JACL IN FRONT WITH 900 MEMBERS SIGNED

'Ichiban Chapter' to Install '65 Cabinet Tomorrow Night

SAN JOSE—Striving early to insure its "Ichiban Chapter" status as the largest JACL unit in the country, San Jose JACL this week revealed it has already signed up over 900 members.

The chapter is shooting for 1,200 members, which seems probable because of the well-planned campaign under direction of Phil Matsumura and Mrs. Phil "T" Ajari, membership chairman. The campaign was planned in November, instigated in December and in high gear since.

(The all-time national high was scored by San Francisco in 1960 with a total of 1,226 members.)

San Jose last year had 1,191 members and before that 1,008.

The chapter has continuously increased its membership for the past nine years.

Installation Fete

Henry Uyeda, who was re-elected chapter president, will be installed with members of his board at the Holiday Inn in Sunnyvale at a dinner tomorrow, 6:30 p.m. Bob Tachibana is dinner chairman.

Dr. Pete Zidnak of San Jose State College will be the guest speaker on the topic of "Humor." National Director Mas Satow will be the installing officer.

DENVER — Colorado Episcopal Bishop Joseph S. Minnis and Suffragan Bishop Edwin B. Thayer recently attended the consecration of the Rev. George Theodore Masuda as Episcopal Bishop of North Dakota at Fargo.

Pat Suzuki Hates to be a Wife in Japan

BY RICHARD GIMA
(Special to the Pacific Citizen)

HONOLULU—Pat Suzuki, the Nisei girl who's made good in show business, said in Honolulu last week, "I'd hate to be a wife in Japan, but I wouldn't mind being a pretty girl there."

The American wife has the freedom which the Japanese counterpart doesn't have, she said. "And that's something all of us American women, whether we're single or married, cherish."

She arrived here Jan. 19 after a tour of Japan in which she plugged travel to the United States for the United States Travel Service. She opened a 10-day engagement Jan. 21 at the Dunes, Honolulu night club.

"One thing I can say for the Japanese women," Pat said, "and that is they possess the femininity which the American women don't have."

Some American women create a rather unpleasant picture of the U.S. by their ill-mannered ways, Miss Suzuki said. The worst of these, she said, were the wives of American GI's stationed in Japan.

"It's a woman who's supposed to control a social situation, but some of those American women I observed in Japan just weren't up to it," Pat said.

She admitted that her Japanese isn't the best in the world. (She's a native of Cressy, Calif., and served a period of internment at

Wyoming legislature repeals anti-miscegenation statute

(Special to the Pacific Citizen)
CHEYENNE—The Wyoming state legislature Tuesday passed a bill to repeal the 1913 anti-miscegenation statute and sent it to Gov. Clifford Hansen (R) for signature. His approval is expected.

The law prevented marriages of "White persons and Negroes, mulattoes, Mongolians and Malays" under penalties up to $1,000 in fine and five years in jail.

Wyoming now joins Idaho, Utah and Nebraska in repealing anti-miscegenation laws, leaving only 18 states with such laws including Indiana and 17 states in the South.

JACLers were active in supporting repeal legislation in their respective states. But with the dissolution of the Northern Wyoming chapter in the early 1950s, repeal of the Wyoming law was coordinated by the Mountain-Plains District Council through its Denver JACL office in cooperation with Mary Ujifusa of Worland and Tosh Suyematsu of Cheyenne.

Mrs. Ujifusa called attention to the Wyoming law when a Nisei girl was denied a license to marry a Caucasian. In previous years, county clerks in Wyoming widely ignored the law until recent years when with national interest focused on civil rights, the 1913 statute against mixed marriages was strictly enforced.

Attempts to repeal the law were unsuccessful in the past two legislative sessions: 1959-61 and 1961-63. But Mrs. Ujifusa rallied support among church people, civic leaders and Japanese Americans in the state to effect repeal this year.

Suyematsu was extremely helpful in exerting influences favoring repeal. He is an attorney associated with Miller, Suyematsu, Miller & Duncan, served as municipal judge for a term six years ago and served with the 442nd over-seas.

VIRGINIA ANTI-MISCEGENATION LAW ARGUED BEFORE SPECIAL U.S. COURT

(Special to the Pacific Citizen)
RICHMOND, Va.—A special three-judge Federal Court heard arguments on Wednesday, Jan. 28, testing the constitutionality of that State's laws that make it a crime for a white person to marry a Negro and other non-white persons.

Because Virginia and 18 other States have similar laws, most of which also deny white persons the right to marry Asians, the JACL is observing this case with great interest. If and when it is appealed to the United States Supreme Court, as it probably will, the JACL may intervene as a friend of the court.

In a unanimous opinion last December the U.S. Supreme Court struck down a Florida statute punishing extra-marital cohabitation by whites and non-whites, in that particular case a Negro. It avoided, however, a ruling on state laws against interracial marriage, but the decision raised new doubts concerning the validity of such discriminatory legislation.

Judge Albert V. Bryan of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit and U.S. District Court Judges Oren R. Lewis and John D. Butzner, Jr., comprised the special three-judge bench that may hear questions on the constitutionality of state and federal statutes. Appeals may be had directly to the U.S. Supreme Court.

American Civil Liberties Union attorneys Bernard S. Cohen and Philip J. Hirschkop of Alexandria, Va., argued that the State's anti-miscegenation laws grossly violated the constitutional rights of the Lovings under the 14th Amendment's equal protection of the laws and the due process of the law provisions.

The defendants, Mr. and Mrs. Richard P. Loving, are life-long residents of Virginia. Loving, 31, is a big, silent construction worker. He is white, while his wife, Mildred, 25, is colored—part Indian and part Negro. Both spent their lives in Caroline County, just south of Fredericksburg, until they were banned from the State in January 1959 by County Judge Leon M. Brazile. They moved to Washington with their three children. Aware of the Virginia law, they had been married in Washington on June 2, 1958.

The charges brought against them five weeks after their marriage were violation of Title 20, Sections 58 and 59, of the Virginia Code, which reads:

"If any white person and colored person shall go out of this State for the purpose of being married and with the intention of returning . . . they shall be punished—by confinement in the penitentiary for not less than one or more than five years."

Marriage Performance

Other sections of the Code provide for the annulment of interracial marriages "without any decree of divorce" and for a fine of $200 for performing an interracial marriage ceremony "of which the informer shall have one-half."

The Lovings pleaded guilty and, in January 1959, Judge Brazile sentenced each to a year in prison. He suspended the sentences, however, "for a period of 25 years under provision that both accused leave Caroline County and the State of Virginia at once and do not return together or at the same time . . . for a period of 25 years." The Lovings moved to Washington and for several years obeyed the court's edict. They went home for visits, but never at the same time. When they faced financial

Third Nisei drawn for L.A. County grand jury

LOS ANGELES—Mrs. Toy Kane-gaki, active West L.A. JACLer, was among the 23 selected this week to serve on the 1965 Los Angeles County grand jury.

She is the third Nisei to serve on the committee in as many years.

SAN JOSE—The 1964 Santa Clara County grand jury was discharged last week amid glowing praise for its work from the Superior Court judges.

Judge Marshall S. Hall, who headed the bench, commended its jury foreman, Glenn George, and secretary, Norman Mineta, for their leadership in welding the group into an efficient body. Mineta, active JACLer, is a member of the San Jose Human Relations Commission.

LOS ANGELES—Individual parchment scrolls commending Charles K. Kamayatsu and other members of the 1964 Los Angeles County grand jury were presented by the County Board of Supervisors last month for "dedicated service and unselfish efforts during the past year with the end result that their contributions to orderly governmental processes and their evident resolve to improve their community can leave them with justifiable pride in the civic duty they so ably performed."

Kamayatsu is an active Hollywood JACLer and advertising manager for the Pacific Citizen.

EDITORIAL OF THE PACIFIC CITIZEN Tribute to Sir Winston Churchill

We pause—with the rest of the free world—to pay humble tribute to the memory of Sir Winston Churchill, who passed away early this Sunday morning, January 24.

As radio and television sketch his incredible life that spanned 90 years and the great event of our times that stretches from the Victorian epoch to the age of the atom and of space, whether we realize it or not, the lives of every Japanese American have been touched—and for the better—by the inspired career of this bulldog personification of British democracy, this giant "Man of the Century."

The eloquence of his words and the wisdom of his actions have all contributed to the age in which we live.

Unfortunately, few Japanese Americans were privileged to have met him. But some veterans of the 100th Infantry Battalion and the 442nd Regimental Combat Team may remember when, near Rome, this courageous and articulate World War II leader visited them. At the time, the Nisei troops were operating on the flank of the British 8th Army.

Whenever free men, or our nation, or our group, again face great tragedy, adversity, or travail, perhaps the living memory of Winston Churchill in his finest hours will serve to give us courage and hope.—M.M.

Director's Report

BY MASAO W. SATOW

CCU'S 20TH ANNIVERSARY

This week a number of us will be joining in the 20th Anniversary Dinner of the San Francisco Council for Civic Unity, an organization working aggressively toward improving human relations in the city. It should be noted that the CCU is an outgrowth of a group of prominent San Franciscans who came together for the specific purpose of facilitating the return of Japanese American evacuees to their homes in San Francisco. The purpose and the base of the group was broadened in the realization that there were other minorities in the city who needed understanding and assistance in finding homes and jobs commensurate with their skills. Ed Howden, now Chief of the California Fair Employment Practices Commission was CCU's first Executive Director. JACL pledges its continued support and cooperation.

CBS DOCUMENTARY

All of us are looking forward to the CBS documentary on the Nisei on "Twentieth Century" this Sunday, especially since some of us have been involved since last March in helping to assemble material and contact resources. CBS originally was planning a documentary on the postwar progress of the Nisei, but became especially interested in the evacuation story and felt that this should be told to all Americans. We hope CBS will follow up some day with its original plan as a practical demonstration of how democracy works.

We trust many JACLers will communicate their appreciation to CBS "Twentieth Century", 524 W. 57th St., New York 19; and to Prudential Life Insurance Co., Box 66, Newark, N.J. 07101. For our own records and for loan to Chapters subsequently, Headquarters is making arrangements to purchase a 16 mm. copy of this telecast. We note Prudential Life has already listed this program among

BOOK REVIEW:

PC Writer Has Novel Published

Published by The Westminster Press
Philadelphia 7, Pa.
Fukui, Arlene: East to Freedom, 189 pp., $3.50 (Recommended for children ages 12-15).

A contemporary story of what it is like to live through the violent disruption of Communist conquest, Mrs. Arlene Fukui's first novel, "East to Freedom," tells of a teen-ager, Mei-lin, betrothed to Ling-wen, who seems to approve of the people who finally took over mainland China in the late 1940s.

The novel tells of Mei-lin's struggles through the many crises and tension before she makes up her own mind about the new regime.

Mrs. Fukui is not a newcomer to PC readers for she has contributed to our Holiday Issue. Her husband, Budd, now with the Seattle Post-Intelligencer, has also written for the PC. Mrs. Fukui served as a teacher and medical worker during the years of the Communists' coming to power in western China. She is currently librarian at the South Mercer Island Jr. High School.

Japanese Statesman

Published by Univ. of California Press
Berkeley-Los Angeles
Iwata, Masakazu: Okubo Toshimichi—the Bismarck of Japan, 376 pp., index, $7.

Until now no Western scholar has made a detailed study of the shrewd, realistic statesman, Toshimichi Okubo (1830-1878) who was regarded as "the man behind the Emperor" during the mid-19th century when Japan leaped from feudalism to modernism.

Dr. Iwata fills a long-standing gap for the Western historian, seeking the answers to key questions about Okubo's motivations, his impact on Japan's foreign and domestic policies and his place in world history.

Dr. Iwata, a Los Angeles-born Nisei, now an associate professor of history at Biola College, La Mirada, Calif., regards Okubo as the "right man in the right position at the right time as far as Japan was concerned."

In essence, the author believes Okubo symbolized the concept of Japanese nationalism more than any other single leader in the early Meiji period helped to nurture. In brief, it is the Japan in which our Issei generation was born—and therefore, a valuable study for the serious student of Japanese history.

(Dr. Iwata is also assisting the JACL Japanese History project, researching the Issei contributions to American agriculture.)

East-West culture

Published by Charles T. Tuttle Co.
Rutland, Vt., and Tokyo
Bushell, Raymond: The Wonderful World of Netsuke, 71 pp., colored plates, $2.75.
Sakade, Florence and Sono, Kazuhiko: Fold-and-Paste Origami Storybook, 32 pp., Origami supply included, $1.95.
Garano, Paul and Sanchez, Pedro C.: A Complete History of Guam, 452 pp., index, $10.
Sasamori Junzo and Warner, Gordon: This is Kendo—the Art of Japanese Fencing, 159 pp., index, $6.25.

Bushell introduces the Wonderful World of Netsuke—the miniature carvings in ivory, wood, porcelain, metal and other material that every well-dressed Japanese wore at the sash of kimono for some 300 years—as it should be—in color. They were pendants to tobacco pouches or purses suspended by a cord from the obi.

Bushell describes a 100 pieces and adds an absorbing commentary on Japanese manners, customs, history, legends and superstition.

For parents with pre-school children, the "Fold-and-Paste Origami Storybook" will help make for a fascinating pastime. Along with 16 objects created by Origami are well-known stories of East and West to add delight.

Objects for Origami include the turtle, fish, crab, water bird, swallow, flowers, and various popular animals.

Here for the first time is a comprehensive history of Guam—the westernmost bastion of the United States. Paul Carano, co-author, teaches at the College of Guam and did much of the research in preparation of this study. Dr. Pedro Sanchez, a native Guamanian, and former president of the college, is presently serving as associate director of the Peace Corps in the Philippines.

Since the American reoccupation of Guam in 1944, there was an urgent and growing need for a book concerned with the historical development of the Guamanians and the co-authors have done well in meeting this challenge. While it is not a definitive history, the volume has been recommended for the students of Guam for there is no readable account of the tiny island in one book.

"This Is Kendo" is a fully illustrated introduction to a traditional art of Japan—fencing, its essential nature and its basic techniques. Over 100 photographs and drawings have been included by co-authors Dr. Warner, a member of the Long Beach State College faculty, and Dr. Sasamori, holder of the "hanshi" rank, the highest honorary title in kendo.

It is regarded as the first book ever written on kendo in a language other than Japanese on an academic level. The kendo tradition, equipment and basic rules are described. Fundamental procedures and techniques in kendo, offensive and defensive techniques, and practice round out the masterful presentation.

The glossary is presented in both Japanese and English texts.

To movie goers who like the "chambara", this book is basic.

Inaugural Observations

Washington
Inaugural Week began in a holiday atmosphere, reached a solemn and fitting climax at the Capitol where more than a quarter of a century earlier Lyndon Johnson had begun his career of public service, witnessed the President begin his own Administration as the architect of the Great Society, and ended on a note of concern when he was taken to the Bethesda Naval Hospital with a common-place cold and sore throat.

In last week's Newsletter, we observed that many hundreds of Japanese Americans had received invitations to attend the Inaugural activities, thereby attesting to the attainment of political acceptability on the part of the Nisei in America. And, throughout the week, at all of the major and most of the minor activities, we saw what looked like Nisei faces, from the huge Democratic Gala on Monday evening to the five Inaugural Balls on Wednesday night. Many stayed over too until the weekend to attend several of the State Society dinners and get-togethers.

Not only were more Japanese Americans in attendance than ever before, but so too were other minority Americans, and especially Negro Americans. Negroes have been seen at Republican and Democratic functions before, but never in the numbers that they were at this past Inaugural.

Miss Leontyne Price, Mississippi-born Negro operatic star, sang the inspiring "America, The Beautiful" on the official Inaugural Ceremony, and Negro songsters Todd Duncan and Theresa Coleman, according to some columnists, stole the show from such world-famous artists as Isaac Stern, the violinist, and Van Cliburn, the pianist, as well as the National Symphony Orchestra, at the Inaugural Concert.

At the Inaugural Balls, President Johnson was seen dancing with at least one Negro lady, probably the first time that this has happened. Also, the Inaugural Parade seemed to be completely integrated, with every military unit, for instance, having some Negro personnel.

Surely, a great goal of the Great Society of the President was very much in evidence in the politeness and warmth extended not only to Negro Americans but all other Americans, including those of Japanese ancestry. Indeed, as we watched participants move on to their places for the Inaugural Cermonies, we saw at least one Nisei in the Marine Corps Band that played for that occasion and, at least one Nisei girl in the Mormon Tabernacle Choir that sang after the Inaugural Address.

Probably the most honored Japanese American at the festivities was Detroit architect Minoru Yamasaki, who was acclaimed as the Nisei of the Biennium at the National JACL Convention in Seattle in 1962. He was among the few distinguished Americans who were invited to attend the special dinner for Medal of Freedom winners and other leaders in the world of the arts and the letters at the Georgetown home of Roger Stevens, the President's Special Assistant on the Arts. Invited by the President himself, Nobel and Pulitzer prize winners were among the Medal of Freedom awardees present.

Unfortunately, we understand that Hiroshi Miyamura of Gallup, New Mexico, Nisei's only living Congressional Medal of Honor winner, was unable to attend the Medal of Honor dinner.

One of the more pleasant precedents established by the Washington, D.C. JACL Chapter is to invite Japanese Americans elected to the United States Congress to speak at our annual installation dinner-dances. In the past, these have been the first opportunities for these newly elected Congressmen to address the Nisei of the Mainland.

This pleasant custom was begun in 1960 when now Senator Daniel K. Inouye was elected to the National House of Representatives after the deserving Territory of Hawaii became a State. Then, when Congressman Spark M. Matsunaga was elected two years ago to succeed Congressman Inouye when he was elected to the Senate two years ago, he also was the chapter's guest speaker.

Next Saturday evening, Jan. 30, Congressman Patsy Takemoto Mink, also of Hawaii, will speak at the chapter installation dinner which, this year, will be held at the Cameron Station Restaurant in historic Alexandria, Va.

We are looking forward to hear this Congresswoman tomorrow evening.

Petite and charming, although she has just been sworn in this past Jan. 4, she has already won a reputation among her 434 colleagues as an able, articulate, and experienced lawmaker. She has already been mentioned in the Principal business of the day centered around reports and comments of Washington's four chapters although the PNWDC includes three Oregon chapters, which were in attendance. A sizeable representation from the active Portland chapter should be mentioned. Present for the dinner were some 32 delegates, including three or four wives of local members who graciously lent their presence to the 1½-hour social.

The PC (see Jan. 15) reported Washington's new Gov. Dan Evans (R) had called for a convention to rewrite the 76-year-old state constitution and mentioned the land ownership provision as one of the archaic provisions that must go.

On the surface, it sounds fine; perhaps an easy way out for weary Washington JACLers who have labored for removal of that sword of Damocles.

Republican Governor Evans has a preponderantly Democratic House and Senate and even a Democratic Lieutenant governor. At the present time, the entire state legislature is in a hassle for redistricting and only a freak split in the ranks of the Demos prevented a Demo version of reapportionment from passing at the lame duck session. The Republicans also have a redistricting plan, but you can expect some Demo gerrymandering to come up at this time and Gov. Evans says that he would veto it.

We mention this to ask the JACL reader what can be expected to result from Mr. R's plan to change the constitution when opposed so violently by the D group. It will require a two-thirds vote of both the House and Senate in this current session to even start the wheels turning. Then an approval of such a convention by the voters at the next election. And calling such a convention will be like opening a Pandora's box, says Lt. Gov. John Chisberg (D), with the biggest problem being the picking of delegates to the constitutional convention.

Seattle JACLer Tak Kubota, nat'l 2nd v.p. who steered the 1960 and ready been given an honor seldom granted to freshman legislators so soon after their election, the privilege of serving as temporary Majority Leader.

Our long-time friends on the Hill, including Majority Leader Carl Albert of Oklahoma, see in this young Japanese American who was featured in "Life" magazine last week a worthy teammate to the other Japanese Americans in the Congress—Senator Inouye and Congressman Matsunaga. This is praise indeed, for few have in such a short time won the admiration and esteem of their colleagues as have the two Hawaiian Nisei war heroes who now serve their State in the Congress.

Congresswoman Mink, a third-generation daughter of the newest State, is in her mid-thirties. She has so many "firsts" to her credit that it's difficult to list them all.

In addition to being the first woman to be elected to the Congress from Hawaii, she is also the first woman of Japanese ancestry to win this great honor in this country. She was the first woman of Japanese ancestry to win election to the Hawaiian Legislature, as well as being the first woman of her ancestry practice law in her State. She was the first president of the Young Democrats in Hawaii, and she was the first Democrat from Hawaii to win election to a national party post, being elected National Vice President of the Young Democrats. She was the first of her ancestry to be a representative at the Young Political Leaders Conference in Paris, and the first of her ancestry to be selected among the 100 outstanding Americans to tour West Germany on an invitation originally intended for President Kennedy in 1963.

She was first heard over national television when she spoke out for the civil rights plank of the Democratic National Convention in Los Angeles that nominated the late John F. Kennedy for the presidency in 1960.

She was elected to both Houses of the Territorial Legislature and the State of Hawaii, where she earned a reputation for fighting for liberal causes, such as education, public housing, equality for women, etc.

Married to John Mink, a geologist-hydrologist, while in Chicago in 1951, she has a teen-age daughter Gwendolyn.

Because of her background, she should be a champion for President Johnson's Great Society programs. And, as she is quoted in the "Life" magazine article, she looks forward to the day when she will be considered not as a Japanese American but simply as "just another American". With such objectives, the only woman to be elected to the Congress last November for the first time, Patsy Takemoto Mink should be a most impressive and effective member of the National House of Representatives.

difficulties in 1963, they wrote then Attorney General Robert Kennedy, asking his help in returning to their native State. Mr. Kennedy ask the ACLU to help the Lovings.

According to their attorneys, the Lovings are not "civil rights marchers" or "even pioneers". They have avoided public comments and newspaper publicity.

JACL's Concern

The Washington JACL Office explains that JACL has a special concern regarding these so-called anti-miscegenation laws not only because of the basic principles at stake but also because many members and others of Japanese ancestry are personally involved. States with laws against interracial marriages are the 12 States of the Old Confederacy and border States of Maryland, West Virginia, Kentucky, Missouri, and Oklahoma, and Indiana, Wyoming, and Delaware.

At recent National JACL Conventions, resolutions have been adopted that JACL attempt to have these laws declared unconstitutional and, where possible, repealed by the State Legislatures concerned.

From the Frying Pan

Denver, Colo.

CHANCE MEETING—The four of us had just finished lunch—during which we had done more talking than eating—and were on our way out of the restaurant when we ran into Harry. It was a chance meeting that turned out to be poignantly timely. "We" were Shig Wakamatsu, who stopped in Denver en route from Chicago to an Issei Story executive committee meeting in Los Angeles; Min Yasui and Tak Terasaki of Denver, and I. There were some details of the history project, a matter that has filled most of Wakamatsu's waking hours, that he wanted to discuss. And so we had done that, with only minor attention being paid to the food.

Harry was Harry G. Matoba, uncommonly voluble for an Issei, a thoroughly likable man of many parts who had been named by the local JACL chapter to work on the history. So Harry shook hands with Wakamatsu, smiled his broad happy smile, and allowed as he'd do what he could.

Two days later, (Jan. 17) Harry Matoba was dead of a heart attack.

The work that Matoba had intended to do for the project, such as raising funds and getting people stirred up about it so they'd pitch in and help, can be done by others. But what was lost forever when Harry died was his own story—the trials and triumphs, the frustrations and pleasures, the times of laughter and the times of tears, of this articulate Issei.

I have no way to knowing whether Harry had a place in the scientific cross-section of Issei to be chosen by the scholars for intensive interviewing in their search for facts. But Harry had a story only he could tell, and inevitably the History will be the poorer for its absence.

Harry Matoba was young as Issei go, only 69, but his passing from the scene underscores once more the necessity of recording the story the Issei have to tell before it is too late. As a matter of fact, it is already too late by a good ten or twenty years, and it behooves us to cherish and utilize quickly the resources that remain.

AT THE OTHER END—Another Harry, Dr. Harry Kitano of UCLA, was a visitor here last week. His concern is with the other end of the Japanese American spectrum—the Sansei in the Los Angeles area who by some misfortune have become entangled with the law. He has made intensive studies of 30 such delinquents and their families, and compared them with 30 other Sansei in similar social and economic circumstances who were not in trouble.

His immediate findings may not startle many knowledgeable people (his mother asked why it was necessary to spend $100,000 to find out what she thought everyone knew), but there is a great deal he picked up which may help Nisei and Sansei understand why they act the way they do. If these findings apply to me and my youngsters, and I'm sure they do at least in part, I want to know the details.

Dr. Kitano is in the process of writing a book about his study. It is, he fears, going to be well loaded with the jargon that sociologists use, for sociology has a language of its own just like the other sciences. But he promised to make it as easy to read as possible, and I'm looking forward to seeing it. The interesting thing about us as an American minority is that for a variety of reasons we don't fall into the conventional molds that fit so many groups immediately descended from immigrants. And so it will be fascinating to find out how we differ, and why, and how it is that we do the things we do and don't do the things we don't do.

Maybe it will be like group psychoanalysis. Not that I'm implying that we need it, but it will be an interesting if not altogether pleasant experience.

WRA community management head, J. Provinse, dies

WASHINGTON—John H. Provinse, 68, director of community management programs for the War Relocation Authority (WRA) in World War II, died of a coronary thrombosis Jan. 22.

A native of Red Lodge, Mont., he was among the dedicated men of the WRA who, under the directorship of Dillon S. Myer, administered the ten relocation camps in World War II to which some 110,000 evacuees of Japanese ancestry were sent from their West Coast homes and associations by the Army in the spring of 1942.

An anthropologist, he received his bachelor's, master's, and Ph.D. degrees from the Univ. of Chicago. He began his career in 1929 with research among the Salang Dyaks of Central Borneo and later joined the faculty of the Univ. of Arizona. He served as a specialist in rural development with the Dept. of Agriculture prior to his assignment to WRA.

Provinse was named Assistant Commissioner of Indian Affairs in charge of community services. In that post, he headed the Navajo dependency studies which were the basis for legislation passed in 1950 for the rehabilitation of Navajo and Hopi Indians.

Between 1950 and 1953, he was the deputy administrator for South Asia of the Point Four foreign aid program and later became director of the social research center of the American University in Cairo, Egypt. During the past several years, he directed the International Voluntary Services, Inc., an interdenominational church group.

NC-WNDC Blue Shield enrollment push on

SAN FRANCISCO — Edison Uno, chairman of the Group Insurance Committee for the area Japanese American Citizens League, signed from his bed at the Univ. of California Hospital a contract with officials of CPS-Blue Shield, putting into operation a group plan for its members in northern California and western Nevada. Uno has been in traction for the last three weeks with a spinal dislocation.

Representing CPS-Blue Shield were Harold Samuels, group manager, and G. Giron, assistant director of sales. Also witnessing the ceremony was Masao W. Satow, serving as JACL regional director.

Uno quipped, "I hope our JACL members will hurry and enroll before they are in my position." Seriously he added, "This is an excellent plan and our JACL members should take full advantage of this opportunity to participate in a comprehensive group health plan."

As a special service for JACL members, a Group Insurance Study Committee was created last year upon the order of John Yasumoto, then NC-WNDC chairman, to study and recommend a group health plan.

Art store pioneer on Grant Ave. once war correspondent

BY TAMOTSU MURAYAMA
(Special to the Pacific Citizen)
TOKYO—San Francisco had many Japanese art goods stores before the war and it provided many young Nisei a job opportunity, despite the depression in the early 1930s. The Matsuo store on Grant Ave. was one of them.

Atou Matsuo, 83, now residing at Setagaya Ward of Tokyo, is enjoying good health in spite of his advanced age. He was among the prominent importer-exporters of San Francisco, but very few knew him as an early-day newspaperman. Because of his ability to speak English fluently, he served as a war correspondent in the 1904-05 Russo-Japanese War and worked closely with Baron von Kregelstein, German correspondent, and Bennett Barghley of the London Daily Telegraph.

After the war, he went to Shanghai to engage in foreign trade. He came to Seattle in 1908, opened an art good store at the San Diego Fair in 1915-16 and then permanently settled in San Francisco in 1917, retiring in 1940 and returning to Japan with his family.

His son Yoshio is now with the Hawaiian Sugar Planters Assn. directing public relations. Our Issei pioneers in Japan usually tell the most interesting experiences—and we hope to pass them on from time to time.

Philadelphia JACL's Christmas party hailed

PHILADELPHIA—Close to 140 Issei, Nisei and Sansei met at the University Settlement House for the annual Philadelphia JACL Christmas party recently, despite a dense fog that enveloped most of the Delaware Valley area. Santa Claus in full regalia (portrayed by Harry Beileff, a co-worker of party emcee Eugene Goda) delighted the children as he distributed the toys. Many adults supervised in the children's games and the ladies served potluck supper.

Entertainment included the Sansei lasses performing the Olympic Ode, quartette singing carols and everyone caroling. On the committee were:

MAMPITSU

The Free Speech Movement

By Ken Kuroiwa

For the last few months the Berkeley campus of the Univ. of California has been making national headlines as a result of the Free Speech Movement controversy. Other than the main issues at stake, it has also brought to the surface many things which normally would have remained in the depths of our minds.

Gratifying is the observation that a large number of students are concerned in areas of political and social justice and importance. I would not venture to say that they were necessarily aware, for undoubtedly many of them fell to the sway of the multitudes and became victims of emotional appeal.

Yet, as the idea of one sympathetic editorial from another college said, "That sort of thing would never happen at our campus... to demonstrate over issues such as freedom of speech and of the intellect would be both foolish and unrespectable. The only thing we would demonstrate over is the abolition of fraternity row or the de-emphasis of football."

Legislators Retaliate

Some of our state legislators proposed retaliatory measures which I call naked displays of power and intellectual tyranny.

It was proposed that all student participants be expelled and all professors who supported student actions be fired—as if we had an excess of brilliant educators. The significant effect of such a measure, however, would be to hang a sword of Damocles over the heads of students and instructors alike.

These legislators threaten us with the axe if we do not toe the "party line." There are many much more deserving students, they tell us, who would like to get in. Deserving, yes—perhaps in the sense that they will hold to the "party line." And the professors will stay as long as they teach and express state-approved ideas.

Now they even threaten to end free tuition. I would hope that we have the moral and intellectual courage not to be intimidated by Big Brother's hands on the purse strings. Then it is that we are being duped. If so, then why endanger the entire futures of those "innocent pawns" by expelling them for a teen-age lark?

Intellectual Freedom

Apparently there are those who would praise the University as long as it produces neat, safe ideas in accordance with what the public considers nice and respectable. But true intellectual freedom does not produce ideas according to a pre-determined mold. It is as

James Baldwin, the brilliant young Negro writer, commented on the Berkeley crisis: that (your) minds must be free to think of anything and everything under Heaven. Beyond, if necessary, I might add. Then there were those who were so ignorant as to vent their spleens on the "beatniks" and the borderline population.

"Why," I heard one person say on a radio program, "can't they dress nicely in white shirts and ties and be clean-shaven to present a nice public image of the University?" This is the basic attitude that underlies the whole mess.

Reader, can't imagine nice, faceless little men in white shirts, ties, and suits running around, being safely creative? I'll give you a 100-1 that you would find a key in their backs too. This is what the students were fighting against: factory mass-produced degrees. The idea of conformity and "image" is all too prevalent now, with too little concern for that which is the essence of thinking.

Nisei-Sansei Attitude

One notices that very few young Japanese Americans participate in such demonstrations—indeed, very few Orientals at all. Some, though went so far as to get arrested in the FSM crisis. All girls, incidentally. I cannot say whether their choice to participate was emotional or intellectual, but I also cannot help admiring them for their concern and involvement.

However, I do believe that if one chooses to champion a cause by breaking an existing law, that person should be prepared to face the consequences. I cannot quite see total amnesty.

But back to the subject. Certainly one can say that Japanese (or Orientals) are by nature politely reserved. And to a certain extent this is undeniably true. But I suspect that the desire to maintain respectability hinders intellectual concern and growth.

There is also a very binding pattern of conformity which ostracizes, in varying degrees, those of us who participate in such a typically non-Japanese activity. There is a fear of involvement.

Moreover, there exists a great apathy among us on matters of the mind—things beyond our daily work and social lives. This writer included.

"Contributor of 'Third Generation' has submitted his picture and a new name for the monthly column. 'Mampitsu' in Japanese means 'stray notes, fugitive essays, random jottings, miscellany'—which is unique as column heads go.—Editor.)
