Modell quoted from his paper: "One young man described himself as a 'second son seeking more opportunities. Wanted to return to Japan at first. Persuaded by father to see America and earn some money,' even though his father-in-law argued strongly against the voyage, not wanting to be far from his daughter. The father of the groom prevailed, and financed his son's journey, while the reluctant father-inlaw paid his daughter's fare. He went cn: 'Wanted to see America, but was extremely sad on departing from Japan. Particularly trying to leave mother, next, other family members and friends.'

FIRST NEGRO JUSTICE

Washington On June 13, President Johnson nominated Solicitor General Thurgood Marshall to be an Associate Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States, the first Negro ever to be so honored.

II, including the historic 1954 litigation that held that the "separate but equal" doctrine in public schools was unconstitutional.

In all, he argued 32 cases before the U.S. Supreme Court as the advocate of equal rights and opportunities for all Americans, winning 29 of them.

In 1961, the late President Kennedy nominated him to the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit, where he served nearly four years, before his appointment by President Johnson in the summer of 1965 as Solicitor General, the chief legal officer for the Government.

At that time, it was widely speculated that the President was then grooming him for the Supreme Court.

The son of a Pullman steward and the grandson of a slave, the 58-year-old Marshall symbolizes the American dream, that every citizen no matter his antecedents may aspire to and become a member of the nine-justice Supreme Court.

In nominating him, the President declared that "I believe that he has already earned his place in history. But I think it will be greatly enhanced by his service on the Court."

Although many, no doubt, will read political im- zak, was recently elected to plications into the nomination, the Chief Executive explained, "He is best qualified by training and by very valuable service to the country. I believe it is the right thing to do, the right time to do it, the right man, and the right place."

Marshall's nomination was recommended by Attorney General Ramsey Clark, whose father, Associate Justice Tom Clark, resigned a day earlier in order that his being on the bench would not embarrass or compromise the son who is filling the post he himself once held, Attorney General, under President Truman.

When Marshall was NAACP counsel during and after the war, he often consulted with attorneys for the JACL concerning the various civil rights cases involving persons of Japanese ancestry that were appealed to the Supreme Court. In several of them, he wrote amicus curiae (friend of the court) briefs upholding the JACL position.

At the same time, he does not automatically as- that 85 pct. of properties along sume the role of espousing a minority or racial cause simply because he is a Negro. For instance, in the socalled Yokohama Specie Bank case, in which the Supreme Court unanimously held on April 10 that the Department of Justice position was in error, as the Solicitor General of the United States he did not recommend that the Government compromise and settle the case before the matter was argued before the Court of Last Appeal.

In this particular situation, the question was whether several thousand Issei and Nisei depositors in the pre-war Yokohama Specie Bank were foreclosed from seeking redemption of their yen certificates of deposit on the legal technicality that they had failed to ern California by Sei and file suit within the statutory deadline for such liti-

VISIT TO WASHINGTON-A long time ago, when tutional amendment that business first took me to the nation's capital, I decided that someday we'd return with the youngsters for a first-hand look at historical sites, government in action, and all the other things that make Washington, D.C., such a fascinating place. Last week we finally made it. We did the Grand Tour-the White House, Congress, the memorials to Washington, Jefferson and Lincoln, the FBI, Bureau of Engraving, the Smithsonian, Tomb of the Unknown Soldier, Mount Vernon, the may not be revoked "even for Kennedy Tomb and all the rest.

Most of the itinerary was either arranged or sug- treasonous conduct." gested by the firm of Masaoka and Toda, doers of good and friends of itinerant tourists, than whom there are none more knowledgeable about Washington and all its people can now be the open the strange and wonderful sights to be seen there. Toda is Mary, Mike's secretary, who somehow manages to keep up with Masaoka's killing professional pace without developing either ulcers or a nervous breakdown.

Masaoka is recipient of all manner of requests, Monierey JACL ranging from Nisei who want to drop in on the President to saw howdy, to pleas for hotel space at 2 a.m., cifes two youth neither of which he can always satisfy. At that $100 savings bond Achievetime of night Mike couldn't be either too hospitable or accommodating and suggested that they telephone their congressman. "Well," was the reply, "we thought of that, but we decided we didn't want to bother him.

DILLON MYER—One of the highlights of the Washington trip was a visit with Dillon Myer, the "Great White Father" of the Nisei, who won their undying respect and admiration as director of the War Relocation Authority and their stanch champion when 1629. the brickbats were flying.

Mr. Myer is living in vigorous and healthy retirement in Washington after a long, dedicated and fruitful career in government service. His pleasant home in the outskirts of the city, close by Rock Creek Park, is filled with mementoes of that career. In an afternoon of conversation he recalled the crises which were almost a daily occurrence during the period when WRA was considered fair game by a variety of demagogues, and he remembered warmly the satisfaction of winning the fight—thanks in no small part to the exemplary conduct of the Nisei themselves, in uniform and out.

There was a time in his adult life, Mr. Myer admitted, when he was shy and unsure of himself. But after his WRA experience, he said, he was afraid of nothing. He discovered in those troubled times that the things he believed, the principles he stood for, the ideals he was ready to fight for, were right. And there were many good people who supported his position. And after he had learned this, there was nothing to tee: be afraid of Mr. Myer has written about his experiences in an as yet unpublished book manuscript. I am looking forward to reading it. It will be of paramount interest to all Americans, especially those who underwent the FUTURE OF MILE-HI ordeal of Evacuation.

For the fair-skinned girls, assimilation is no problem and, if they happen to be endowed with good looks and a nice figure, they are much sought after as fashion models and starlets.

To the dark skinned youths, acceptance does not come by as easily. However, the luckiest like Kazuko Kitayama, who have inherited the vocal talents of their forefathers are blazing the trail in the musical world.

Kazuko, 20, made her official debut with "A Needle," a song dedicated to restoration of peace in Vietnam.

All About Cherries

The topless is out, the bikini is out, Twiggy is rumored to wear falsies, doves have turned into hawks, what anchor does a man have in the face of this foul weather?

In 1930, the fathers of JACL could get excited and defend why they had to hold a dance so they could raise funds to go to Seattle. Cherries were 3 lb. - 10c.

Service to Humanity

Some young men between the ages of 21-35, may recognize the following phrase: "Service to humanity is the best work of life." It is the last line of the JAYCEE (Junior Chamber of Commerce) Creed . . . Our National Youth Program provides Japanese American youth with services (i. e., scholarship program; oratorical and essay contests; attendance at national '67 Travelogue: Saburo Kido conferences; national youth convention, etc.) as well as a structured youth organization, stratified from a chapter to district to national levels; (i. e., Jr. JACL.)

Recently there has been some advocacy to lessen JACL chapter sponsorship for youth groups. What has been voiced are provisions for increased services rather than molding and jelling a stereotyped, patterned unit similar to the adults, by giving youth an opportunity through exposure, rather than imposing structure.

Let's explore this aspect. Are we getting as much little Olympus I had purchased load the plane with liquor, government had commandeer- dinner at the local Buddhist adult support as is needed through our current formula of providing a structure for youth to accomplish their ends? This sweet little thing decided to pour some of the soda on my left shoe which made me stare down hard at her. And she in turn looked up at me with an expression that sorta dared me to scold her. LIHUE, Kauai-The issue of separation of church and state came before the Board of Supervisors again as the Finance Committee considered a $3,260 1801 N. Western Ave. 466-7373 budget for 1967-68 by the Kauai Community Council on Art and Political Notes . . . Culture.

The objections came from the Libue Baptist Church It opposed spending of tax money for any religious organization or its promotion "at any time whatsoever, be it under the disguise of culture or some other form." The County recently presented a Buddha Day Flower 623-2077 Festival sponsored by the Council and by the Kauai Buddhist churches.

> Mrs. Mitsuko N. Wada, church clerk, told the supervisors that the Lihue Baptist Church feels the first amendment to the constitution concerning freedom of religion had been violated.

> The art and culture council for fiscal 1968 had asked County funds for a budget to sponsor five projects, including $400 for the Hanamatsuri Day celebration.

> The amount of public funds to sponsor the Hanamatsuri festival is small, the Baptist Church noted, "but it is the principle that concerns us."

As these months of 1967 slip by, I hear mention being made from time to time of what happened 25 years ago when we were moved out of our homes and businesses, American citizen or not, to confinement within the barbed wire enclosures called Relocation Centers.

On the threshold of the 25th anniversary of the Evacuation, we wonder if there is anything that we should do other than to sit quietly by and say,

"Look what we have been through; look what we are and what we have accomplished despite having been kicked around as no group of people in our nation before and since; hasn't this been wonderful."

It has been all of that and more. In the remedial process, we have had public acknowledgement of the ing men a few years ago role that we have played 25 years ago as well as during the intervening years through favorable newspaper editorials and articles. The support of other media has been nothing short of overwhelming. Books have been written about the Evacuation and its aftermath. Public officials, national and local, have been forward in their compliments. Time of Humility

The 25th anniversary is a time of humility because it is humbling to receive plaudits for doing what the twelfth graders I taught we normally thought was right to do in the first place. this year at Newton High

He argued of the processes of democracy that corrects the mistakes that have been made.

We humbly share in the tribute given to these mechanisms within the structure of democracy, the American public and we ourselves who have been the instruments through which America's mission as mankind's best hope has been shared to the world's people draft, and only enter the servin that under the American system, democracy cor- ice of his country if drafted cerned. rects its mistakes.

Legacy for the Sansei

Many decisions and accomplishments undergird the road we have come the past quarter century. These have been the foundations upon which we have chartered our leadership. Many ideas have been ex- futily trying to explain the pressed as to for what we really stood, but our time- validity of pacifism, our speakworn slogan, "Better Americans in a Great America" symbolized the true ideals and made us loom large for the advancement of the human race on this continent.

We who lived through the evacuation period are now old even though we may still perform some of the important work in the JACL. We laud the Junior JACL because with their youth and the freshness of snirit, they can continue our work by making a further frontal attack on the world's ills.

Time of Rededication

Because of all this, we should look at the 25th year as a time of reflection. Against the backdrop and drama of the past quarter century, there must be time to listen to some still voice. listening with our hearts and minds as we see the problems of a tempest tossed world.

My students' military conception of patriotism, course, led them to take a dim view of pacifism. While er pointed out that 30 conscientious objectors were cur- tor. rently serving voluntarily in the battle torn hamlets of So.

My students did not agree. To them, a pacifist cannot be patriotic no matter what services he performs for the country and no matter what dangers to which he exposes himself in the line of duty.

The association of patriotism largely with military service is pervasive today beyond the student world. One example was the debate on the bill to
