Persons of Japanese origin in California have an average longevity of about 78 years as Dr. Reuel A. Stallones, project director and professor of epidemiology at UC Berkeley. Results of the California

Supreme Court Washington The recently concluded October 1966-June 1967 term of the Supreme Court of the United States was probably the most meaningful since the 1947-8 session two decades ago insofar as the direct interests of persons of Japanese ancestry in this country are concerned. The nation's highest tribunal this past term (1) ruled that technicalities regarding filing deadlines should not prevent the redemption of pre-World War II yen certificates in the Yokohama Specie Bank by their Issei and Nisei depositors, (2) declared unconstitutional the interracial marriage bans of 16 States, (3) held that native-born and naturalized citizens may not be deprived of their American citizenship in the absence of voluntary acts of renunciation, and (4) decided that the California electorate voted illegally in uphold- cher and now principal at Maing its so-called Proposition 14 which would in effect provide legal sanction for racial discrimination in the sale and rental of housing.

In its 1947-48 term a score ago the Court (1) ruled in the Oyama case that California could not deny to its American-born citizens of Japanese ancestry the same rights of inheritance, etc., that are enjoyed by the native-born children of other ancestries, thereby for all intents and purposes invalidating the anti-Japanese alien land laws of some 16 Western States, (2) declared in the Takahashi matter that neither California nor any other State may deprive an alien Japanese because of his racial ineligibility to naturalization, of his right to secure a license to engage in gainful employment (fishing), and (3) held that the courts may not be used to enforce racially restrictive covenants in the sale and rental of housing.

The past Court was composed of Chief Justice Earl Warren and Associate Justices Hugo L. Black, William O. Douglas, Tom C. Clark, John M. Harlan, William J. Robert Merritt, victimized by poor son, I feel ashamed to Brennan, Jr., Potter Stewart, Byron R. White, and Abe his playmates at school be be called a British subject. Fortas.

The 1947-8 Court was composed of Chief Justice Fred M. Vinson and Associate Justices Black, Stanley F. Reed, Felix Frankfurter, Douglas, Frank Murphy, Robert H. Jackson, Wiley Rutledge, and Harold B. killed in a car accident 100 Burton.

Since the end of the last term, Associate Justice Clark has resigned and the President has nominated Thurgood Marshall to complete the nine-member bench.

According to veteran court observers, the 1966-7 term was an exceptional one, particularly in establishing major legal precedents.

At least eight such major precedents were set. The decisions put United States citizenship beyond the reach of Congress to revoke against a citizen's will; wiped out state miscegenation laws; struck down New York State's loyalty oaths for public employees; held that a prying microphone conducts a "search" subject to constitutional restrictions; expanded both the police power to search and the citizen's right to privacy; and stated that a lawyer need not choose between selfincrimination and disbarment.

The right to a speedy trial and the right of a defendant to obtain witnesses through court order extended two more Bill of Rights guarantees to the states.

A state legislature cannot punish a legislator for speaking his mind on such matters as opposition to Chepstow and Sedbury didn't war, even though such matters are beyond the jurisdiction of such state legislatures.

The High Court reversed its field, at least temporarily, on the most visible part of the civil rights movement, holding for the first time this decade against demonstrators whose actions are accompanied by pub- new home for the last 12 lic disturbance.

And, a new constitutional dimension was added to the criminal code. A suspect is entitled to counsel even during police identification procedures, though this rule was limited to future "lineups".

Noting that there was little public outcry against the Supreme Court's historic landmark decision against the miscegenation statutes, and against the nomination Sato, Joji Yamada and Teruo of Negro Marshall to the highest bench, certain pun- Iwata were being rejected bedits suggest that perhaps timing is the key to the many cause of technical reasons. things that the Court did do and the few things it didn't.

The concluding paragraphs in Captain Allan Bosworth's "America's Concentration Camps" to the effect that the JACL has never given up its search for an appropriate case to test again the constitutionality of Evacuation has revived interest in this possibility.

Both National JACL Legal Counsel William Marutani of Philadelphia and National JACL Legislative Committee Chairman Harold Gordon of Chicago have exchanged correspondence within the past two weeks concerning such a test case. And, when Los Angeles Attorney A. L. Wirin, who served as special counsel on these Evacuation cases, happened to be in Washington about a week ago, perhaps by coincidence, he raised this same possibility with us as among the matters he is currently considering.

If Evacuation is ever to be challenged again on constitutional grounds, it seems that now is the proper time, for general public and official sentiment is still apologetic about the wartime Evacuation, persons of Japanese ancestry are generally well - thought - of by | Senator Inouye Book most Americans, and the next Supreme Court may be c/o Washington JACL Office the last with what may be a liberal majority on mat- 919-18th St., NW, Washington, D.C. 20006 ters of human dignity and decency.

SENATOR FROM HAWAII — Senator Dan Inouye from Hawaii, first Nisei to serve in Congress, was still recovering from serious chest surgery and we were unable to meet him during our recent visit to Washington, D.C. But we've just finished reading his autobiography (Journey to Washington, Prentice-Hall, $5.95, or $5 through the JACL's Washington office), a thoroughly delightful book. One feels he knows Dan Inouye after reading it.

This is the story of a boy from the slums of Hono- George Koyama of Nampa lulu who on Pearl Harbor day wakes up to discover welcomed the graduates. Idathat he is somehow different. Summoned to man a ho State graduate Anita Jo first aid station after the attack, Inouye is making his Nishioka of Middleton re- High school - Barry Fujishin way through the crowded streets on his bicycle when the realization dawns:

"The acrid smell of the smoke had drifted up from were: Pearl and people, wide-eyed with terror, fumbling for some explanation, something to do, had spilled into the streets. What would become of them, I agonized, these thousands, suddenly rendered so vulnerable and helpless by this monstrous betrayal at the hands of their ancestral land? In those first chaotic moments, I was absolutely incapable of understanding that I was one of them, that I, too, had been betrayed, and all of my family.

"An old Japanese grabbed the handlebars of my their well-respected position bike as I tried to maneuver around a cluster of peole in life. in the street. 'Who did it?' he yelled at me. 'Was it the Germans? It must have been the Germans!'

"I shook my head, unable to speak, and tore free of him. My eyes blurred with tears, tears of pity for that old man, because he could not accept the bitter truth, tears for all these frightened people in teeming, poverty-ridden McCully and Moiliili. They had worked so hard. They had wanted so desperately to be accepted, to be good Americans. And now, in a few cataclysmic minutes, it was all undone, for in the marrow of my bones I knew that there was only deep trouble ahead. And then, pedalling along, it came to me at last that I would face that trouble, too, for my eyes were shaped just like those of the poor old man for a month end total of in the street, and my people were only a generation 1,789. Acknowledged were: removed from the land that had spawned those bomb- 17th Year: San Francisco-Mrs ers, the land that sent them to rain destruction on America, death on Americans."

JOURNEY TO WASHINGTON - From that moment, Dan Inouye's destiny was set. He fought to get into uniform. He served with distinction in Italy and France, hoping to come home a corporal. Instead, he was awarded a battlefield commission. Two days before German resistance ended in his sector, nine days before the war in Italy was over, Inouye suffered the wounds that cost him his right arm. And with the loss of that arm, his dream of becoming a surgeon died.

It was during the long, difficult period of recovery and rehabilitation that Dan Inouve of today began to take shape. He writes: "What Sakae (Takahashi, an old friend with whom he was hospitalized) was saying, and what I came to believe with all my heart and soul, was that the time had come for us (Nisei) to step forward. We had fought for that right with all the furious patriotism of our bodies and now we didn't want to go back to the plantation. Times were changing. We Twin Cilies JACL wanted to take our full place in society. wanted to take our full place in society . . .

"In time, I came to think that I could direct my best effort toward these ends as a lawyer. Nor did I ever envision myself studying law so I could defend the needy and protect the rights of the hard-pressed. From the first, I thought about the law in its purest sense, the law of the land. I wanted to help make the high school graduates and laws. I wanted to become a lawyer so I could go into their parents at a reception politics."

Dan Inouye's story is exciting and inspiring. Every Nisei ought to read it. More than that, every American should read it, for it is an American story.

American ships.

At the same time, the government was in a difficult position regarding Japan's export man who has been covering of weapons, because Prime Minister Sato and International Trade and Industry Minister Wataro Kanno had made seemingly conflicting statements. Sato stated before the Audit Committee of the House of Representatives, in replying to an opposition interpellator, that the export of "defensive" weapons was permissible under the current domestic laws. This conflicted with Kanno's statement that the government had adopted the policy of not allowing the manufacture of weapons for export.

To what degree the Japanese and Japan are involved in the Vietnam conflict is herewith reviewed.

Old Monterey

Perhaps the Sansei will find it hard to believe but there was for their parents the halcyon days of yore when they were carefree and young. Although they never had slogans, such as "Sex and the Sansei", "Social hour at the Hofbrau, pants preferred" (we should hope so), they somehow "enryoed" their way until now. Recently we trotted happily to Monterey to meet JACL chapter's executive board for we remembered that some days of our youth were spent there.

As we sat in the old JACL building, sitting beneath age-beaten charts of Japanese characters, we talked about human relations and the JACL's participation in local community problems. Then the members of the ladies' auxiliary came in, made and served coffee and cake to us elders who were debating such weighty questions. The ladies did it so softly, so well, cleaned up and left, and never once did they say a word. So we knew that all was not lost, and the men had, after all, found the riches they looked for in their youth. Ah, nothing like a good dose of cultural heri-

IS IT DEROGATORY?

Till a reader in Northern California called attention to use of "buddahead" as derogatory (see our PC Letterbox on this page) from his point of view, it has been our belief that Japanese Americans generally kept this expression within the group to mean themselves. It might have been an improvement over the pre-World War II "boochi". When the 442nd went in training at Camp Shelby, the Nisei from the Islands popularized the term "buddahead". Their buddies in 'Buddaheads' arms from the Mainland were called "kotonks".

The humorous contention among the Hawaiian Nisei in the 442nd was that if you struck the head of a Mainland Nisei it emitted the "kotonk" sound as the JACL National President was an article by the Copley if the head were hollow. One might then assume a head of the Hawaiian Nisei was solid and gave no sound. By the end of the war, the "kotonks" were showing their heads were just the same and "buddaheads" became an "in" word meaning Japanese Americans. There was nothing abusive about the use of ple and at best unintelligent these two words-"buddahead" and "kotonk"-but like all slang expressions in use today, they are coarse in nature and the idiom of a special class.

It was the Nisei from Hawaii, with their style minority groups tend to be the American Occupation of Henryand syntax, who made "go for broke" their regimental oversensitive at times, I will Japan. motto. Today, we see its use on the U.S. sports pages try to be objective in my to mean what the 442nd meant by the motto-all-out statements. Not too long ago effort. In due time, "go for broke" will be cited in the I had a Caucasian acquaintdictionaries.

"Buddahead" was picked up by the Sansei and ship because I do not even at Roosevelt High in Boyle Heights, where Japanese let Japanese people use this Americans have always been strong in numbers since term "buddahead" without the '30s, the Sansei even shortened that expression to "head". Typical usage of that younger crowd: "How many 'heads' attended the dance? . . . Let's go to "head'-town."

We have never heard "buddahead" to be derogatory—not even from those of the Buddhist faith. In fact, a scene in MGM's "Go for Broke!" says "buddahead" is preferred over "Jap".

to appear in conversation only among American slang users of Japanese descent. I can't see an Issei using group (we are not all Budit in their conversation. As used in Perspectives in citing Father Clement as an "honorary buddahead", we saw it as a term of salute from a Japanese American who wanted to say Father was one of Nisei in kind and spirit.

One facet of this report still needs to be explored. How did "buddahead" come to mean "hard head"? Is there any connotation with Buddhism?

When we first heard "buddahead", we heard it as "buta-head" or a person with piggish traits—and thought it apropos to the Hawaiian Nisei who called us Mainland Nisei "kotonks". They wanted to hog all the glory because the "kotonks" were too empty- 260 Chester St. headed to do anything about it. When hearing that Daly City, Calif. term later with a "d" sound, we surmised that the "t" sound had been softened because of its nearness Obanaenunciating clearly the "th" sound (though they are not alone in this situation).

We're "tenderfoot" (that's a colloquialism which is nearing an aura of respectability, thanks to to the Boy Scouts) in the lore of origin of words—so let's hear from the erudite.

NUMBER 90 AND 91

Pacific Southwest District Council has a right to be proud in providing the National JACL its 90th and 91st chapter this year in San Gabriel Valley and Riverside, respectively. For the longest time we rested on 89. If the motivating spirit to organize the two new chapters in Southern California was the "youth" (and not necessarily as a parent's excuse for a Jr. JACL unit), there is nothing to stay this momentum and say. in the Sansei-loaded Southland Nucleus members in both chapters are also aware of their PR role in the wider community. This aspect of chapter programs is one that Associate National Director Jeffrey Matsui is keen on developing throughout the national organization — at least, letting the chapters gauge for themselves how effective their onstrations", too.) This is an programs are from a public relations standpoint. He age of social change and of has yet to publicize this chart he has shown to some chapters in the Pacific Southwest. At the second organizational session of the Riverside chapter last week (after a fine Japanese dinner with the Ed Mitomas), National Youth Commissioner on both parts. Kay Nakagiri was most impressive in relating the responsibilities of the Nisei as parent and what JACL can provide for the youth. It is hard to squeeze his positive message into this column. But JACL as an organization, he said, should be prepared to provide some of the answers the Sansei will eventually ask of themselves. A point of self-realization strikes that prompts them to ask, "Who are we?" It takes more being "cool" or "in". I hope than just listening to a lecture, reading a book about they realize there are other their heritage or being with other Sansei. It takes in all these and perhaps working together as well in a common endeavor that the Sansei can feel to be their own distinction to the greatness of America. And that requires organization.
