From the Frying Pan

END OF AN ERA—The last of the brood has departed the nest. One recent Saturday Christie and I walked down the long church aisle together. I was uncomfortable in a rented dinner jacket, she radiant in a bridal gown.

Everyone who spoke to me later commented on what a lovely wedding it was, and who am I to question their judgment? After the reception Christie and her husband, Lloyd, departed for Southern California on their honeymoon, leaving behind a large void.

The size of that void was accentuated because the day after the wedding Pete and his wife also departed for Los Angeles. Only a day earlier he had received his diploma from the University of Denver, and now he was reporting to work in one of the nation's major banks.

Now the youngsters are scattered to the four winds. Mike in Eugene, Ore., where he is on the faculty of the University of Oregon. Pete in Los Angeles. Christie soon to be in Texas. Only Susan and her husband, Warren, both school teachers, remain in Denver and they live on the other side of town.

There were many times in years past when we wished fervently that the children were grown so that we would be free to do the things we wanted to do. That time has come. Perhaps it is because we have grown older, but the realization of our regained independence is not nearly so exciting as was the anticipation. We are free, and not really so very happy with the freedom.

I suppose there is a lesson in all this. Enjoy your children while you can. Only too soon will they be ready and anxious to try their fledgling wings, to fly away to wherever opportunity seems to beckon, to launch their own lives as adults. We do not urge them to stay when it is their wish to go; we regret only that they must go and that it must be so soon.

Pete, understandably, is elated by the opportunity that he feels awaits him in Los Angeles. Southern California is a region on the move, alive with opportunity for those who would seize it. He is young enough to live with the polluted air and the congested thoroughfares. Perhaps he will be among those who will seek and find solutions to some of the urban problems. And so he, too, is starting in a new life.

By all rights this is a time of rejoicing, for now the children are on their own. The period of preparation is ended; the years of achievement and fulfillment are ahead. Now comes the testing of education and character and moral fiber, and if we have trained them well, the future is loaded with promise.

PSWDC RELAYS TROPHIES—Paul Furukawa (center) receives huge Capitol Life Insurance trophy, emblematic of PSWDC Nisei Relay championship from Al Hatata, immediate past PSW governor, while Relays queen Carol Matsunaga holds permanent trophy won by Gardena Valley JACL's track team.

Gardena Valley Berkeley wins at nabs PSW Relays; S.F. Olympics; 7 records tumble 7 new marks set

GARDENA — Gardena Valley JACL garnered the PSW district Nisei Relays overall championship for the second time in the track meet co-hosted by Gardena Valley and San Gabriel Valley chapters here June 7. Seven new records were also posted.

SAN FRANCISCO — Seven records were set in the San Francisco JACL Olympics held June 7 under ideal conditions at Cox Stadium with Berkeley JACL claiming the NC-WNDC perpetual trophy.

A Polish-Japanese runner from Orange County who had placed third in the state 440 and sixth in the long jump the previous day, Tony Krzyosiak ran the quarter-mile in 48.4 and broadjumped 23 ft. 13 1/2 for new open division records. Gary Yamabe of San Fernando Valley clipped the 70 highs in 8.5s. for the other Open division record.

New Junior division marks were scored by two Gardena Valley boys in the 50.3 and 57.3s. respectively. The summaries:

Lawrence Fong of Berkeley, who broke the Open 440 record with his 50.6 effort, was named the outstanding athlete of the meet as the day's only triple-winner.

Two lightweight division marks were set by Gary Shem of San Francisco in the 120 lows at 13.5 and by Paul Okuda of Livingston-Merced in the 660 at 1m.24.9s.

The Gardena Valley relay teams in both Midget and Cub divisions set new times of 50.3 and 57.3s. respectively. The summaries:

Reedley JACL, though it outscored Berkeley in the open and lightweight divisions which determine the NC-WNDC perpetual winner, is ineligible for the district award because it hails from the neighboring Central Cal district.

1942 Evacuation Posters Available

SAN FRANCISCO — A number of unused Evacuation posters printed in 1942 were discovered at the San Francisco Presidio supply depot and are available to the highest bidders. Each set will be offered in matched pairs, one designating the civilian exclusion order number headlined "Notice" and the second giving notice to "all persons of Japanese ancestry" to evacuate. Posters measure 14x22 inches and are in "mint" condition. The mail auction, being conducted by the San Francisco Center for Japanese American Studies, P.O. Box 99345, San Francisco 94109, will be conducted until July 31, 1970 when the bids will be opened. A complete listing of the posters by town and area is available by writing the center.

Architect: Nationally known architect Minoru Yamasaki, who designed the IBM Bldg. and the Science Center in Seattle, will design the new 37-story National Bank of Commerce Bldg. in the Sixth and University block.

Music: Noted philanthropist Victor Carter was reelected president of the Japanese Philharmonic Society of Los Angeles for the sixth season, which starts in July. Musical director Akira Kikugawa said seven concerts are being scheduled.
