OUR INTRODUCTION TO SAMOANS

For a while I thought the biggest holiday celebrated by American Samoans and my birthday were the same—hence this week's lead to a topic for column. But a recheck of sources has pinpointed the new neighbor, classmate American Samoan Flag Day to be August 15, commemorating that day in 1900 when Eastern (now American) Samoa came under U.S. protection.

There has been nothing in the press yet about Arabs on the United States being spat on, beaten up or threatened in mindless reprisal for what happened at Munich. It may never happen; hopefully it will not. But in view of various discussions about stereotypes, and the strange way in which American Nisei seem to attract public ire when Tokyo offends American sensibilities, some "what ifs" may not be out of order.

What if, for example, the Black September group once again had employed Japanese fanatics to carry out their plot to kidnap the Israeli athletes and hold them as hostages?

What if the target of these Japanese hirelings had been, not Israelis, but Americans of the Jewish faith like Mike Spitz, the greatest, single performer of any Olympic Games?

What if a similar incident had taken place in the Tokyo Olympiad of 1964, and it was the Japanese who were being blamed for inadequate security and for opening fire on the kidnapers at the airport, lead- WEST COAST ing inevitably to the bloodbath?

San Diego presents Asian American films

Six Asian American films plus the WRA film, "Challenge to Democracy", will be shown by the San Diego JACL in a benefit for Visual Communications Committee on Saturday, Sept. 16, 7:30 p.m., at the San Diego Buddhist Church. Program will include:

"Manzanar" by Robert Naka-mura (who will also be guest speaker); "Wong Sinsaang" by Edward Wong; "Sleepwaker" by Laura Ho; "I Guess I Didn't Say Much" by Jeff Furumura; "Homecoming Game" by Danny Kwan; and "Genghis Khan Meets the L.A. Smog Basin" by Steve Ta-

The WRA film, in color, was produced in 1944 but received little notice because of the government's reluctance to publicize the relocation, according to Don Estes, chapter president, who said tickets are $1.25 per person.

At the July chapter board meeting, the chapter voted to donate $1,000 to the Visual Communications Committee for its matching fund grant from the National Endowment for the Humanities to locate, copy and annotate old photographs relating to the Asian experience in the U.S.
