16 Hawaiian teams in Nat'l JACL pinfest

REDONDO BEACH—A record number of teams from Hawaii, 14 men and 2 women, are among the 126 registered in the 1972 National JACL Bowling Tournament commencing here this coming week (Mar. 6-11) at South Bay Bowling Center.

Rendering an international touch again are two teams from Japan, Toyota Bowl No. 1 and 2. The bowlers from Japan made their first appearance at Salt Lake City last year, when the JACL classics marked its 25th anniversary. Incidentally, team competition is scheduled for Thursday, Mar. 9, from 12:30 p.m., and the men's third & fourth squad comprised of teams averaging between 926 and 1019 appearing at 7 p.m. All the women teams will roll from 3:45 p.m.

Area breakdown of teams shows that out-of-town teams outnumber the local area teams. In the early 1960s when a record registry of 174 teams competed, it was the other way around.

PULSE ON THE CHAPTERS: JACL TO HELP STAGE JAPAN WEEK IN DAYTON, OHIO: APRIL 30-MAY 6

DAYTON — The appearance of Japanese Ambassador Ushiba from Washington, D.C. as guest of honor at the Dayton JACL-sponsored dinner will highlight "Japan Week," April 30 to May 6. This week was so designated by the host, Dayton Council on World Affairs, on the first visit ever of a Japanese Ambassador to the city of Dayton.

Highlighting the dinner on May 1 will be the appearance of Congressman Sparky Matsunaga of Hawaii as the principal speaker, who will discuss his proposal to Congress to create a Federal Department on Peace as it relates to U.S.-Japan relations.

Other dignitaries in attendance will be Mayor James McGee of Dayton, Congressman Charles Whalen, Congressman Walter Powell, plus many business and industrial leaders in the Dayton area.

Working together with the Council on World Affairs and representing the JACL are co-chairmen Mas Yamasaki and Mrs. Charles Pace.

Chapter's Biggest
The chapter participation in the week-long affair promises to be the biggest community effort ever attempted by the Dayton JACL, according to Dr. James Taguchi, chapter president. The event will draw on the combined strength of the senior JACL, the Fujin Kai, and the Jr. JACL.

A public reception for the Ambassador at the Dayton Art Institute will kick off the week's activities. Kimono-clad JACL and Fujin Kai members will act as hostesses at the reception slated for Sunday, April 30.

On Monday, May 1, the Ambassador will hold a press conference at the Dayton

Racquet Club, followed by a ceremony at the steps of the County Courthouse where the Ambassador will receive the key to the city and an official welcome to the city extended by Mayor McGee. The Ambassador will address a Rotary Club luncheon followed by a seminar on International Trade at the Winters National Bank for industrial leaders of this area.

JACL Dinner
The day will be climaxed by the JACL dinner at the Westminster Presbyterian Church. The dinner will be cooked and served by all three participating groups.

Exhibits of Japanese art and crafts will be shown at both the Montgomery County Court house and at Rike's Auditorium.

The JACL and Fujin Kai will provide the talent for the entertainment program scheduled daily from May 2 - 6. Koto playing, odori, tea ceremony, exhibitions of origami, brush writing, and painting will be shown at Rike's Auditorium.

Japan week will be stressed in the Dayton public schools and community. Movies on Japan will be shown at the Dayton Public Library and a seminar on U.S.-Japan relations involving the Junior Council on World Affairs and the Jr. JACL will be arranged.

Forming the nucleus committee are: Charles Pace, program chairman; Mrs. Reiko Gennert, president; Fujin Kai, Kathy Hironaka and Rickey Sato, co-chairman of the Jr. JACL; Ray Jenkins and Frank Titus, Jr., and Pete Hironaka, decorations; entertainment; koto selections by Mrs. Sue Merritt; Buko Okuba, tickets; Fujin Kai, hostesses; Yo Sato, waiters; clean up, Jr. JACL; Dr. Mark Nakachi, photographer.

president, will accent youth program Seattle JACL installs its first Sansei

By EIRA NAGAOKA

In spite of the greatest snow storm straining Seattle since the 1950s, it was business as usual for the 135 cravering subfreezing temperatures and icy streets to attend the Seattle JACL installation dinner at Bush Gardens on Jan. 28.

It was a happy crowd as general chairman Frank Hatori would have it. The atmosphere was excellent. As a reminder that youth was very much in the framework of JACL, the Tsutakawa Four provided the rock sound.

President Tomio Moriguchi who succeeds Dr. Minoru Masuda is the first Sansei to take over the reign of Seattle Chapter. Moriguchi said, "I feel as part of the generation that is undergoing social change and will carry out the program Don (Kazama) and Min started by introducing a social concerns program. Feb. 25, Warren Furutani has been asked to speak for this initial program." Moriguchi felt that the old guards are the backbone of the Chapter and hoped that everyone in the Chapter can work together.

Silver Pin Awarded
Past chapter president (1970) Donald D. Kazama, was awarded the JACL Silver Pin for "outstanding service to the cause of JACL and to the Seattle Chapter" and particularly for providing the leadership which pioneered the way for the Seattle Chapter to become one of the most active in the field of human relations. Kazama chaired the human relations committee, nominations committee, membership committee including 1972 PNWDC civil rights chairman 1967-68, 1969-71 National Committee on Civil Rights, and currently vice governor of PNWDC. Dr. Masuda made the presentations.

Main speaker Dr. Kenji Okuda is professor of economics at Simon Fraser University in Burnaby, B.C. His specialty is with undeveloped countries helping to raise their productivity. He served as U.S. economic adviser to Puerto Rico, Uganda, Nepal and Pakistan. He received his Ph. D. at Harvard.

Okuda said he joined the Seattle Chapter at the minimum age of 18 to challenge the old guard. "I don't think we had quite the idea and vision then before World War II," Okuda said. In 1953 he served as Seattle Chapter president.

Okuda, covering a three-fold topic, raised the first question, "How superficial are the racism, colorism and tribal differences?"

Color of Skin
"The amazing thing to me," said Okuda, "whether in Liberia, Rhodesia, Canada, or India, one finds manifest in interracial relations the single generalization that lighter the skin color the higher the social status. Color becomes the basis of social differentiation. In Africa one can detect differences and antagonism where tribal identity is based on color variations. The gradation of color becomes visible as one lives there. In the island of Zanzibar the Pakistani and Indian residents must marry black or else they will not be accepted as part of society."

"The problem of color, race, and tribalism is not something that will disappear. The best we can do is to eliminate degradation and the undesirable consequences resulting from the difference in color. Whether we can eliminate bitter feeling, it is doubtful."

Okuda touched briefly on the search for identity. Role to be played by an individual depends on the family status. But the emphasis on the importance of Western material benefits and the importance of traditional ties are breaking down. The progress of adaptability to the society away from the old ties has resulted in higher juvenile delinquency rate.

Views of U.S.
What are the views of the United States from the outside? It is very difficult to like a giant, stated Okuda. As an example, India will do what is in her best national interest. Some countries like Nepal and Pakistan can only watch each move and worry. United States has the

NATIONAL JACL CONVENTION

Deadlines announced for submitting matters for National Council action

(Special to The Pacific Citizen) SALT LAKE CITY — The 1972 national JACL convention delegate may be the best-prepared and most-versed in matters slated for the National Council agenda, according to Raymond S. Uno, national president, as he iterated the procedures for submitting proposals and requests for budget.

While the National Council convenes June 26-July 1 in Washington, D.C., a preliminary consideration of the agenda will be taken up by the National JACL Executive Committee when it meets April 21-23 at Los Angeles. The convention hopper will be closed May 26 — thirty days prior to the opening session of the 22nd biennial convention.

The basic JACL operating budget will be prepared for submission to the chapters by April 28 — sixty days prior to the Convention.

Basic Preparation
Uno said all proposals and requests for JACL budget must be written concisely, documented and accompanied with supporting data. Without them, little or no consideration is likely, Uno added.

Brief and well-prepared oral presentations will be permitted at the Convention, provided advance notice and request have been approved. Last-minute oratory for funds, programs and projects will not only be discouraged but generally speaking denied, Uno warned.

Since budget considerations will focus on putting the money where JACL can receive the most benefit, it is expected there will be a reallocation of funds to get the most out of a tight budget, Uno said. "Since not what can or will be done — but what has and is being done will carry the most weight, the general membership and particularly the chapter delegates should be provided with most information about what they will be voting on and how the available funds should be allocated for the next biennium," Uno explained.

National Headquarters will disseminate to all chapter presidents and delegates, National board and staff, all communications, reports and information required for "sound, intelligent and knowledgeable decision-making" at the National Council, National Board and National Executive Committee meetings.

Schedule of Deadlines
If the following schedule is followed, Uno predicted a fruitful and constructive discussion will ensue with positive voting on the issues.

1—All committee chairmen should have their reports prepared and sent to their supervising National officer by Mar. 24. Report should include recommendations, criticisms, proposals, funding requests.

2—All supervising National officers should add their comments and recommendations to committee reports and forwarded to the Executive Committee members by April 7.

Matters to be considered at the National Council should be written and submitted for approval and recommendation by the Executive Committee, which will then forward to the National Board for approval, recommendation and submission to the National Council.

Amendments to the JACL Constitution and By-Laws are filed with the National Director six weeks prior to a convention (May 8) and chapters notified 30 days prior (May 26). Such amendments are proposed either by a district council or the National Board. When the National Council is in session, any group of five chapters or more may offer amendments without prior notice.

Nominations by district councils of candidates for National JACL officers are due 90 days prior (March 28).

JACL RECOGNITIONS

'Nisei of Biennium', 'Cler of Biennium' nominations from chapters requested

SAN FRANCISCO — Assistance from JACL chapters and district councils was requested this week by Jack Ogami, chairman of the National JACL recognitions committee, to select the 1970-72 "Nisei of the Biennium" and "JACLer of the Biennium."

Both honors will be presented during the 22nd biennial National JACL Convention in Washington, D.C.; the "Nisei of the Biennium" medallions and scrolls to be awarded at the final banquet July 1 and the "JACLer of the Biennium" medallion-scroll at the convention luncheon June 30.

'Nisei of Biennium'
JACL, since the 1950 convention, has conferred upon an outstanding person of Japanese ancestry in the mainland U.S. its highest public award in recognition of their contributions in line with purposes of the organization:

1—Advancing the general welfare of persons of Japanese ancestry in the United States.

2—Exhibiting good citizenship by exemplary conduct and active participation.

3—Acquainting fellow Americans with persons of Japanese ancestry.

The award consists of the JACL gold medallion and a personalized scroll citation. The two runners-up will receive the JACL silver medallion and citation. All three honorees will also be provided travel expenses for their presence at the final banquet and hotel accommodations that night.

Recognition will be paid in two categories: distinguished community leadership and distinguished community leadership and distinguished achievement based upon outstanding efforts in a special field of endeavor with national recognition.

Chapters and district councils have received official nomination forms, which should be returned by May 1 to George Kimura, Nisei of Biennium committee, 2061 East 3220 South, Salt Lake City, Utah 84109.

It was further explained that supporting documents for a "Nisei of Biennium" nominee should not exceed 15, that nominations originate with a JACL chapter or district council, that a statement from the submitting group be not more than 500 words and cover qualifications not contained in the application, and that the nominee be apprised of the nomination to avoid any withdrawal during the selection period.

'JACLer of Biennium'
The Dr. Randolph M. Sakada Memorial Award (JACLer of Biennium) recognizes the JACLer who has contributed most to the strength and growth of JACL during the past biennium. The period for the current judging is from Sept. 1, 1970, to May 1, 1972, deadline for all nominations.

A chapter may nominate any number of candidates and forward nominations to their respective district recognitions committee, which will screen and select a maximum of three and forward the papers to the National Recognitions Committee chairman Jack Ogami, 376 E. Commercial St., Weiser, Idaho 83672.

The national committee will then select the top three candidates with recommendation of the leading candidate.

Nationally-elected officers on the National JACL Board will make the final selection. Nationally elected members of the Board are not eligible but district governors who are also members of the National Board are eligible.

A uniform scoring system in the judging will be followed to base significant contributions:

| Area of Contrib. | Pts. Max. |
|------------------|-----------|
| Chapter | 8 |
| District Council | 4 |
| National JACL | 4 |
| Society-at-large | 10 |

Letters of commendation, news clippings and other supporting data should accompany the nomination form.

PATSY TELLS SEATTLE NISEI WHY SHE'S RUNNING FOR U.S. PRESIDENT

By CHERRY KINOSHITA

SEATTLE — Citing her reasons why a Japanese American "no more than 5½ ft. tall, and a woman to boot, would dare to enter the arduous campaign for the Presidency," Congresswoman Patsy Mink spoke before a group of over 100 at a banquet sponsored by the Japanese Americans for Patsy Mink Committee on Feb. 12 in Seattle.

"I believe the times in this country require such political and audacious action," she stated, pointing to the many problems that face this country such as the Vietnam war, the educational opportunities, the housing problem, the needs of the cities, concern about environment, and the frustrations about the future that lie ahead for the children.

Declaring that these and other problems are not for someone else — "the great and the mighty" — to solve and formulate solutions, Mrs. Mink urged that "each of us, no matter what our position, has a responsibility and even a duty to participate and try to evolve some kind of solution that would improve our lives ahead not just for ourselves but for coming generations."

Imagination, Enthusiasm

The Nisei congresswoman hoped that her expression of some of these thoughts in her stand before an electorate, as an almost total stranger, handicapped by two or three strikes against her, would perhaps capture their imagination and light a spark of enthusiasm for public commitment to politics. "To make some sort of lasting impact in the minds of some people in a small quarter of America—maybe this was the way I could serve in national politics," she said. "This I hope my efforts will help to dramatize in Oregon."

Before a Democratic women's group earlier in the day, Mrs. Mink said she would probably also be on the ballot in Wisconsin, Maryland and Rhode Island. She affirmed total support for the efforts of Democratic Congresswoman

NC-WN NAMING 4 CANDIDATES FOR NAT'L OFFICE

District Keeping Its Nominations Open Through March 13

STOCKTON — Thus far, four candidates have been nominated by the Northern California-Western Nevada District Council for National JACL offices. It is the first district to announce its nominees, though its option to add to their ticket remains until March 13, according to DC nominations chairman Dr. Kengo Terashita.

The four nominees are: incumbent James Murakami (Sonoma County), vice-president for research and services; incumbent Tad Hirota (Berkeley), 1966 Chairman; Frank Iwama (Sacramento), vice-president for general operations; Ronald Lal (Bay Area Community), vice-president for public affairs.

San Francisco may submit a nominee, Dr. Terashita was advised.

Iwama is past president of the Sacramento JACL, a deputy attorney general with the State of California. Lal, co-chairman of the Bay Area Community JACL, is in insurance and ran unsuccessfully in the Berkeley councilmanic race last year. (A more detailed background of the nominees will be released by the nominations committee.—Ed.)

All district councils have until March 28 to a forward nomination papers to Tats Misaka, chairman of the National Nominations Committee, in Salt Lake City.

EVAQUEES IN FEDERAL CIVIL SERVICE MAY GET RETIREMENT CREDIT

(Special to The Pacific Citizen) WASHINGTON — Japanese Americans who are federal employees and who were interned in camps during World War II will get credit for their retirement benefits if that time legislation introduced by Rep. Jerome R. Waldie (D-Calif.) is enacted into law.

Waldie, chairman of the subcommittee on retirement, insurance and health benefits of the House Post Office and Civil Service Committee, said the legislation "is long overdue."

Waldie's bill would give the federal employee or retiree credit for the periods during which he or she was detained or interned in a camp.

"The passage of this bill, and another now pending before the House Committee on Ways and Means which would give Social Security credit for the years interned, would give at least some redress for the suffering and anguish borne by the Japanese Americans who were evacuated during the war years," Waldie said.

"The Federal Government, the employer of these American citizens, was responsible for the unjust tragedy of their internment. Though little can be done to substantially repair the lives thus broken and interrupted, this minor atonement on the part of the Federal Government for the great wrong done these loyal Americans is a small step in that direction," Waldie said.

Waldie said his subcommittee will schedule hearings on the bill, HR 13180, in the near future.

Ye Editor's Desk

IN SEARCH OF A PRESIDENT-ELECT

We have no business, really, to openly worry whether the National JACL Nominations Committee will find any takers for the important national office of president-elect. District Councils still have four weeks to submit nominations. But we have the gnawing feeling the organization is combing its ranks more aggressively than usual in search of a president-elect.

Heretofore, chief curiosity broiled over who was running for president. But executive reorganization instituted two years ago has shifted the electoral spotlight to the No. 2 position of president-elect.

Though the PC can now publicize candidacies ahead of the Nominations Committee (it had been JACL policy that the committee would make the initial announcement after all district councils had submitted their nominations), the tickets thus far submitted by two district councils leave the No. 2 position untouched. Like we said, our concerns may be premature.

Cleveland's Henry Tanaka has been scrambling about as president-elect this past biennium, watching every step and turn of National President Ray whom he succeeds in a couple of months. He is due to spend time in San Francisco and Los Angeles, where JACL's potential (and problems) are the greatest. He aims to solidify the JACL structure now strewn across some 30 national committees Being an Oregonian by birth and a Midwest transplant (courtesy Executive Order 9066), an executive with social work background, his assuming office come July 1, we feel, perpetuates JACL's good fortune of having the right man on at the right time.

JACL's transit through the rest of the 1970s, however, will be different. Whatever is deemed, the talents and skills of two mainstays in JACL administration over the past quarter century will be missing. Yet the most exciting prospects lie ahead for JACL, which is on the threshold of wrapping up fifty years of service by the end of this decade. Year 1980 will mark JACL's golden jubilee.

The next president-elect will play an important role in the remaining '70s for he can add the golden touches to the JACL service record during the six years he is committed on the National Board; two as president-elect, two as president and, finally, two as the past-president.

An unquieting aspect might be to have some lady nominated president-elect this time or next.

PC SUBSCRIPTION RATES

Under the gun to draft a PC budget for the coming biennium, at least sufficient to determine what PC subscription rates for JACLers will be from 1973, we may have to resort to a ouija board for some indication of what the U.S. Postal Service will charge next in the way of meeting its announced increase in second-class rates of 142% by 1976.

The PC has been paying the Postal Service (before the 15% surcharge was levied on a temporary basis from May 16, 1971) an average 55 cents a year per copy. A 142% increase on 55 cents would balloon the postal rate to $1.33 a year per copy.

The general breakdown of subscription costs rounds out to:

|----------------|----------|----------|
| 30%—Paper, ink | $17,000 | $17,000 |
| 20%—Mailing | 10,000 | 10,000 |
| 20%—Postage | 10,000 | 15,000 |
| 30%—Circ./Adm. | 17,000 | 20,000 |
| | $54,000 | $62,000 |

JACLer subscription rates are currently pegged at $3 per year. Within the next two bienniums (through 1976), another 80 cents must be added to cover the postal increase and 20 cents more to cover other subscription expenses for a total of $4 per year. We shall therefore recommend steps of 50 cents increase per biennium.

Publishers are now becoming more concerned about prohibitive mailing costs, fearing that free speech is being curbed as a consequence. The rate increases now proposed only promise the public with less and less informative material by mail at higher and higher cost.

When Congress established second-class mail rates, it was intended to see informative material distributed at low cost. The electronic media has not been able to fill the need, in the meantime. Hence, the Congress should be compelled to take another look at the public service role of delivering the mail, though the U.S. Postal Service was established in 1970 with the idea that it should be operated on a business-like self-sustaining basis.

17 Weeks Until Cherry Tsutsumida

Evacuation Plus Thirty

The 22nd Biennial National JACL Convention to be held in Washington, D.C. from June 27 to July 1 will be a time of remembering. Those living on the west coast will think back to those years right after leaving the relocation centers when they tried to mend their disrupted lives in Cleveland, New York, Chicago, Detroit, or some other large city where there might be jobs. Others will recall the 42nd, the "hara maki" knotted carefully by nimble Nisei and Issei fingers, the letters back and forth about the community talent show, the new cook and same food at the mess hall, the "Lost Battalion" and unfamiliar places with a lot of 'v's and 'z's ending in o's and a's. Many will think of those buried in Arlington Cemetery, and the hundreds of other Nisei and Saneis GIs who paid the supreme sacrifice during a time of national crisis. Others will look at the calendar and suddenly realize that 1972 is the commemoration of Evacuation plus Thirty Years.

Evacuation is to the Nisei heritage what the Betrayal of La Malinche is to the Mexican Indian. It is what the Warsaw Ghetto is to the Jew, the Siege of Leningrad is to a Russian, the London Blitz is to an Englishman, what the Colonial Era meant to India. It is an event that happens to a people that is so outrageous and contradictory to justice that rather than destroy a people's spirit, it unites and strengthens them to new heights. In fact, if there is one common emotion shared by Issei, Nisei, and Saneis, the bearded activist and the grey flannel moderate, it is the feeling, (if not the words), they all share about this one event.

Even those born far after Manzanar, Gila River, Rohwer, and Poston no longer existed know that these barbed wire names must not be forgotten and that they too share in the perpetuation of that memory. For every American it is a stunning reminder that even the greatest democracy in the world is capable of errors that are an indignity to her own Constitution.

It is good that the Biennial Convention marking the 30th Year after the first Japanese American was uprooted from his home should be held in the nation's capital. With no exaggeration, it can be said that the Nisei Story is as much a part of America's history as the Halls of Congress or the White House. More important, it is still alive. As each JACL member comes to the Convention, he will reaffirm his two heritages. From the marbled buildings, the institutions, and the form of government he will find his Western heritage, based on Anglo Saxon custom and Greek and Roman Law. But he will also find his other heritage. From the wrinkled smile of the Issei, from the intense words of Nisei, from the probing mind of Saneis, he will find his Oriental heritage, spawned in Eastern values, reared in a tightly woven family system, and made unique by contact with the West.

It would be regrettable if a large number of the younger generation did not attend the Convention. It is important that the young Saneis from Seabrook knows that he is truly a brother to the Saneis from San Diego. It is important to know that a common heritage and the Evacuation epic have made the Japanese-Americans a united people and not just a lot of isolated and scattered individuals with strange last names.

Those who fear that JACL, by constantly reminding us of this fact promotes provincialism and stands as an obstacle to a truly integrated society should take heed of a most universal bit of advice. In English it reads: "To know the world, one must first know thyself."

Evacuation Plus Thirty will indeed be a time for remembering. May also be the beginning of another era worthy of continued remembrance.

MORE: JACL FINANCES, TANAKA PLAN

Although it probably wasn't intended that way, the casual reader of the Feb. 11 PC covering the JACL finances and the Tanaka Federated Plan may have been led to believe that JACL's $5,200 deficit last year was caused by chapter rebates of $5,700.

But let's set the record straight. The National Council adopted a $248,000 budget. Actual 1971 receipts after rebates exceeded the quota by $19,048. However there was that major item of the 1970 deficit of $16,500 plus "deficit-spending" beyond the original budget this past year covering:

Personnel, $1,544; overhead, $439; administrative-executive, $3,208; Community Involvement Project, $1,883; youth program, $53; and other nonbudgeted items, $6,073—TOTAL: $13,183.

Studying further the 1971 financial statement, program costs show a $5,415 "surplus" but actually $2,000 not spent is reserved for the 1972 convention (probably insufficient, anyway) and the $2,500 for contingency was depleted by nonbudgeted items.

Nevertheless, the 1971 deficit was not due to expenditures this past year but making up the 1970 deficit. As treasurer Al Hatate so clearly states, the lesson appears to be to spend within expected income each year. However, I'm not begrudging the deficit-spending this past year as I'm sure they were all well justified.

What we do need is more realistic budgeting. As Warren Furutani noted in his column (PC, Feb. 18), either fund a program adequately or drop it.

This leads into the Federated Plan, which involves budgeting and program planning. Henry Tanaka, in his Feb. 11 memorandum to me, cleared some misunderstandings I had about the plan and we're not that far apart in our ideas. We appear to be pretty much in agreement in principle.

According to Hank's memo, his plan provides a base level of support for all District Councils without regard to

House passes bill

admitting 2 delegates

WASHINGTON — The U. S. House recently passed by a 232-104 vote a bill introduced by Rep. Spark Matsunaga to seat nonvoting delegates to Congress from Guam and the Virgin Islands. Passage by the Senate is virtually assured.

In 1969, both Guam and the Virgin Islands were granted the right to elect their own governors. Eventually Guam either alone or with other islands in the Marianas may make its case for Statehood.

'Look, there goes Al Hatate.'

LETTERS FROM OUR READERS

The Ethnic Joke
Editor: The problem of what constitutes good humor and satire is one that bothers all writers. "What is funny?" they ask. "What will make my readers laugh?"

The classic example played upon with numerous variations is some poor guy slipping on a banana peel. Look at one of these variations, and although you know the same thing can also happen to you, you are safe for the moment. It is always the other fellow who has slipped, and that is funny. Also, our cartoonist or writer does not carry his joke so far as to show any truly gruesome details of injury to the unfortunate subject. Further, actual identification of the subject is never pinpointed. He is simply just another Joe Blow who is dumb enough to slip on a banana peel.

What about the Ethnic Joke? That is when the identity of the banana-peel-slipper is quite clear. He is identified by the color of his skin, or as belonging to some particular stereotyped group. Then we ask, what was the writer's intent? Did he write or draw his picture with malice aforethought. Was his purpose to degrade, embarrass, humiliate the subject? The only exception might be in the instance of the usual political cartoon. Even in the latter case it is only the most militant, most vicious or radical (either extreme "right" or "left") publications in which you will find the barbed attack. Fortunately most of our elected public officials are rather thick-skinned. As President Harry Truman so aptly put it, "If you can't stand the heat, get out of the kitchen."

Let us consider another side to the so-called Ethnic Joke. When any cultural group chooses to laugh at itself it is usually well within the realm of good humor. For example, some of our most talented comedians who happen to be Jewish are able to crack "Jewish Jokes" in a manner that is understood, appreciated and laughed at by Jewish people. Another example: a very popular black comedian (on TV) constantly kids and satirizes the foibles of his own race. The only complaints come from "up-tight" militants who can only see something they interpret as being offensive. The rest of the viewers, both black and white, laugh right along with "Geraldine". However, if the same jokes were delivered by a white comedian, then there would be cause for concern. We could rightfully question the propriety of such jokes.

In a most recent case (PC, Feb. 18), it is quite obvious the writer of the column in the "FIRE FIGHTER" (poking fun at Asians and Chicanos) was, indeed, writing with malicious intent. (It just ain't funny, Johnny Flood!)

For the sake of argument, let's suppose that an Asian or Chicano had written an article kidding about some of the imaginary problems that would accrue as a result of recruiting his people into the Seattle Fire Department. He might well come up with something amusing — in the same manner as the Jewish jokes. But certainly, his composition would not be degrading or insulting by intent or innuendo. Furthermore, our Asian or Chicano writer most surely would not have added a paragraph at the end of his piece, such as that Teachapi, Calif.

CAPITAL PUNISHMENT—The death penalty has been a hot issue for years, and it is not surprising that the recent decision of the California Supreme Court made it hotter. Those who defend it and those who oppose it will be no less convinced about the rightness of their cause, because this is an emotionally charged subject.

For almost every argument pro, you can come up with a con. Some point to the Bible's admonition against taking a life, others refer to the retribution concept of "an eye for an eye . . ." There are those who believe it is an effective deterrent, and cite statistics or experience to prove the point. Some say it is no deterrent, and point to states where the death penalty is valid, but the machinery to enforce it is too slow, i.e. execution should be sure and swift. Many oppose it generally, but there is the dilemma of picking out who dies and who lives. And so it goes.

In California the State Supreme Court based its decision on an interpretation of the "cruel and unusual punishment" doctrine of the Constitution. In so doing, it seems to me that the court was within its bounds and responsibility in interpreting the law, not making law. Certainly the issue of whether execution is cruel or unusual punishment is a valid one. However, the emotional impact of heinous murders and, perhaps more important, the realistic problem of protecting society from those who kill are not resolved by this decision. The large hang-up being that there is no currently sure way of saving that killers, especially aggravated cases, will never be released.

It seems significant that the 6-1 decision was written by a Chief Justice who is known as opposing any trend toward the judiciary "making law."

Illegal alien law
Editor: One of the hardest-fought legislative battles of the 1971 session is about to be staged again, with the subject of hiring aliens at the center of the controversy.

The law passed last year and becoming effective on March 4 of this year prohibits the knowing employment of illegal entrants to California, and its effects hopefully will make thousands of jobs available to the State's unemployed. In essence, the law establishes a fine of $200 to $500 for violation of its provisions, while protecting the innocent employer. Only those employers dealing in large numbers of illegal aliens — and displacing local workers — will be in violation.

Now a legislative committee is taking testimony on a bill which would wipe the new law from the books before it becomes effective. Proponents of the repeal say that the new law has divided the Mexican-American community because many of the illegal aliens are friends and relatives of those they are displacing on jobs. The committee has heard a parade of witnesses say Mexican-American communities in California are in "a state of severe depression" with unemployment rates exceeding 20 percent.

However, suggestions of tougher controls on illegal aliens received a mixed reaction from those attending a recent hearing. One witness reported that he knew of 18 employers who demanded payment from Mexican-American workers to take care of any fine the employer may be subject to because of the new law.

The problem is a real one, because some experts estimate the number of illegal aliens in the State at 300,000, taking thousands of jobs away from California citizens. Many feel that repealing the law on hiring of illegal aliens would not only encourage this job displacement, but would actually encourage the exploitation of Mexicans who, because they have entered the United States illegally, have no recourse when bullied by crews or taken advantage of by rapacious labor contractors.

Many supporters of the law are also quick to point out the peripheral problems inherent to the illegal alien situation, including the fact that illegal entrants are a major source for the flow of illicit narcotics into the State. Immigration officers have alone accounted for the seizure each month of approximately $500,000 worth of marijuana directly traceable to this source.

Supporters of last year's alien law admit there is a grave question whether the State Division of Labor Law Enforcement has enough investigators to insure anything like the proper compliance with the law.

However, the law is on the books. It is a public statement by the people of California that employers, large and small, farmers or industrialists, shall not attempt to cut labor costs by hiring illegal aliens.

WHAT'S ON STUDENTS' MINDS?—As a "visiting professional," whatever that means, we spent a couple of days chatting with students at the University of Washington's department of communications. The students, we were told, are anxious to pick the brains of people from out in the "real world," and so we didn't know quite what to expect. Would we be called upon to defend the conduct of the nation's newspapers? Would we be asked to comment on Vice President Spiro Agnew's now mostly muted criticisms of the news media? Would we be quizzed about the future of the printed newspaper in view of the glamor of electronic journalism?

Yes, there was some of that. But the great preponderance of the conversation had to do with a mundane but still very important aspect of the educational process: What can we do about getting jobs after graduation?

This is a question that hangs heavy over the heads of college seniors in economically depressed Seattle. The problem is compounded by history. During the era of violent student protest, which was just a couple of years ago, recruiters dangling offers of jobs were unwelcome on campuses across the country. Some of them were picketed. Some were endangered, particularly those manufacturing war materiel. So they quit coming around to the campuses and they quit advertising in the campus newspapers. Meanwhile, the student mood changed but by then the recruiters had gotten used to the habit of seeking out bright young students. And now that students realize they are no longer in position to pick and choose between job offers, to be wooed and to accept or reject according to whim, they are worried.

They came to the right place when they wanted to talk to someone about scrambling for jobs. There was a Depression of sorts in 1937, too. Remember? There were 28 of us graduated from the school of journalism that year. As I recall, there were four, maybe five who found jobs in the profession for which they had been trained. The rest considered ourselves fortunate to get any kind of work. One went to work in the post office. One became a printer. One went to sea as an oiler in the engine room of a tramp steamer. Some of the girls married before they really wanted to. Those who could persuade Pop to put up a bit more money went back to school. Three of us were Orientals and that meant we didn't have a, if you'll pardon the expression, a Chinaman's chance. So we coped the best way we could.

The students today aren't concerned so much about just getting a job; what they're looking for is an interesting job that will let them utilize their education and lead them to the top. It's nice to dream about such an ideal opportunity. But I had to tell them that there's a considerable gap between what they learn in the classroom and what they'll need to do out in the real world. For aspiring newspapermen—and there were a remarkable number of them—the advice was to work for two or three years on a small paper and then try the big time.

Afterward, it occurred to me that I was talking like an old square, but several of the pros offered assurance that I was simply reinforcing what they had been saying all along.

There's a Nisei (actually, it's Sansai) angle here. One of the school's recent graduates is Barbara Tanabe, a perky and plucky young reporter for a Seattle TV station. Contrary to the Nisei experience she got her job, she admits, because she is a member of a racial minority. The station was looking for a Black reporter to replace Black woman who had gone on to better things. Unable to find a qualified Black, they settled for Barbara. It should be noted, however, that once the door was opened, Barbara stepped in and proved her ability to produce in a demanding profession, just as another Sansai girl, Tritia Toyota, is doing in Los Angeles.

There's seems to be a lesson here, but I didn't try to point it out to the students.

lessness and part narrow provincialism all based on a fundamental absence of respect for non-Western cultures. But if they are going to pretend to be interpreters of those cultures to a large viewing audience, then this subtly superior attitude can be regarded as sheer irresponsibility. This attitude manifests itself again in the other crucial area of this production—the casting of the lead role. We have here a strong, physically assertive hero. But he is Eurasian not Asian. Why? Indeed, historically accuracy would dictate that he be pure Chinese. According to Dr. Philip Huang, professor of Chinese history at UCLA, the Shaolin Temple monks were vigorously nationalistic against the forces of foreign imperialism. The temple was highly exclusive and maintained rigorously exalted standards. The possibility of a mixed blood being accepted as a Shaolin monk was, use a rather extreme example, comparable to a black man being accepted as a Ku Klux Klansman. To be faithful to Chinese history, the character of the monk had to be full Chinese. However, in today's social climate casting a Chinese role with a Caucasian actor would be open invitation to criticism. One can conclude that the character was changed to Eurasian in order to accommodate the casting of a Caucasian actor as the monk.

er of the Chinese laborers has to be played by a Caucasian actor? Have the coolies advanced to the point where they can be saved this time by the great half-white father? The insidious statement made by this casting is that we are inevitably dependent on the whites for our salvation, that we were then and still are today second class, that our heroes cannot be molded in our own image. It is a demeaning notion that a self-respecting Asian would find distasteful. But we have a long heritage of portrayals molded by this attitude. It has played a part in our growing up in White America and continues to influence formative minds today. The kind of legacy we leave to the next generation, not only Asian-American but to all Americans, is determined by what we do today. The Cultural Affairs Committee is continuing its dialogue with ABC and the other networks on this as well as on many other issues. We welcome your thoughts and urge your individual initiative on the local level.

Canada's version of Evacuation

CHATHAM, Ont. — Time has a way of taking the bite out of hate. In September, 1942, Chatham's city council acting on citizens' complaints made national headlines by drafting a letter designated for senior governments demanding only unmarried Japanese-Canadians be shipped to nearby forced labor camps, that they be removed during winter, when there were no sugar beets in the fields to work on, and that they be shipped out when the war was over. A quarter of a century later, the city hired the son of one of the displaced Japanese-Canadians as one of its top employees. City engineer Ted Takahashi is just one of several second and third generation Japanese-Canadians who have become a vital part of Chatham's way of life as a result of the federal government's reaction to the fear of subversive action by the Japanese during the Second World War.

Evacuation Canada-Style

Born in South West Westminster, British Columbia, the son of a Canadian-born mother and a Japanese father, Takahashi and his family were caught in the sweep. Shortly after the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor, Canadian authorities began taking precautionary measures, Japanese-owned fishing boats were impounded. A Japanese language school closed. At the end of February, 1942, the evacuation began when a 100-mile wide strip along the B.C. coast was ordered cleared of all people of Japanese origin. The Takahashi family was among 12,000 people shipped to the Slocan Valley where towns in the B.C. interior, some 300 miles away. Ted's father, a carpenter by trade, was put to work fixing up the town's old buildings. They were soon shipped east to Ontario, first to dairy farms near Guelph and Dashwood, and eventually to the sugar beet farms in Harwich Township. Ted was 12 years old.

'Immigration Camp'

Jack Nishizaki, who now works for the Ontario government's department of transportation and communication in Chatham, was housed out of a Vancouver Island pulp mill and won the dubious honor of being the first Japanese-Canadian shipped to an "immigration camp." The next day others began to arrive by busload. Eventually, 134 of them became the first group shipped eastward, arriving in Schreiber, Northern Ontario. He and 19 others eventually ended up at the Harold English Farm in Harwich Township. Both Takahashi and Nishizaki said they cannot argue with the theory that the displacement and their families experienced has proven beneficial to them in the long run.

Both have all the earmarks of success, such as good jobs and comfortable homes. Nishizaki, who has never achieved if they had remained in the B.C. Japanese communities. Irony of Experience While each has made good use of Ontario's opportunities when given the chance, the irony of the Japanese-Canadian's war experience doesn't completely escape them. "Saying 'look at all we have done for you' to the Japanese-Canadians," Takahashi said, "is like cutting off someone's arm for the fun of it, then finding one of the arms cap-tured and asking the man to thank you for saving his life."

"We have got in on a lot of benefits in the long run—but that certainly wasn't the intent," he said. There was nothing unusual about the hate and resulting racial prejudice shown by Canadians during those hectic war years, Takahashi said. He believes it is natural for a man to discriminate against someone in a minority—especially if that minority is physically different than the majority. The pressures and fear brought on by war only increased these feelings. Personal Experiences The Japanese themselves are no exception. There is discrimination in Japan today. It has become a way of life, he said. When asked to comment on their own careers in relation to their wartime experiences, both Takahashi and Nishizaki said the memories and prejudices they have faced have been significant factors in their efforts to succeed. "If two people are in competition for something, and one is from a minority, that person will have to have something special to offer," Takahashi said. "This means he has to try a little harder." Starting out in grade six in Chatham, Takahashi worked his way through vocational school before taking a job in industry for three years. He returned to school and earned enough credits to gain admission to the Univ. of Waterloo. He graduated in 1966 and came back to Chatham as deputy city engineer, before advancing to the city engineering position. Jack "Poppy" Nishizaki, a pulp mill worker and sports enthusiast, was old enough to be in the army, but the army didn't want him. So, he spent the summer of '42 thinning sugar beets, serving as camp cook and getting up the odd game of softball whenever he got the chance. As the war spread, he was recruited by the British Army. "Mr. and Mrs. English treated us just as if we were members of their own family," he said. "They told me to go ahead and join if that is what I thought best."

So despite having been refused by his country, and having alienated a large number of his own race who were bitter because of the treatment their people had received and were not in favor of assisting the allies, he was off to war. Wearing a British uniform at the time and finally the Canadian uniform following a policy change, he did interpretation and interrogation work. Poetstar Opportunity Based in Singapore, he served throughout Southeast Asia and in India. His experience as a cook in the labor camp enabled him to get a job in a Chatham restaurant after the war. He then worked in a Chatham factory for 20 years before it closed down and he assumed his present position at the Kent Centre operation of the Department of Transportation and Communication. Nishizaki didn't get an opportunity to get a higher education—like many people of all races—because of the war. But his son Verne did, and so did Takahashi, Dr. Shigeru Sugiyama, of Chatham and countless others across Canada. There is no denying the mass transportation of a race in the heat of war has left a few scars, but it has also provided a wealth of good citizens for Chatham and other Ontario cities. Chatham, where Japanese-Canadians could not take a drink or drive a car during the war, and which tried to prevent them from bringing their families to the city, is one of Ontario's biggest winners.—(Windsor Star)

University becoming a modern dinosaur

KITCHENER, Ont. — Universities are modern-day dinosaurs, according to University of British Columbia geneticist David Suzuki. "The university is a dying institution," he told University of Waterloo students in a bear-pit session recently. Dr. Suzuki was here to deliver the Hagey Lectures, commemorating the contributions of the university's founding president, Dr. J. G. Hagey. Dr. Suzuki is the first Canadian and the youngest person — he's 35 — invited to speak in the series' three-year history. He told students that the granting of a degree as a meal-ticket was never the purpose of the university and that "faculties have prostituted themselves to encourage that mentality. "A degree doesn't guarantee a job, and it certainly doesn't make you a better person."

Grading System He criticized the marking system in which "someone who gets an A really thinks he's a better person than someone who gets a D. Students are all locked into that." He said he once offered to give every student in a course an A, and they rejected it 5 to 1. He felt students could probably get more fulfillment outside of university, and said the "majority of students have no business being here — it's bad for them, it's bad for everyone."

He was challenged from the floor by one student who said that students have no real power in the university. "Don't tell me to chuck it. Either change it or shut up," the student said. Another one said that while universities may not be the place for everyone, many students do not want to drop out because they have "nothing to drop into. Have you got any alternatives?"

Decide for Yourself! Dr. Suzuki told them he wouldn't tell them what to do. "You've got to take that responsibility into your own hands. As long as you depend on others, to give you suggestions, you're still under their power. Make decisions on your own, for yourself." "I'm not a guru, damn it," Dr. Suzuki stresses he does not believe in trying to reform universities from within. "You can't do a kind of cut and patch reform. It's all or nothing. "I don't think there is any point in changing the system. I don't think it can be changed. There's no point in burning down universities — just get out."

Dr. Suzuki's recent lecture was on genetics and the destiny of man. His first talk was on his research on fruit-flies, and later he spoke on science, elitism, and the apocalypse. Jack "Poppy" Nishizaki, a pulp mill worker and sports enthusiast, was old enough to be in the army, but the army didn't want him. So, he spent the summer of '42 thinning sugar beets, serving as camp cook and getting up the odd game of softball whenever he got the chance. As the war spread, he was recruited by the British Army. Kawabe Memorial House dedicated, planners cited for staying in area

A fitting living memorial for the late Harry S. Kawabe, who pioneered and planned the building with the donation of $100,000. Adams commended the planners for not "running away" from this area and to serve the needs of the people in their own community.

A lengthy telegram was read from Sen. Henry M. Jackson who was campaigning as presidential candidate and unable to attend. Senators Jackson and Warren G. Magnuson and Rep. Adams were credited for being instrumental for getting government approval for the project.

Miss Pat Sado who joined the conducted tour said, "Being a female I looked at closest space first which are quite spacious. I also noticed that light switches are positioned for short people (like me). A person does not have to attempt deep knee bends to reach the electrical outlets. There's an emergency pull cord in the main living area as well as in the w.c. I'll bathroom." This may give an insight into the detailed thoughts which went into the project.

SAN JOSE LUMINARIES—Mayor Norman Mineta introduces guest speaker Rep. Paul McCloskey (R-Calif.) of Portola Valley to members at San Jose installation dinner.

McCloskey addresses San Jose JACL

By PHIL MATSUMURA

Rep. Paul McCloskey Jr. (R-Portola Valley) in speaking before the members of San Jose JACL at its annual installation dinner Feb. 5 at Lou's Village, announced that he plans to run in California's newly expanded 17th district, depending on his showing in the New Hampshire presidential primary. He also stated that if he gets 25 percent of the vote in New Hampshire, he will continue his presidential campaign.

February Events

Oakridge Golf Course in South San Jose near IBM will be the locale for 2nd annual JACL golf tournament to be held on Saturday, March 18.

All categories of golfers including juniors, men and women (with or without handicaps) are invited to participate. The special prize will be a 3 days, 2 nights trip for two at South Tahoe as an added feature of the tournament.

New first year members of the Board are: Stan Tanaka, Winston Ashizawa, Shirley Abe, Paul Tanaka and Stan Yamamoto.

Oakridge Golf Course in South San Jose near IBM will be the locale for 2nd annual JACL golf tournament to be held on Saturday, March 18.

The new 17th district embraces parts of both Santa Clara and San Mateo counties. He will not make his bid in the realigned 11th District which remains wholly in his own county—San Mateo.

Legally, McCloskey could run as an incumbent in either the 11th or 17th District. The 17th has the highest Republican registration.

However, he said, "only if lightning strikes in the primary, will I get that vote. It's almost 99 percent sure that I'll be running for Congress again."

Explain change of San Mateo nurse

SAN MATEO — The transfer of Suzu Kunitani, San Mateo County public health nurse, was explained this past week (Feb. 18) by Dr. George Pickett, director of the county department of public health and welfare, after San Mateo JACL had expressed its opposition.

"Mrs. Kunitani's transfer was a considered attempt to strengthen our programs and improve performance," Dr. Pickett said and assured the San Mateo JACL she was available to work with Japanese families where language barriers present a problem.

"Moreover, we are anxious to review the needs of the Japanese community and, if necessary, revise assignments," the director added.

Dr. Pickett cast the JACL protest as an "unfortunate outgrowth of misunderstanding" and assured the nursing office supervisor, Hilda Stengard, seeks to discuss with the JACL chapter steps to improve health programs and services.

Aloha from Hawaii

by Richard Gima

State Capitol

Honolulu State Rep. Yoshio Takamine has introduced a bill which would authorize a joint state-county of Kohala Sugar Co. The bill would provide up to $1.8 million in state funds for the purchase, with the County of Hawaii also participating. The estimated purchase is $5.2 million. Takamine is the Big Island director of the ILWU.

The state administration has proposed that all pregnant women be tested for gonorrhea during their first visit to a physician. This test would be made in addition to the blood test now required to detect syphilis. The measure has been introduced in the senate by David C. McClung. State health officials have cited that there has been a 400 per cent rise in venereal disease in Hawaii during the past four years. This compares with a 50 per cent increase nationally. The state recorded only 500 reported cases of gonorrhea in 1967. There were 1,976 cases in 1971.

Hawaii Today

According to Deputy Undersecretary of the Navy Joseph A. Grimes, Jr., there is little possibility that the Navy will halt its bombing exercises on the island of Kahooolawe in the foreseeable future.

Hawaii's tourist business must constantly reappraise itself to be sure it does not lose a big share of the South Pacific market to islands that equal Hawaiian sun and beaches and excel it in tranquility. This was the opinion of Rush S. Clark, Pan American World Airways sales director, in an interview here recently. Clark said Hawaii has a very fine image as a resort Down Under. "But," he added, "it has to watch its image in the sense that other areas in the South Pacific for example Fiji, do have beaches but are less developed and have less traffic."

Visitor traffic to the Neighbor Islands reached a new high last year with Maui well in the popularity lead. Out of last year's total of 1.8 million visitors who stayed overnight or longer in Hawaii, $19,428 spent some or all of their time on the Neighbor Islands. Visitor totals in 1971: Maui, 555,587; Hawaii, 522,749; and Kauai, 473,189.

The House Judiciary Committee on Feb. 11 heard strong opposition to a proposed April-through-October change to daylight saving time. The opposition was voiced during a hearing of a bill introduced by Rep. Clarence Akizaki. "If we move the clock forward an hour in April, most people will be getting up in the dark," said Roy Lefingwell, executive v.p. of the Hawaii Manufacturers Assn.

Names in the News

Takeshi Ueyasu has been elected to his third term as president of the Kihikihi-Palms Motel Club.

Other officers are James Swenson, 1st v.p.; Clarence Kamaka, 2nd v.p.; Monte Kinney, 3rd v.p.; Sister Grace Dorothy Lim, 4th v.p.; Frederick Yee, 5th v.p.; and Jack Hedger, 6th v.p.

Ronald Gima, Baldwin High School student body president, and three other Baldwin students have been selected as outstanding teen-agers of America for 1972. Chosen for their academic achievements and community service are Gima, Jo-Anne Ige, Kathleen Ikeda and Susan Honda.

Hester Sakai, program specialist for evening credit courses in the Univ. of Hawaii's college of continuing education and community service, was honored at a retirement luncheon at the Halekulani Hotel. She retired at the end of February after 19 years of service.

Edward Kawasaki, recreation instructor at Leeward Community College, has been installed as president of the Hawaii Recreation and Park Assn.

Attorney Matsuo Takabuki, appointed a Bishop Estate trustee eight months ago amidst a storm of controversy, addressed the 14th annual convention of the Hawaiian Civic Clubs at the Iliki Hotel Feb. 11 and received a standing ovation. He told the audience of about 500 that "to deny pride in one's ethnicity is to deny who you really are." There must be "respect for individual differences," he said, and the recognition that "there is more than one way, more than one right and more than one truth."

Political Scene

Rep. Patsy T. Mink has been placed on the Maryland primary ballot. She already is on the presidential primary ballot in Wisconsin and an announced candidate in Oregon. She said she won't campaign in either Maryland or Wisconsin but can't file disclaimers because she does intend to go on the Oregon ballot.

Thomas Kaukeano, 37, an employee of Denny's Imperial Hawaii Hotel, has formally announced his candidacy for the mayor of Honolulu. He is a somewhat politically unknown Republican businessman. A former GOP district chairman, Kaukeano ran unsuccessfully for the state house in 1968 and 1970.

Courtroom

Dr. Cyrus Loo, a Honolulu dermatologist charged with five counts of illegal distribution of drugs, has filed two motions in connection with his case in federal court. He asked that the government reveal evidence obtained against him and that it return certain property seized from his Alaska St. office. Loo pleaded innocent to all charges Jan. 10

House Health Committee hearing, most of those who testified strongly supported a measure to abolish the rule. The proposal has received wide support among legislators. Ending the rule would be helpful in recruiting doctors for rural areas, the committee was told.

Dr. Francis L. Lock has been elected the 1972 president of the Hawaii Dental Assn. Other new officers are Dr. Fumio Itai of Maui, president-elect; Dr. David Dune, sec.; Dr. Masahiro Oishi, asst. sec.; and Dr. John Fujioka, treas.

Dr. William H. Montgomery, an anesthesiologist, has asked the federal court to rule on the constitutionality of the state's residency requirement for doctors. The state law requires that a physician can take the medical examination after a one-year residence or nine months' continuous physical presence. In a suit filed in federal court, Montgomery has asked for a court order which would allow him to take the Dec. medical examination without having completed a year's residence in the islands.

Dr. Kenneth Y. Fujimoto has been elected president of the Hawaii Optometric Assn. Other new officers are Albert H. M. Chang, pres.-elect; Nathan K. Y. Chung, 1st v.p.; Stanley J. Yamane, 2nd v.p.; Dean J. Tajima, rec. sec.; Yukio Sumida, cor. sec.; Will L. Hayashi, treas.; and Stanley K. Tanabe, aud.

Molokai General Hospital, which is only 10 years old, faces increasing economic problems which may force the state to take it over next year, according to the Honolulu Advertiser. Some of the problems appear to stem from disension within the community growing out of a conflict between a doctor whose rights to practice at the hospital were cancelled and other members of the medical staff. Harold E. Eichelberger, hospital administrator, said that as a result of conflicts surrounding the hospital some Molokai residents go off the island for medical treatment, resulting in a severely reduced income for the hospital.

Waimanalo in Windward Oahu finally has a physician. He is Dr. Bienvenido Manayan, who came to Hawaii in 1969 from the Philippines. Since then he has completed internship and residency requirements before obtaining his license to practice in Hawaii. Two other members of his family also practice here—a sister, Dr. Cora Manayan, and a brother, Dr. Henry Manayan.

Dr. Leonard S. Kuninobu, an ophthalmologist, formerly of Monterey Park, Calif., has announced his association with the Straub Clinic at 888 South King St. Since his return from Calif. he has been in private practice.

BOOK REVIEW: Allan Beekman

Life of Chief Anarchist

KOTOKU SHUSUI: Portrait of a Japanese Radical, by F. G. Notehelfer, Cambridge University Press, 227 pp., $16.

Dec. 20, 1906, the first issue of Kakumei (The Revolution), published in San Francisco, announced its editorial policy. "Our policy is toward the overthrow of Mikado, King, Emperor, as representing the Capitalist Class, as soon as possible, and we do not hesitate as to the means."

When the leader of the anti-Japanese campaign, the San Francisco Chronicle, learned of the radical sentiments voiced it informed the English-reading public. The Chronicle carried a full banner headline, "Secret Service Men on Trail of Japanese Publishers." It followed by such subtitles as "Japs Favor Killing of President Roosevelt."

The story exacerbated the already tense relations between Japan and America. Agitators against Japanese immigration had been fomenting discrimination against Japanese settlers and laborers in California. In October of that year, the San Francisco School Board had affronted Japan by decreeing that Nikkei children must attend segregated schools.

Fresh from its victory over Russia, insulted Japan talked of war as a means of re-asserting its power. The bellicose threats were echoed from the Pacific Coast of America.

Visited America

Shushui Kotoku, founder of the group publishing the Kakumei observed from afar the hornet's nest paper had stirred up. After a visit to America, he had returned to Japan to further the cause.

Government harassment had encouraged a change in Kotoku's views from moderate to radical. Born Sept. 22, 1871, in Nakamura City, Kochi Prefecture, Denjiro Kotoku had been firmly grounded in Confucianism. Under the name Shusui, he had become known as a theoretician and elitist rather than a man of the people he professed to represent. He had considered the Emperor the natural head of the socialist state he envisioned.

During the dark days of the Russo-Japanese War (1904-5), however, the government had become alarmed at his pacifist, international sentiments. The government had closed down his newspaper, imprisoned him, ordered the Socialist Party dissolved.

Concluding that the government, with the concurrence of the Emperor, had closed all avenues to discussion and rendered orderly change impossible, Kotoku changed his views. "Frustrated in his attempt to conquer the political world, defeated and imprisoned, Kotoku struck back by excommunicating the Emperor."

Released from prison, Kotoku had gone to America. Socialists and anarchists had greeted him cordially. Through Sakutaro Iwasa and Tetsugoro Takeuchi, he had founded the Social Revolutionary Party of Oakland, which was to publish the Kakumei.

The Party continued to be vigorous. On the birthday of the Japanese Emperor, Nov. 3, 1907, the Party pasted on the porch of the Japanese Consulate, San Francisco, and in other public places, an "Open Letter to Mutsuhito, the Emperor of Japan, from Anarchist Terrorists."

In insulting terms, the letter called for the rejection of the Japanese royal family and concluded, "Your Excellency

CHINA TRIP JUST GOOD NEWS COPY SAYS REISCHAUER

Ex-Ambassador

On National TV

WASHINGTON — Two Asia scholars from Harvard disagreed this past week (Feb. 29) on the wisdom of President Nixon's trip to Communist China.

"It's the best thing that's happened in 10 years and probably 20 years," in U.S.-China relations, declared Dr. John K. Fairbanks, director of Harvard's East Asian Studies Center.

Not so, argued Prof. Edwin O. Reischauer, former U.S. ambassador to Japan. The President's trip, he asserts, is "just a spectacular news story."

Fairbanks and Reischauer were on national television.

Nixon Commended, But Reischauer commented that Nixon for taking steps to relax tensions with the Communist Chinese, but said "I actually going to China, I think, is a mistake."

He said the Chinese may wrongly interpret the President's visit to their country as an indication of American subservience.

Fairbanks argued instead that the United States must end a practice of "always talking down to others," and that Nixon's gesture is a step in the right direction.

Japan 'Forgotten'

Reischauer said he fears Nixon's trip may damage U.S. relations with Japan. To the Japanese, he said, "we seem extremely unpredictable and unreliable . . . we seem to forget all about them and get very excited about China."

Fairbanks dismissed suggestions that Red China would welcome massive U.S. aid. "The revival of our past benevolence and paternalism toward China is out," he said.

Reischauer added he felt nothing will be resolved on the Vietnam war at the meetings.

"Only the Vietnamese are going to determine their own destiny," he said. "The Americans and Chinese meeting aren't going to resolve it."

Government

A citizen's complaint was filed in the South Bay municipal court to restrain the City of Gardena from printing sample ballots in the coming April 11 elections showing Ken Nakaoka as "mayor" in the city's first popular election of that position. It was contended the post now held by Nakaoka who was named by his fellow councilmen is not the same as holding office by a vote of the people. A decision was due Feb. 29.

Exhibit Creators

Five years ago Richard Conrat, then an assistant to photographer Dorothea Lange who had covered the Evacuation and camp life for the War Relocation Authority, was moved by the many pictures she had taken and with Guggenheim Foundation support undertook to catalogue the photographs.

The Oakland Museum was in the midst of considering a display of some of these photographs a few years ago when its director, Dr. J. S. Holliday, was relieved and the project dropped.

Holliday then became executive director of the California Historical Society and encouraged the Conrats to pursue their project—a photo display and a book.

Public media coverage for both the exhibit and book has been extremely favorable and generous, according to Holliday. Members of the Bay Area Community JACL assisted at the museums. JACL Headquarters is also promoting the sale of books ($12.50 hardcover, $4.95 softcover). Other JACL chapters and youth groups in Northern California have organized tours to the museums for Issei and community organizations.

If the premiere showing is an indication, Feb. 19—the date President Roosevelt signed Executive Order 9066 authorizing the Evacuation—may be a date all Americans will commemorate hereafter, Uno said.

The exhibit of evacuee artists, "Months of Waiting," which opened at the CHS headquarters, will be featured with the photo display at Pasadena Art Museum, April 4-May 31. The photo display is also slated at the San Jose Civic Art Gallery Mar. 15-May 1.

Scholarship was made possible by Dr. Yoriyuki Kikuchi, who graduated the USC dental school in 1914, and is still in practice and believed to be USC's first Japanese dental graduate.

Press Row

San Francisco's Nichi Bei Times broke ground Feb. 19 for its new two-story frame office building and printing plant on Bush St. near Fillmore. First thing James Michener, enroute with President Nixon to Peking, did after checking into the Iliki during the Honolulu stopover was for a swim. "One of the reasons for coming here was to get some of that good sea water," he said. It was also his first time back in Hawaii in 14 years. Asked his opinion of Nixon's China visit, he applauded the trip unreservedly. "It's been absolutely insane the last 20 odd years all our information from China has come from third parties. . . Nixon is taking a political and economic risk in going to China but that risk is absolutely justified if for no other reason than Americans will be there." The Philadelphia JACler is covering the trip for Reader's Digest.

Courtroom

Harley Nakamura, active Fowler JACler, was named a member of the Fresno County grand jury. Stockton hotel operator Kiyoshi Hirano was named to the San Joaquin County grand jury, replacing a woman who was excused because of medical reasons.
