Several attempts have been made to initiate a systematic and scholarly study of the Japanese in the state of Utah. This last week, the first official meeting was held at the local Buddhist Church to undertake a program to preserve the history of the Japanese in this state. It will be under the auspices of the Center for the Study of the American West, Univ. of Utah, and Floyd O'Neil, Assistant Director for the Center and a doctoral candidate in the study of minorities in Utah, will be directing the collection of material from the Japanese community of this state. A modest sum of $2,000 has already been allocated to fund this project. Two student assistants are to be hired, hopefully, bilingual.

According to Mr. O'Neil, studies on the Blacks, Chicanos and American Indians have already been undertaken and much material gathered; however, the Center realized the necessity of embarking on a study of the Asian people of Utah before the first generation ceases to exist and much of the known and perhaps, unknown, records, documents and material lost or destroyed.

Representatives of the two JACL chapters, the Buddhist, Christian and Mormon churches, and interested individuals met to discuss the proposal which was met with enthusiasm. The next meeting has been scheduled and a tentative format sent to each representative.

The people of this state are known to be short of fanatic about their history and particularly their genealogy. Housed in the Mormon Church Genealogy Society Library is the world's largest and most complete genealogical collection. It was only a few years ago, just prior to the untimely death of Joe Grant Masakawa, that he made an appearance in Utah at the World Conference relating to genealogy and made a report on the Japanese American Research Project work at UCLA.

For some time now, a similar effort has been directed toward establishing at the Univ. of Utah an Asian American Studies program. Although several meetings have been held in relation to such a program, the real impetus to get it off the ground has been missing because most people have been busy on other matters. Whether this indicates what priority the Asian American Studies program has, is yet questionable. Although there is a Japan Club at the University and a Japanese language course was being taught (dropped this past year because of lack of funds), no concerted effort was made to organize into a cohesive group, the different Asian American groups, nor any one group.

Recently, concerned, vivacious and energetic Sane JACLer contacted me in regards to the possibility of starting an Asian American Studies program at the University. Bunny Matsumiya, a graduate from the University in history, seems to have provided the spark necessary to get things started. She claims she has a short time available to spare to this project before she leaves for a trip to travel throughout Europe. She has already made some valuable contacts and may well get this project off the ground before she leaves for Europe.

This project may well tie in with the Japanese history project mentioned above. If so, Utah may be the first state to have such a dual program for the entire state available for the benefit of historians and interested Asian American scholars. I know I should not try to claim any first for this state because as soon as I do, some one will advise me I am wrong, probably from the west coast.

At any rate, the school administration has indicated support for such a project. There is a possibility of a modest funding from the University for this project, also. Again, because there is wide spread interest by the Mormon community for such a program, the probability of success increases. Since the Mormons have a very intensive missionary program in Hawaii and Japan, their interests go beyond a temporary or fleeting one. It is my understanding their missionary work in Japan is providing some interesting and revealing statistics and conversions are taking place at an increasingly rapid rate, one of the highest in the vast church missionary network.

Interestingly enough, my law partner's grandfather, Heber Grant, was a president of the Mormon Church, and established the first mission in Japan. My three partners are Mormon, one a bishop, one a former bishop and one a counselor, all three Republicans, and White. Talk about being a minority — non-Mormon.

NAT'L JR. JACL CONVENTION

Intermountain DYC to host first youth assembly Aug. 15-19 at Univ. of Utah

SALT LAKE CITY — Jr. JACL will have its own, separate National convention here at the Univ. of Utah campus Aug. 15-19 with Intermountain District Youth Council as hosts. Heretofore, the Jr. JACLers have met biennially since 1964 in conjunction with the parent organization.

Diane Aramaki, of 3674 S. 645 East, Salt Lake City 84106, and Allen Oshita, 1024 Blaine Ave., Salt Lake City 84105, were named convention co-chairmen.

Convention package deal costs have not been completely determined, but it will include housing at the university dormitories, all meals starting with dinner Tuesday, Aug. 15, through dinner Saturday, Aug. 19, registration and activity fees. A tentative figure of $45 was reported in the first of monthly reports the Jr. JACL Convention Board issued this past week.

200 Expected

At the recent emergency meeting of the National Youth Council Chairmen here, the representatives estimated probable attendance would be near 200.

Much of the convention program is being arranged by non-host district youth councils and will be reported in the coming weeks.

Assisting on the Jr. JACL Convention board are: Susan Yoshimura, registration; Vicki Fujii, pub.; Steve Kido, gen. arr.; Glen Morioka, transportation; Diane Aramaki, Chris Tomomatsu, hospitality; Linda Tomomatsu, booklet; David Motoki, Janis Mitsui, Park City social; Allen Oshita, treas.; Ron Aramaki, service projects; Alan Muraki, workshops; Alan Oyama, DYC Trade mart; Alan Okazaki, NYCC presentation.

The business sessions will be open to all convention participants, it was agreed, since important decisions with respect to the future of Jr. JACL must be made. The social at Park City, a ski resort east of Salt Lake City, has been scheduled for Friday night with a local musical group entertaining.

Service Projects

Among the service projects being planned are one with juvenile court and another with the Salt Lake Issei Center. The PSWDC and NC-WNDYC are planning workshops at the same time for non-Service Project registrants. PSW is planning a sensitivity workshop while NC-WN will cover cultural heritage or community involvement.

Home-made items will be sold at the district trademark with PNWDYC as coordinator. Profits will be kept by the respective districts.

Alan Okazaki, EDYC chairman, will chair the youth presentation at the Washington, D.C., national JACL convention and have it repeated at the Jr. JACL convention. Other DYCs are assisting the Philadelphia Jr. JACLer in this program, which is expected to consist of slide or film presentations.

Transportation Fund

Parent JACL chapters will be urged to support the Jr. JACL convention by contributing to a transportation fund, now being administered by Victor Shibata, Jr. JACL administrator. Senior chapters are expected to contribute $25 while the junior chapters donate $10 to the fund. Disbursement will be based on the number of attendees and distance from Salt Lake City.

OFFENSIVE BOOK REVIEW RAPPED, APOLOGY ISSUED

San Francisco Item Resurrects anti-Nisei Rumors of 1940s

SAN FRANCISCO — Editor of the San Francisco Progress, local bi-weekly shopping newspaper, has issued an official apology for using a book review containing "scurrilous comments" about Japanese Americans.

John Jordan, Progress editor, told the Nisei Bei Times, local vernacular newspaper, the review written by Edwin T. Grandy of Mill Valley never should have appeared. "It just slipped through," Jordan explained.

Grandy's capsule review of Paul Bailey's "City in the Sun," an authoritative book on the Poston War Relocation Authority center, was printed in the Feb. 18 Progress issue. Individuals in the Japanese American community took exception to the following paragraph, in particular: "True Japanese Americans were denied their civil rights during the war years, but forgotten is the fact that California was saturated with Japanese spies, including the head of the Japanese secret service who posed as a Monterey bishop!"

Editor Jordan remarked, "I hope our Japanese American readers will forgive this oversight." Two letters of protest including one from Edison Uno, was published Mar. 1 "with appropriate comments."

Uno, San Francisco State College Asian American Studies lecturer, said, "The article reveals the same racist attitudes responsible for the fears and hysteria 30 years ago are still perpetuated by such statements."

"I thought the general public was being educated by the

Concerned Asians to picket S.F. JACL installation

SAN FRANCISCO — An informational picket line is being organized by concerned Asians to appear Mar. 11 at Castagnola's where Dr. S. I. Hayakawa will be guest speaker at the San Francisco JACL installation dinner.

The chapter leadership was charged as "again misrepresenting the people of this community" by inviting Dr. Hayakawa who will speak of his recent tour of South Vietnam.

The anti-Hayakawa faction also noted the chapter had made previous political assumptions about the Japanese community by co-sponsoring the Dec. 10 luncheon when Gov. Reagan spoke on his tour of the Far East, the summer picnic hosting members of the Japanese Self-Defense Maritime fleet and or having previously invited the San Francisco State College educator to the 1968 chapter installation.

As of Feb. 26, among the sponsors of the picket line include:

Asian Alliance of George Washington High, Japanese American Students Project at San Francisco State, Asians for Community Action, J-Town Collective and the Bay Area Community JACL.

MDC surveying Asian study needs

CHICAGO — Robert Yamada, 26, with Model Cities of Chicago as a community organization intern, was appointed director of the Midwest District Council education committee, it was announced this week by MDC Gov. Ross Harano.

The MDC appropriated $500 to determine the extent of Asian American studies in high school curriculums in the Midwest area. From "this survey, which Yamada will direct, the district council hopes to develop its district education program."

Yamada is a sociology graduate from the Univ. of Illinois and previously worked for Chicago Boys Club as a camp registrar.

INTERNAL FEUD AT UNIV. OF HAWAII PERILS ETHNIC STUDIES PROGRAM

HONOLULU — Established on an experimental two-year basis in the fall of 1970, the future of the Univ. of Hawaii ethnic studies program is endangered because of a long-standing internal feud among staff members, according to an advertisement education writer Jane Evinger.

A decision must be made by the end of the current academic year on whether it will continue, and, if so, in what form.

A key element in helping the parent College of Arts and Sciences make a recommendation on the future of the program is a curriculum plan, which the program has never submitted to the college committee for review.

Curriculum Plan

On Dec. 3, three Ethnic Studies staff members wrote to Arts and Sciences Dean David Contois asking for the "immediate relief" of Dr. Dennis Ogawa as director of the program, mentioning "the urgency of developing" a curriculum plan as a factor.

The Ethnic Studies program has 29 staff members — almost all of them on a part-time basis — in addition to Ogawa.

On Dec. 7, 12 more staff members signed a memorandum saying they endorsed the Dec. 3 letter's recommendation that Ogawa be "at once relieved as program director."

That memorandum, however, never has been submitted to Dean Contois.

Where Trouble Started

The signers listed three of the seven staff members with academic ranks of instructor or above, two of four graduate assistants, four of five lecturers, five of 12 lab leaders and student researchers, and the one person on a consultant contract.

The program's troubles go back at least to January, 1971, when a majority of staff members held a meeting to consider seeking Ogawa's replacement. They were talked out of it by one of the three men who later signed the Dec. 3 letter.

The dissension came to a head last October, when many on the staff again urged seeking his resignation.

As a compromise, at a full staff meeting, it was agreed to form a committee of seven, including Ogawa, to assume full policy-making responsibility for the program.

Convention fever rising fast for DC-bound JACLers

WASHINGTON — Registration forms, brochure and delegate reservation card for delegates to the 22nd biennial National JACL Convention, June 27-July 1, have been dispatched to the JACL chapters this week, according to convention chairman Harry Takagi and Alice Endo, registration-housing chairman.

At the same time, the Convention "package deal" covering 12 events will be available at $60 if pre-registered by May 15 and $65 after that date for regular members, while for youth 18 and under accompanying their parents who register the rates are $50 if pre-registered by May 15 and $55 thereafter.

The 12 events include a special White House tour, Capitol Hill visitation and reception at the Japanese Embassy. None of the "package deal" events conflict with the scheduling of the National Council sessions at the Shoreham Hotel, convention site.

Convention week opens with a visit-reception at the Japanese art exhibit at the Freer Gallery Tuesday evening, June 27, followed by an informal mixer.

Major Attraction

National Council sessions begin Wednesday morning. In the evening will be the convention's major attraction, the Congressional Banquet, an opportunity to spend dinner with your congressman or senator.

The White House VIP tour and reception comes Thursday morning, followed by visitation of Capitol Hill with prospects of lunch at the Capitol with congressmen. That afternoon will be the congressional tributes to the Issei from the floor of the House, a State Dept. briefing for those interested in the future of U.S.-Japan relations as seen by a State Dept. spokesman. The National Council resumes its meeting in the evening.

On Friday morning, district council caucuses are scheduled and the convention luncheon will be a testimonial for National JACL Director Masao W. Satow, who has asked to be relieved February, 1973. That evening, the reception at the Japanese Embassy may be limited by number due to space and the registration committee will issue tickets in order of receipt. The National Council will reconvene in the evening to continue its business.

Full Final Day

On Saturday, memorial services at Arlington National Cemetery are scheduled in the morning and the National Council meets for its final session in the afternoon to elect its officers and designate its 1976 convention city. That evening, the Nisei of the Biennial will be introduced at the convention banquet with installation of the national officers for the 1972-74 biennial. Informal hospitality, dance and invitation by Portland to attend the 1974 convention will conclude what will be remembered in JACL history as the most unique and historic.

Photo Exhibit

Also opening for exhibit the same week at the Library of Congress will be the California Historical Society "Executive Order 9066", which

22nd National JACL Convention
WASHINGTON, D.C.
JUNE 27-JULY 1, 1972

Senator Daniel Inouye will serve as the official toastmaster for the 22nd Biennial National JACL Convention Congressional Dinner. The Congressional Dinner, scheduled for the evening of June 28, will be one of the special events featured during the week long Convention starting June 27 at the Shoreham Hotel in Washington, D.C.

To many people, particularly to those from the West Coast, the Congressional Dinner will be the memorable event of the year. Chapters throughout the country are already making plans to invite their Senators and Congressmen to join them for what promises to be a truly splendid event. Although most of the other program items for the week stress a degree of informality and casual dress, the Special Events Committee is encouraging all delegates and participants to be prepared for a more festive and formal evening on the 28th.

Although most JACL members will think of Inouye as the eloquent one-armed hero of WW II, his recent endeavors has made him a well known figure to the District of Columbia. As a member of the Senate District of Columbia Committee, his name and face are constantly in the Washington newspapers for his supporting but probing views on the District's affairs. Inouye can be a champion of compassion when he fights for shoes for district school children on welfare. But he can be a terrifying thunderbolt against certain public officials using tax paid limousines within the District's meager budget.

Delegates to the Convention are once again reminded that the Congressional Dinner is part of the Package Deal and tickets for this one event cannot be sold separately.

Ye Editor's Desk

It's been years since the minutes of the previous meeting have been read aloud by the secretary, but it happened the other Sunday at the Pacific Southwest District Council. Mitsuo Sonoda's voice was unwavering during her 25-minute rendition. Her husband Kiyoshi asked Mrs. Governor Helen Kavagoe why the reading could not be dispensed as has been the custom in the interest of time. And—true to her style and concern for "people", Helen explained there were many new officers and delegates in the midst who have not seen the minutes and it was for their benefit, to get them "on board" with the current DC activities and problems.

So much background and up-to-date information was imparted on what the various committees have been doing that it was a shame more mimeographed reports were not distributed—but delegates were already loaded down with Operation Katsu tickets from Washington, D.C., flyers for upcoming activities and a lettering of appeal.

The brief presentation by Bob Nakamura of the visual communications committee was especially impressive—though words can hardly convey the impact because his committee handles visual aid material. Undoubtedly it will be repeated, embellished with more items perhaps, in time for the National JACL Executive Committee session in Los Angeles come April. It should be one of the highlights at the National JACL Convention along with the education committee material—to start an avalanche of requests from chapters throughout the nation. How to manage that may be in the province of the Japanese American Research Projects, one of JACL's know-how committees.

This is incidental but a guest at the district meeting was a Miss Kazuko Jara (the "J" is pronounced a la Espanol), a Japan-born young lady working as a volunteer with the Japanese Welfare Rights Organization. We have seen unusual Japanese surnames now and then in our business but hers rates mention here.

Images have a strange way of playing on your memories. During the many ungodly hours we sat in front of the TV set while President Nixon was in China, we knew the Chinese would be polite. Even when he cornered a culprit, Charlie Chan was always polite. No were we surprised with the initial coolness shown the Nixon party. Dowager empress had treated David Niven during "55 Days in Peking" the same way. In one respect, however, the images disappointed us. Scanning the faces of the women closely, none even faintly resembled the Dragon Lady.

Receiving lines look the same everywhere, we guess. As the President moved along one of them, greeting the aged dignitaries of the People's Republic, he might have been on yet another vote-seeking pilgrimage, shaking hands with senior citizens in a retirement village. We half-expected him as he reached the end of the line to promise them an increase in social security benefits.

That state dinner in the Great Hall was cause for worry as Mr. Nixon was table-hopping, toasting every Chinese in sight. The glass either had to be empty or he was faking the toasts. Otherwise they would have had to carry him out on live TV—an international spectacular if there ever was one.

During intermission, the network showed films of the Chinese Communist party hierarchy gathered a year or so ago in Tienanmen Square. A fair number of the dignitaries, the narrator pointed out, were no longer around, either dead or in disgrace. In front of the same TV set, we remembered political leaders here can die violently or can fall in disgrace—but with one pronounced difference. The leaders die at the hands of lunatics and not of the government. We suspect when you go into disgrace there, you normally don't come back. Here, it's to the contrary—losing an election is not nearly so bad as it seemed the first morning after. The man who bounced back from two disastrous showings, all of us can recall, in six short years became the President of the United States.

ARIGATO, PASADENA

Here, we sit munching on salty Japanese rice crackers—a door prize won for having attended the Pasadena JACL installation dinner; nay, for sitting at a table where all of us had the luck of having our numbers selected for a prize. The Kiyoshi Sonodas won two prizes while single prizes went to Tom Shigekuni (who have friends and kin in Oklahoma City and Dallas), the Robert Obis (who relate the fact their name is also Nigerian) and the Clifford Tanakas (who were sweating out the odds of hitting—and hit they did, scoring a 1,000 for the group).

Dr. Joe Abe (who kept us cackling with laughter with his wry humor on Bus 3 of the first JACL Japan Tour) excelled as toastmaster in a waggish way. Mack Yamaguchi revealed himself to be a straight-face comic, too, in his farewell speech as chapter president. If he can play a violin, he can rate as a "Nisei Jack Benny". And Thelma Stoddy must be the first JACL chapter president who's blonde and blue-eyed.

David Ushio, Washington JACL representative, was prevented by fog at the L.A. International Airport from attending. The irony here is that his plane landed at San Francisco, a city more famous for the stuff that wasn't there that night. Will ironies continue to dog him? Just musing, Dave.

Although styles vary, women should feel quite comfortable in their favorite cocktail dress of any length. Dressy pajama like pants suits, particularly those designed with an oriental influence would be appropriate and fashionable for this occasion. Men are encouraged to dress accordingly. Dressy events in Washington, D.C. tend to be dressier than is generally the case in many parts of the country.

According to Mrs. Alice Endo who is in charge of seating arrangements for this affair, tables will be set up by delegations. This will enable groups to engage in a more relaxed conversation with their Congressmen. Although the name of speaker for the event cannot be divulged at this time, he is a person of international significance. His topic will be one of immediate relevance both to those in Congress and to all members

UNFAIR COMPETITION?

The S.S. Pierce Company, a conglomerate based in Boston, two years ago thought that they could become a dominant factor in the strawberry growing, processing and marketing segment of California agriculture. They purchased a large strawberry operation in Salinas using a subsidiary called Pic 'n Pac. They were the first to sign with the United Farm Workers Organizing Committee in the strawberry industry. At the end of two years of operation, they found that they had lost so much money that they decided to get out of the strawberry business. In a public statement, they placed much of the blame for their failure on their UFWOC contract, claiming that the union failed to supply them with competent labor at a reasonable cost.

Pic 'n Pac tried to sell their plantings, but could not find buyers because the UFWOC contract had to be assumed by the buyer. Seeking to salvage their investment, they went to the Office of Economic Opportunity (OEO), headed by recently-appointed Director Philip Sanchez, for help. The OEO made a federal grant of $450,000 to form a cooperative of 160 Mexican American growers on a total of 528 acres (PC, Feb. 11). This amounted to an outright subsidy, which did not have to be repaid, of about $850 per acre or $2,800 per family.

Independent strawberry growers of California, many of them small, independent Japanese Americans, protested the use of their tax moneys for the purpose of salvaging private enterprise and subsidizing competitive strawberry growers. It was maintained that Federal funds should not be used to recoup the losses of private business. Tad Tomita, president of Natunipe, a cooperative of independent strawberry growers, stated that this was totally unfair to existing farmers who had never received government aid in their struggle to become strawberry growers, many of whom are members of another minority, the Japanese Americans. It was a case of the government helping one minority at the expense of another minority. A select few were being preferentially treated at the expense of other farmers in the same business, and seemingly solely on the basis of their ethnic background.

Urban people may think that this is just another case of arrogant farmers seeking to deny help to Mexican farm workers.

To bring the matter into focus, suppose the OEO decided that Mexican Americans should be added into entering the professions—medicine, dentistry, law, optometry, teaching, etc.—suppose that they brought about the lowering of admission standards solely for them; suppose that OEO paid the tuition, living costs, etc. for them; suppose that they required the schools to accept a stated percentage of Mexican American applicants and forced them to lower the quotas for others equally deserving of help?

What then would be the reaction of the other ethnic groups and those already in these professions who had to make it on their own?

It is high time that Japanese Americans concentrated on Japanese American problems. The blacks, 22,000,000 strong, do not need the help

LETTERS FROM OUR READERS

Support for plays
Editor:
As PSWDC Cultural Affairs Chairman, I recommend that everyone attend the premiere performance of Momoko Iko's play, "The Gold Watch" and Mako's, "There's No Place for a Tired Ghost" at the Inner City Cultural Center beginning March 15.

Thousands of movies and TV shows have been made at the cost of millions featuring World War II exploits. But Hollywood has dealt with the Japanese relocation in only two films. The first third of "Hell to Eternity" (1960) showed the breaking up of one Japanese American family. The rest of the film was trite war movie madness.

ABC-TV's Movie of the Week, "If Tomorrow Comes" (1971) featured a Japanese male and white female marriage broken by the relocation and drowned in a sea of "Oriental" exotica. There is one line referring to the relocation camps in "Go For Broke" (1951). These films, written, produced, and directed by non-Asians, justify the relocation as a military or patriotic necessity. None of them ever hint at the adversity of opinion within the Japanese American community.

In two years, Asian-Americans in the performing arts have produced more dramatic presentations of the relocation experience than all of Hollywood's movies and TV. Film images to Manzanar have done the same. It is clear that it is up to us to stimulate interest in this period of history. But writers and actors cannot be developed overnight. Writers cannot create within the present Hollywood system without betraying themselves. Actors cannot progress playing only memorial roles in Hollywood films. It is up to us to support them until they are recognized by Hollywood as human beings. I cannot give a dramatic critique because I am actively participating in both of the shows. Whether they are good or bad in terms of entertainment is up to you. I do guarantee that the ideas presented will stimulate you.

As for suitability, there's nothing done or said in the play that will be new to the average fourteen year-old. Preview performances will be given March 9, 10 and 11 at 8:30 p.m. All seats will be $1.50.

The regular run will begin March 15, and will continue Wednesday through Sunday at 8:30 p.m. with a matinee at 2:30 p.m. Tickets for the evening performances are $5.50, $4.50 and $3.50. Tickets for the matinee are a dollar less.

do not make ourselves felt and heard.
The one overpowering impression that I have received from attending these Forums is that both the University and the community are gravely insensitive to Asian American problems. As a matter of fact, one faculty member who works closely with different minorities expressed the universal cliché, "I didn't think Asian Americans had any problems." I have been advised by a former vice president of the University that the Japanese American student ratio is 2 1/2 times greater than the community population of Japanese Americans; therefore, very little, if any, emphasis has been given to the problems of the Japanese American.

In Cleveland, I was told that the most recent studies show the Japanese Americans to have the highest percentage representation in higher education among all Americans, including all white ethnic groups. I am not from Missouri, but I am like President Harry S. Truman, I got to see to believe.

At the last National JACL Credit Union dinner meeting and dance, the Nat'l JACL annual report Credit Union showed assets of one and a half million dollars and predictions of a two million dollar year next year. That is getting to be big business. Hopefully, the members will avail themselves of this service. I wonder what the chances are of the Credit Union offering a nice, healthy student aid type of scholarship, or two or more?

Since assuming office as president, I have written twice as many letters of recommendation of one type or another, than I have written ever before, for scholarship aspirants, applicants to schools, professional and otherwise, applicants for employment in government and private industry, applicants for admission to the bar, and so forth, not only for Japanese Americans, but for numerous other people in a professional capacity as well as in my capacity as JACL president.

JR. JACL MEET—In a recent memo to committee chairmen from Allen Oshita and Diane Aramaki, co-chairmen of the National Jr. JACL Convention to be held in Salt Lake City in August, 1972, the parting note read: "No more peace!"

Say no more! I am sure the monthly meetings required of the 18 committee chairmen to attend do not begin to reflect the hours of time that will be spent to work out the many details involved. Besides which, monthly progress reports are being issued by the hard-working co-chairmen.

Over 200 delegates are expected to attend the convention which will be headquartered at the Univ. of Utah on Aug. 15-19. Delegates will be housed in the University dormitories. The package deal is very reasonable.

I was intrigued with the program being planned in addition to the formal business sessions, delegates will have the opportunity to participate in one of three service projects at the Juvenile Court, Issei Center, and the third to be determined.

Also in the planning are workshops to be sponsored by the various district youth councils. This innovative program is a wonderful way of promoting togetherness, sharing experiences and engaging in meaningful rap sessions.

To make this a truly national convention, every effort is being made to assure representation from all the districts. A transportation fund has been established to help defray the cost. Sr. chapters are being asked to donate $25; Jr. chapters $10. Funds will be distributed to the districts, the amount depending upon a formula based on the number of delegates from each district and the distance from Salt Lake City.

When your chapter receives this request for financial support, I hope you will see that it makes a generous contribution.

There may be "no more peace" for the busy convention committee members, but there would be a peace of mind if they can be assured of your chapter's support.

FEDERATED PLAN—Responses from chapters and districts regarding the proposed Federated Plan have been mixed. I am impressed by the thoughtful and very perceptive comments and the sincere concerns expressed by JACL leaders about the need for a strong National program as well as viable district councils.

To date, I have received over 30 responses. A summary of these responses will be reported to the National Planning Commission. Copies of the summary report will be sent to all chapters and districts.

It would appear that the major concern is whether our present funds are adequate to sustain our National programs as well as provide greater staff services to district councils. In short, can we afford to reset our priorities without increase in funds?

No!

Throughout history certain people have been used to act as tokens, mouthpieces or representatives of someone else's interest. They have been acquired or hired for the sole purpose of "keeping the natives quiet", so to speak. This tactic is part of an overall strategy called, "divide and conquer".

For example, in relationship to the near-extermination of the Native Americans, certain tribes were used to fight or scout for the "pale faces". I guess now they would be called "Uncle Tomahawks" or worse.

In the South during the time of slavery, certain slaves were used to control other slaves. Malcolm X called this system the "house nigger" and the "field nigger" arrangement. The chosen house slave was used to abuse the field slave and during this time you came up with the term, "Uncle Tom".

Which brings us to the point of this week's column: to strongly question the choice of S. I. Hayakawa as speaker at the San Francisco JACL installation dinner. It seems that is a prime example of a mouthpiece or puppet for someone else's interest. In 1968-69, he obviously controlled San Francisco State from the instructions of his primary string-puller, Governor Reagan. Now after visiting with Nixon's No. 1 puppet, South Vietnamese President Thieu, what kind of message can he give the JACL?

It is obvious through Mr. Hayakawa's actions in the past that his interest are not with the welfare of the Japanese American community in San Francisco. It is obvious that his interest are to further his own future at the expense of the students at San Francisco State and now at the expense of the San Francisco J.A. community.

I protest the speaking of S. I. Hayakawa and I strongly urge a change in speaker and program. Don't worry about "ole S.I." I'm sure he can get another speaking engagement with one of the local Elks clubs. Power to the People.

CHANGE OF FOCUS—Suddenly everything is turning up Chinese. Inspired by President Nixon's visit to Mainland China—and hour after hour of live television coverage—the media are suddenly looking for the Chinese angle. Fashion designers are discovering pseudo-Chinese themes. Chinese style furniture, in reality very uncomfortable, no doubt will be the rage as soon as the manufacturers can gear up. Traders, travel agents and others are scrambling all over themselves for visas to the mainland. Some items:

—A recent issue of the Wall Street Journal carried a long story about American China "experts" and "consultants" who have sprung up in New York with offers to expedite trade with the mainland. Some of them, the story points out, have had no contact with China since World War II days when they served there briefly with U.S. forces. Others have been no closer to Red China than Hongkong where they claim to have unidentified "contacts".

—Kansas City is about as far as you can get from tidewater, but the slick, colorful monthly Kansas City Magazine published by the chamber of commerce devotes most of its February issue to matters Chinese. One of the main stories is titled "Our city's Chinese—gifted and inconspicuous." It concentrates on six of the approximately 500 members of the Chinese community. The story notes that "most of them are professional men—doctors, scientists, engineers—with families. A few own restaurants. None run laundries, as the jokes go. The Chinese here are not the Chinatown stereotypes of some B-grade movies. In general, they were born in mainland China to wealthy and educated parents, came to the U.S. in the 1940s as college students, and stayed when Mao Tse-tung and his People's Liberation Army took power." If there are Chinese Nisei, Sansei and Yonsei in Kansas City, the magazine fails to make note of their presence.

—Family Weekly, a Sunday rotogravure magazine whose 9 million copies are distributed by some 300 newspapers, publishes in its Mar. 5 issue a profile of Ronald G. S. Au, Chinese American attorney from Hawaii who is president of the U.S. Junior Chamber of Commerce. (Incidentally, two Nisei from Brighton, Colo., moved high in national Jaycee circles before they passed the 35-year age limit. Seiji Horiuchi, a former Colorado state legislator, was a vice president. Bob Sakata, now trying to buy the country's largest sugarbeet processing firm on behalf of a growers' cooperative, was agricultural chairman.) In Virginia, the story says, a Black Jaycee put his arms around Au and said, "I'm so proud that one of us could make it to the top."

The new focus of the spotlight makes it likely that Japan—and inevitably, the Nisei—will be in the glare of public attention less frequently, and that may not be a bad thing. Over-exposure can be more uncomfortable than under-exposure; the warts stand out for all to see and sometimes it is only merciful to let the subject slip into the shadows and re-apply the cosmetics. As for Japan itself, what can she do for an encore after the Summer Olympics, Expo '70, and now the superlatively staged Sapporo Winter Olympic Games? Let China take the Asian spotlight while Japan solves her enormously difficult pollution and population problems.

The Nisei, too, would benefit from a little peace and quiet as they seek out their identity and, as a group, decide who they are and what it is that they are really looking for. Such matters are best worked out without public attention and debate, the glare of TV lights and the splash of colored ink.

What Do You Say?

Los Angeles

"Jap" is a word that has a way of confronting us unexpectedly. How we respond reveal more about ourselves than we realize.

I wonder how many of us have smiled through gritted teeth, decided not to make an issue of it and pretended to go along when a non-Japanese acquaintance "jokingly" used the word in our presence. The rationalization probably was that the word was used among "buddies" so it's all right or that we're above petty epithets. This could be blind generosity on our part. It may turn out that the "buddy" was testing us and had drawn from the absence of any response certain pertinent conclusions. It could be that the so-called sophisticated man or woman is an insensitive wag or indeed an artful bigot disguised under a cover of fashionable gloss.

Whatever the case, silence when faced with the word "Jap" is usually at our cost. Speaking out, on the other hand, does not have to be in an abrasive voice. We should be able to deal with it candidly, gracefully and instructively. We should be able to discuss it with our "buddies" as well as with people of prominence.

I have an apocalyptic aversion for atrocious Agnewisms and especially for our Vice President's "friendly" reference to a "fat Jap" reporter four years ago. I think many of us let him know what we thought of it then.

Last Monday night (Feb. 28) the buddy of insomniac television viewers, Johnny Carson, joined Agnew's club. As staff reporter Vince Matsumura of the Ratu Shimojo related it to me, Carson and Ed McMahon did a brief sketch in which allusions were made to Sgt. Shochi Yokoi, the last World War II Japanese hold-out on Guam. The punchline of one joke was, "How would you like to be stranded on an island with a raccoon, helmet and a Jap?" The line was rewarded with large appreciative applause.

Carelessness, or whatever the reason for the use of this offensive epithet, is inexcusable.

MAYOR MOST LIKED IN SANTA CLARA COUNTY

SAN JOSE — Mayor Norman Mineta is the most respected public individual in Santa Clara County, according to a December, 1971 survey, Dillard Research Corp., said in its "The County Report."

The year before he ranked No. 10 on the list, according to Frank Freeman of the San Jose Mercury.

Freeman also reported that at a recent dedication of the San Jose Community theater, Mayor Mineta walked out, center stage, and told his audience, "...and now will you please join me in pledging allegiance," looking to his left "to the flag," looking to the right, "of our country."

They pledged just the same, even if someone had forgotten to bring out the flag.

INVOLVEMENT

By DAVID USHIO

Washington
Today in the United States when individuals are being constantly bombarded by many descriptions of wrongs that need to be corrected, causes that need volunteers, and problems that demand solutions, we are often evaluated by the way in which we use our leisure time. Many individuals who claim enlightenment or social awareness spend countless hours involving themselves in one number of "good causes," "relevant projects," ranging from clandestine meetings plotting some fantasy uprising attended by "super patriots" or on the other end, revolutionary left-wing activists to concerned housewives gathering newspapers from neighbors to start a recycling project to protect their children's right to see green trees in the years to come; many varied organizations are participating in projects to which the membership is committed.

On the periphery of these various organizations which vie for the relatively few concerned people is the vast number of Americans who have been dubbed "the silent majority." It is no secret that most Americans fit into this category as they live their lives as they wish.

Those involved in the so-called "relevant organizations" of today include anything from PTA to Women's Lib to Common Cause, the Republican Party to Community Awareness projects and range finally to any project or group that involves people working for a goal in society. From many of the so-called involved people comes the cry "What is the matter with the rest of you?" "How can you simply vegetate when so many things need attention?" "Where is your sense of duty, of self-improvement?" These same categories exist even within organized entities. How many registered depicting the life of the Chinese and Japanese in America. In the same field of education, Bob Nakamura, national chairman of the JACL visual communications committee, reported his prize-winning "Manzanar" film continues to be shown, some copies have been sold to schools and TV stations have indicated an interest. He also displayed the products of his committee at the meeting, including a catalogue of photographs collected by the JACL-Japanese American Research Project and now at UCLA.

Social Welfare

The PSWDC voted to join with the Japanese American Community Services-Asian Involvement, the So. Calif. Japanese Chamber of Commerce and other interested groups deal the social welfare problem in the community.

Earlier, several members of the Japanese Welfare Rights Organization explained its objectives to assist the needy who, because of a language barrier, are unable to express their concerns.

A proposal to establish a multi-service center to assist Issei aged and needy will be among the priority items for the social welfare push.

The Rev. Kogi Sayama, who worked for over a decade as a social worker with the Japanese Chamber of Commerce and now associated with JACS-AI, was presented a PSWDC scroll of appreciation during the luncheon.

Mas Uyesugi of Orange County JACL, district social service committee chairman, praised the heartwarming response to the 1971 Christmas celebration.

David Ushio of the Washington JACL Office, in his progress report on the National JACL Convention, urged every JACLer and their family members to visit the Nation's Capitol once in their lives and particularly this year as the JACL convention itinerary has several special visits included.

Special stress was also paid on the convention plans to invite congressmen at a convention-trip.

Round-trip air fare from Los Angeles-Washington, D.C., according to Aldra Ohno of the National JACL 1000 Club travel committee, will be about $240 including taxes if in groups of 10 or more with the privilege to return within 30-day on any airline.

CAPITAL SCENE

Democrats pound the pavement campaigning for the candidate of their choice? Within any political party the same cries arise from the few who are active urging the "silent majority" to get more involved. Yet a political party is an organization which is working for a cause even though the majority who claim membership are not actively involved. The same is true of church organizations, civic clubs, and even the more "progressive activist groups."

Only a few make the effort to lead out and push for improvement. The majority of membership pay their dues and get involved once in a while, participate in the few activities that please them; and generally leave the organization in the hands of a few who relish the activity that commitment generates.

JACL as a volunteer organization is confronted on all levels by this same dilemma. How much involvement can a volunteer organization expect from its members who themselves have many demands for their time. Inherent in any such situation is the frustration and criticism that descends from those who are spending a lot of time on a project who view the commitment of their fellow members with skepticism.

Yet a pragmatic look at the situation reveals that those who are involved in the so-called "relevant programs" are in fact supported by the organization which is in turn dependent on the grass roots membership. To the extent that the membership joins JACL each year reveals a commitment to this organization which makes possible the activity of those who spend time working on JACL projects whether they be community, education, bowling, legislation or social.

Recently I personally became acquainted with a JACLer from my home chapter Mt. Olympus. He is a man whom I had not known very well before last week. My first impression years ago was that he fit the stereotype of the JACLer who was not interested in civil rights (which is not a prerequisite for anything) who attended JACL for social reasons, was apolitical and uninterested in community affairs, and who spent his leisure time bowling or fishing.

After a ride from Boise, Idaho to Salt Lake City, my eyes were opened as I found my friend to be a very involved person in all aspects of JACL. He told me he constantly has been trying to improve himself.

Since becoming active in JACL on the chapter level some years ago, he has really taken an interest in politics and civil rights, especially in regard to the application to Japanese Americans. He had begun reading extensively about current affairs, history, and about the issues of today. Realizing that he must speak and conduct meetings he has taken a self-improvement course which has helped him overcome shyness. A man who would normally watch TV every night, this man now attends guest lectures at the local university, digesting the messages from the various public personalities that come to stimulate

(3) The council congratulated the Hon. Shiro Kashiwa upon his appointment to the judgeship of the U.S. Court of Claims on Dec. 1971. (Kashiwa was the past president of the Hawaii Betsuin and the Hawaii Hompa Hongwanji Mission.)

The board of directors accepted a guideline for retirement of ministers and establishment of the title Minister Emeritus.

Ministerial Transfers

The possibility of ministerial transfers between the Buddhist Churches of America and the Hompa Hongwanji Mission of Hawaii highlighted the first tri-Bishops meeting Feb. 24.

Attending the meeting were Bishop Kenryu Tsuji of the B.C.A., Bishop Inamura of Hawaii, Bishop Newton Ishiura of Canada, the Rev. Haruroshi Kusuda, Institute of Buddhist Studies at Berkeley, and Rev. Eijitsu Hojo and Kakumin Fujinaga, advisers.

Bishop Tsuji stated that with the implementation of the B.C.A. ministers' pension plan by the two Kyodan the possibility of exchanging ministers has opened up for consideration and planning.

On occasion of the 800th anniversary of Shinran Shonin, the Bishops agreed to support the Kyoto celebration and this same occasion the Bishops requested Kyoto headquarters to develop English materials for the propagation of Jodo Shinshu.

The old interests of bowling and golfing still get their attention but the fulfillment that has come from self-improvement and involvement in other areas has made this man a prime example of what involvement in an organization such as JACL can do to make one's life rewarding and interesting.

The other committee members were those on the program staff with the rank of instructor or above.

But the committee in a split vote dissolved itself Dec. 15. The Dec. 3 letter stressed above all the need to develop a curriculum plan, but also questioned what the signers felt was "bad allocation of resources" in the program's budget.

Charges Unsupported

Ogawa says the charges in the letter "are totally unsupported."

Contois established an ad hoc committee to consider the charges made against Ogawa in the letter. That committee refused to act as a hearing committee on the charges but "advised me that I should ask the three signers to withdraw the letter, with apologies to

BRITISH COMPLACENCY

NEW YORK — The detention of 793 Roman Catholics in prison without charge in Northern Ireland was compared to the U.S. experience during World War II when thousands of Japanese Americans were interned despite the Constitution and the Supreme Court by New York Times columnist Anthony Lewis.

In his Feb. 28 column, "At Home Abroad", from London, Lewis reminded "no American is in a position to take a high moral tone about British policy in Northern Ireland."

Headlines are big when an IRA bomb kills seven in a British Army camp in Derry or when soldiers shoot 13 civilians dead, "but there is no outcry, no sense even of real unease among the public at the Irish situation in general," Lewis noted.

Demolition starts for Little Tokyo project

LOS ANGELES — Three buildings, all located on the north side of E. 2nd St., (including the building which once housed the Shin Nichibei where the PC was printed), are being demolished for the First Action Area commercial development in the Little Tokyo Redevelopment Project.

Another building on Azusa St., has also been razed in the area proposed for the Japanese Cultural Community Center.

LOS ANGELES—Miyazo Fujizawa of Hermosa Beach and member of the Gardena Buddhist Church received a citation on his 100th birthday Feb. 25 from the County Board of Supervisors.

Registration fee is $18 and accommodations and meals is $31. Make checks payable to 30th Annual WYBL Conference and send to Barbara Kaita, 816 Virginia St., Watsonville, Calif. 95076, (408) 722-2282. People may also register at the conference.

Ogawa," says Contois.

But the three signers have not yet done so, and if they don't soon withdraw the letter, Contois says he "will respond to the letter itself."

The Arts and Sciences Curriculum Committee, which is supposed to review the Ethnic Studies Program courses, had asked for the curriculum by Dec. 1.

Dr. Friedrich Seifert, chairman of the committee, says the committee has not yet received the curriculum, although "since Dec. 1, I've talked with both factions and told them to let us have the stuff so we can make decisions."

Plan Completed

Ogawa said recently (Feb. 4) that "the curriculum plan is completed and we will submit it whenever the committee asks." But he believes the request must come from the ad hoc committee, not the curriculum committee.

Ogawa said the plan was prepared "by Dec. 1, but it was not submitted to anyone because I wanted to let it sit and look at it. There were a lot of mixed feelings and heated emotions at that time."

Contois said that "the problem here is that there is no plan that the group as a whole would claim as their own. I think that what has happened is that the Asian-American faction has gone ahead on their own and developed one without the participation of the dissident faction."

Contois said there are a number of alternatives for the future of ethnic studies.

"One extreme one is to disband the program entirely and possibly start over. The other extreme is to leave it as it is. 'In between is the possibility of having two independent programs—Asian-American and Hawaii-Pacific—each headed by a different director. It would alleviate the dissension in the two groups.'"

Compromise Seen

Contois said such a split would not be unprecedented, since "there is a history of splitting up ethnic studies on the mainland."

His own view, said Contois, is "that I think it is unfortunate that the present situation has developed. It is my hope that it doesn't deteriorate any further because it would close out all options so that we'll have to let the program die. 'I hope that doesn't happen, but even if it does, I hope we can begin to rebuild ethnic studies because I think it is a program which the University definitely ought to have.'"

"It appears to me that neither of the parties could win the present controversy, but that the University, and the community as well, could lose a great deal."

Ogawa Resigns

On Feb. 23, Dr. Ogawa resigned as director of the ethnic studies program, because he was "very tired, very weary."

Dean Contois accepted the resignation and said there is still no plan for the curriculum committee to review. Ogawa will continue to fulfill his teaching obligation while a search will commence for a replacement.

Student body president Maurice Nakahara of the Manoa campus, who is a Japanese section lab leader in the ethnic studies program, felt there won't seem to be enough U.H. students concerned about ethnic differences in the Islands to give full support to the program.

For instance, of persons of Japanese ancestry, Nakahara commented at a student rally: "Yeah, we control the Legislature, and we have a majority of Japanese at the University, but you hardly see them around except when they're forced to give speeches." He called on his fellow A.A. students to get involved with minority groups at the University in order to better the lot of all "local people."

Charitable Deductions Require Proof

LOS ANGELES — Many taxpayers lost all or part of their federal tax deductions for charitable contributions last year because they failed to keep the necessary records, the Internal Revenue Service (IRS) said today.

"Proof of charitable contributions is one of the most common problems encountered in the audit of 112 returns," F. S. Schmidt, IRS director of Southern California, said.

Another problem in the charitable deduction area that appeared last year was claiming a contribution to the full amount paid for tickets to a charity ball, theatre benefit, or banquet.

Schmidt said only that part of the ticket price in excess of the value received by the buyer may be considered a charitable contribution.

"When $10 is paid for a ticket to a charity banquet and the meal would normally cost $4, then only $6 may be considered a charitable gift," he explained.

To help taxpayers avoid this mistake on their 1971 returns, the IRS has asked all charitable organizations selling tickets to such fund-raising affairs to clearly indicate on the ticket the amount that is deductible.

Media perpetuate racism, JACL worker declares

SEATTLE — Racism in this country is carried on by a process "perpetuated almost exclusively by the mass media," a group of Seattle Asian Americans was told Feb. 26.

Warren Furutani, 24, a community worker with the Japanese American Citizens League in Los Angeles, participated in a workshop at the Japanese Presbyterian Church.

The mass media, Furutani said, are central to a complex process "which helps determine how a minority person thinks of himself."

Asians, in particular, have been forced into "self-hatred" and an image of "the quiet American," which has allowed some Asians to make some economic and other gains while remaining in a basically inferior role.

Recent token efforts to put blacks and other minorities in television roles has only changed the stereotypes, he noted, rather than portraying them as they really are.

While actions through the SABC can be initiated only by the Attorney General, FE-SAC procedures may be initiated by any person designated by the President and by heads of all federal departments and agencies.

The Chicago JACL board felt Title I and the HR 1120 were both "repressive" and called for appointment of an ad hoc committee to work against legislation empowering the Congress to undermine freedoms essential to the right of dissent and the freedom of speech, press, association and petition.

ANTI-MISCEGENATION IN GEORGIA INVALIDATED

ATLANTA, Ga. — Federal judge ruled on Feb. 14 that Georgia's laws against racially mixed marriages are unconstitutional.

U.S. District Court Judge Albert J. Henderson, citing the 14th Amendment, ordered the state not to enforce the laws, and to cease discrimination against racially mixed couples who want to get married.

Additional tax refund due new car buyers

SACRAMENTO — State Sen. Alfred H. Song (D-Monterey Park) pointed out last week (Feb. 29) that purchasers of new cars in late 1971 who are receiving a federal excise tax refund, are also entitled to a refund of part of the state sales tax they paid on their cars.

If an individual bought a new car from Aug. 16 to Dec. 10 of last year, he was charged a federal excise tax, paid a 5% state sales tax on that federal tax, and is now entitled to a refund of that amount.

Song explained that entire state sales tax on the car is not refundable, only the portion that applied to the federal excise tax payment.

To receive his state sales tax refund, a car buyer need only show proof to his dealer of the amount of federal excise tax he paid.

"After the dealer reimburses the new car buyer, he in turn will be reimbursed by the State Board of Equalization for the sales tax refunds he makes," Song said.

Aloha from Hawaii

by Richard Gima

Hawaii Today

Uashu mandarin oranges

can be imported next fall season from Japan by Hawaii as the U.S. has informed the Japanese government it is lifting its ban. The mandarin oranges are allowed into the five Northwest states at the present time on the ground of the danger of blight.

Public school teachers averted a strike Feb. 17 by accepting a proposed contract offered by the Dept. of Education. Among other things, the tentative agreement, subject to an acceptance vote by the teachers themselves, calls for a 5.5 per cent increase in salaries beginning in Sept., 1972. This would mean a $6.5 million pay raise for teachers over a two-year period.

The $13 million contract proposed for public school teachers seems to make a tax increase virtually inevitable in 1973. The agreement to give benefits and a 5.5 per cent pay raise to the 9,700 teachers to be funded by the 1973 state legislature and retroactive to Sept., 1972, is only Phase 1. Waiting for their share are the rest of the 33,000 state government employees.

More than 400 workers at Pearl Harbor will be losing their jobs in a major budget-cutback. A 14th Naval District spokesman said that the exact number of workers to be affected has not yet been determined. The shipyard expects a cutback of about 330 of the estimated 5,300 workforce, he said. About 110 of its approximately 1,400 civilian workers will be released at the Public Works Center.

Political Scene

State Sen. Nadeo Yoshinaga hinted he might run against incumbent Mayor Frank F. Fasi. Yoshinaga currently is chairman of the senate ways and means committee. Sen. Pres. David C. McClung has indicated he is willing to run against Fasi if the "established Democrats" led by Gov. John A. Burns cannot find a candidate.

Herbert Weatherwax, a Windward Oahu Democrat, has announced that he will run this year for a seat in the state house from the Kailua-Waimanalo area. He is an electrical engineering contractor.

Univ. of Hawaii

The Univ. of Hawaii system, which includes the community colleges, has an open door policy that in theory makes low-cost higher education available to every islander who is 18 or older. But in practice, because of lack of funds, things often don't work out that way. This is one of the key points made Feb. 16 during discussions at the Innovations Institute at the Princess Kaiulani Hotel, sponsored by Leeward Community College.

William A. Waters, former deputy superintendent of public instruction, has been named Windward District school superintendent. He was the deputy school chief from Sept. 1967, to June 1970. Jimmy Izu, acting Windward District superintendent, has been named acting director of the career management and development branch of the DOE's Office of Personnel Services.

Lawrence A. Ige, 18, who has confessed to taking part in three armed robberies, during which women were abducted and then raped, has been sentenced to 60 years in prison. Ige received 10 years for the Aug. robbery of K's Bake and Coffee Shop, 20 years for the Aug. 27 robbery of Cha Cha Tei restaurant and 30 years for the Oct. 9 robbery of Muntz Stereo Pak in Waipahu.

Ernest Moon Au, 37, who has admitted stealing $100,000 from a Pan American Airways cargo plane last July 21, appeared Feb. 16 in federal court as chief witness against Harmon C. Spencer, 24, and Au were Pan Am employees who unloaded the cargo plane that night. The money was in $50 bills and had been mailed to the Bank of America in Guam. Au testified that they later decided to invest the money in real estate in Saipan with Satoru Hirota, another Pan Am employee. He said Hirota later returned the money. Au said he hid $40,000 in his attic and had $27,000 in the trunk of his car when he was arrested on Nov. 7. Spencer has not taken the stand yet.

George M. Masuoka, Kauai's acting county attorney, and Mayor Antone Vidinha, Jr., have made up, and Masuoka has withdrawn his letter of resignation, which he submitted recently after he and deputy state Atty. Gen. Ray Okuma were forced to drop their case against two persons charged during Kauai's corruption probe.

The Japan Boxing Commission waived its rule against two foreign boxers fighting in Japan to open the way for the Tokyo bout.

Ali is ranked No. 1 contender for the world title held by Joe Frazier, and Foster is No. 7.

In his last real outing, Ali, who is becoming a worldwide traveler, knocked out West Germany's Juergen Blin in seven rounds in Zurich on Dec. 26. Foster stopped ex-Italian champion Bepi Ros in the eighth round on the same card.

The managers of both fighters, Herbert Muhammad and George Stassi, were in Tokyo when the fight was formally announced near the end of January.

The drums began to be beaten for the match right away as Foster's manager Stassi predicted a knockout victory for his boy if Ali doesn't keep running away. Of course, nobody took Stassi seriously.

The Budokan seats 14,000 and Yoshio Kato, chief producer of Prime Organization, Ltd., which is putting on the fight, said he expected a capacify crowd. The fight will be televised in Japan, of course, and may be cast worldwide via satellite.

Tickets for the match went on sale in mid-February at prices ranging from $30,000, which is quite near $100. The $30,000 top is more than twice the price of a ticket to any boxing bout held in Japan so far.

Ali and Foster are scheduled to arrive in Tokyo in mid-March — two weeks before their match. And no doubt they will get plenty of attention.

Here in Japan, Ali is a well known figure, although by the "slave name" that he has discarded. Japanese newspapers still call him Cassius Clay.

Besides reading about Ali, who gets plenty of ink here, Japanese ring fans have seen a number of Ali's bouts via satellite, including the one he lost to Frazier last March.

Thus, there is hardly a soul in the country who doesn't know who Ali is, with the possible exception of Shochi Yokoi, the ex-army sergeant who has returned to Japan after hiding out in Guam jungles for 28 years. And Yokoi will hear about Ali soon enough.

Ex-Sumoists

The Ali-Foster bout actually will not be the first heavyweight boxing match held in Japan.

Japan had heavyweight boxing for a short period in the mid-1950s.

Two ex-sumo wrestlers fought in the first heavyweight fight in the country in September 1956. And Noru Kataoka, a six-foot ex-sumo man, became Japan's first heavyweight champion by virtue of a 10-round decision over Yutaka Nagakoshi on May 5, 1957.

However, Japan's heavyweight division had only about four fighters and all were so inept that the heavy class died out soon afterwards.

Needless to say, Ali could have "whupped" the whole division at one time with one hand tied behind his back.

Today, the middleweight division remains the heaviest class in Japanese boxing.

Winter Olympics

April Fools' Day this year is going to be a special occasion for the Japanese fight fan.

That's the day the one and only Muhammad Ali, the heavyweight champ, will take on Mac Foster in a 15-round bout in Tokyo.

The fight is scheduled for the Budokan (Martial Arts Hall) in the heart of the capital. Ali is to be paid $400,000 for the night's work and Foster will get $80,000.

BOOK REVIEW: Allan Beekman

19th Century Race Misconceptions

OUTCASTS FROM EVOLUTION: Scientific Attitudes of Racial Inferiority, 1859-1900, by John S. Haller, Jr., Univ. of Illinois Press, 228 pp., $7.50.

When the first edition of Charles Darwin's On the Origin of Species by Means of Natural Selection, or the Preservation of Favoured Races in the Struggle for Life appeared Nov. 24, 1859, an obscure Augustinian monk, Gregor Johann Mendel, was conducting experiments in plant hybridization in his monastery garden at Brunn, Austria.

The entire edition of Darwin's book, 1,250 copies, sold out on the day of issue, the theory it expounded setting the scientific world agog. Mendel published the result of his experiments in the transactions of the Natural Science Society, 1865. But though copies reached the principal libraries of Europe and America, the thesis caused no stir and was soon forgotten.

Mendel read Darwin, but Darwin never heard of Mendel. The lack of communication between the two was ironic; Mendel's discoveries about heredity were needed to put the Darwinian theory on a firm basis.

Since natural selection requires variety on which to operate, Darwin proposed the theory of pangenesis, later to be demonstrated as erroneous but plausible in an age where there was a general, though vague, belief in the inheritance of acquired characteristics.

J.B.P. de Lamarck (1744-1839) has proposed that changes in environment induced plants and animals into new or increased use of some part or organs, causing modifications they transferred to their off-spring. Developing powerful arms through the demands of his arduous calling, a blacksmith would bequeath powerful arms to his children.

J. J. Blumenbach (1752-1840) had devised a system of cranial measurement that led to his dividing mankind into five great families. The tendency was to rank these divisions hierarchically — the Caucasian or white, product of millenniums of social struggle, being put at the top; the Ethiopian or black, sheltered from the struggle in his African hinterland, being placed at the bottom.

Evolving upwards as the result of the fierce competition, the ancestors of the Caucasian had bequeathed their physical and mental gains to him. Vegetating in their primitive environment, the blacks were mere survivors of another age. They had reached an evolutionary dead-end.

The hothouse environment of the institution of American slavery had permitted the blacks to survive beyond their allotted time. Now the shackles of slavery had been struck from them; they had been thrown on their own resources. They faced certain extinction.

Though evolution would eliminate the lesser breeds as unfit, self-interest required that the superior Caucasian expedite the process. "The science of society in the late 19th century not only confirmed . . . the assumptions of biological inferiority but also helped to frame the ideology of disfranchisement and immigration restriction."

Mendel's discovery of the first laws of heredity, however, laid the foundation for the science of genetics. With the rediscovery of Mendel's work in 1900, by Hugo De Vries and others, evolution could no longer be ascribed to the inheritance of acquired characteristics or to pangenesis. Genes are particulate, remain uncontaminated, conserve past variance, and occasionally change through mutation. There was sufficient fortuitous variety to account for natural selection.

Mendel's work renders the Darwinian theory more sound, but discredits the neo-Lamarckians with their hierarchical ranking of races. But their theories have become so much a part of the warp and woof of racism they remain to plague us.

This analysis of scientific thought between the publication of Darwin's Origin of Species and the rediscovery of Mendel illuminates the development of contemporary misconceptions or race.

(Saturday Review Magazine selected OUTCASTS FROM EVOLUTION with four other entries as a winner of the Ansfield-Wolf Award in Race Relations for 1971. The award was established in 1934 to recognize scholarly books published in the field of race relations. Author Haller is assistant professor of history at Indiana University Northwest.)

EXTORTIONISTS STAB SANSEI HIGH SCHOOL CO-ED

San Francisco Girl
Assaulted Near
School Library

SAN FRANCISCO — Linda Saito, 15-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward M. Saito of 1342-47th Ave., was one of two Lincoln High School coeds stabbed near the school library Feb. 23 in separate shakedown attempts within minutes of each other.

She was stabbed in the right and left upper arms. She was taken to Mission Emergency Hospital and released after receiving treatment.

More seriously wounded was 17-year-old Paula Cuddy, a white coed who was stabbed in the back.

Her lung was punctured and she was reported in satisfactory condition at San Francisco General Hospital.

Assaults Sought

Police searched the school and grounds for three black girls, one wearing a gray coat, described by the two victims as the girl who tried to shake them down. They were not found.

Harvey Christensen, principal at Lincoln, said he was not sure the three were from his school, but acknowledged they might have been and that they had simply returned to afternoon classes.

Christensen said it was the first time in the 18 years he had been at the school that any student had been stabbed.

Money Demanded

He said Miss Cuddy told him the three girls had demanded money and that she had told them she had none.

One of the three shouted, "Oh yes you do," and when Miss Cuddy ran, one of the girls stabbed her in the back. Christensen said that while he was giving first aid to Miss Cuddy, students brought in the second victim, who told a similar story.

Elections

The Los Angeles County registrar of voters was ordered Feb. 17 by Superior Court Judge John Cole to issue nomination papers to 20 candidates who were denied them because they could not afford to file the required fees. Among the plaintiffs was Milton S. Takei, Peace & Freedom candidate for the 59th Assembly District covering the Venice-Mar Vista-Beverly Hills section. ACLU attorney Marge Buckley contended the fees violate both the First and 14th Amendments of the U.S. Constitution, noting recent court decisions in Texas, Georgia and San Francisco have struck down the filing fee laws because they discriminate against poor candidates. A hearing has been scheduled for March 6 to determine whether the filing fee section of the state election code is valid or not.

Oxnard Sansei dentist Dr. Tsujio Kato, 33, is a candidate for the city council, vying for two available seats in the April 11 election. Son of the late Kenji Kato, the Oxnard native son was student-body president in high school and football team captain. He is a graduate of Fairleigh Dickinson University School of Dentistry, Teaneck, N.J., and active locally with the Boys Club, Lions and the Buddhist Church. He is married to the former Sumiko Nishi of Gardena and has three children. His younger brother Ron is campaign chairman. A slate of 25 candidates have filed for the contest.

Gardena Mayor Ken Nakagawa was given the green light to be listed as "mayor" in the April 11 municipal elections when Judge William E. MacFadden dismissed a complaint Mar. 2 that he be barred since he was chosen by the council rather than the voters. The mayor will be elected by the voters for the first time in Gardena. Gardena City Attorney Walter Anderson contended two previous municipal elections in which the incumbent was designated "mayor" on the ballot set a precedent for Nakagawa. The Nisei realtor was served with the injunction suit papers while attending a Gardena Valley JACL meeting with Sen. Alan Cranston, for which the chapter apologized for the apparent attempt to embarrass him in public.

The 66th Akutagawa-Naoki Award Selection Committee has awarded the Akutagawa Prize to Kaisei Lee, for Washi-eruwoman (Kinuta wo Utsu On) and Mineo Higashi for Okinawan Youth (Okinawa no Shonen).

Named for the eminent short-story writer, the Akutagawa awards are made twice a year, usually going to meritorious but unestablished writers. A resident of Japan, Lee is the first Korean to win the prize, which he is to divide with Higashi. Unable to find a suitable recipient, the committee withheld the Naoki Award, which ordinarily is presented to a writer of outstanding stories in the popular magazines.

Issei are to bring the main dish, the Nisei a main dish or salad and the Sansei, dessert and refreshments.

Chicago

Prospects of establishing a social cultural center for the Chicago Japanese American community were discussed by representatives from various organizations here Jan. 11 at the Lawson YMCA. Attending were: Ellen Townsend, Japan America Society; Rev. K. Sato, Hokusei Christian Church; Rev. Aso, Seventh-day Adventists; John Meyers, Gordon Hashimoto, Masaru Nambu, Japanese American Service Committee; Hiro Mayeda, Hiroshi Kanno JACL; and Karen Suzuki.

Exploratory in nature, the discussion pointed a need for documenting the local need and studying how other communities have developed their own centers.

Henry T. Yamate, CPA, president of the San Jose Savings & Loan, was elected to a second term of three years as treasurer of the Good Samaritan Hospital of Santa Clara County.

Dr. F. J. Stare of the Harvard Medical School department of nutrition found time during his attendance of a nutrition conference in Japan to combine his professional interests with girl-watching, observing that legs of young Japanese women seem rather muscular and athletic. Being a nutritionist, he assumed dietary differences were the reason but was later informed the muscular legs were due to sitting cross-legged throughout childhood and adolescence and not because of too much rice.

Stuart was suspended Feb. 2 when arrested and subsequently resigned.

Business

Internal dispute of Ivac Corp., La Jolla manufacturer of digital electronic thermometers for use by nurses, was brought to surface by the resignation of three of its directors, including vice president Stephen N. Saito, 34, a founder and head of Ivac operations. The firm later said its financial and operational position was sound but that involvement in a proxy contest could prove somewhat debilitating to the company. Saito declined to state his reasons for resigning.

Among the 44 newly-elected board members of United Way, Inc., Central Los Angeles Region, are Mrs. George Aratani of the Japan American Society; Tosh Terasawa, of the architectural firm, O'Leary and Terasawa; and Dr. Chun I. Wang, pediatrician, Children's Hospital.

Architect

Utah Technical College named architect Taka Kida among its outstanding alumni who achieved distinction in their chosen field. He completed his studies by correspondence while working as a draftsman. Last year he was licensed by the state, perhaps one of the last of his breed to become an architect without graduating from six years in architecture from a university. Utah law now requires such an educational background plus apprenticeship. Associated with Architects-Planners Alliance, the Salt Lake JACLer is working on the Tuley Square project, has assisted in the design of the Salt Lake Buddhist Church and the Jordan Park International Peace Gardens. He is also a volunteer architect with Assist, a group of concerned young architects offering their services free to the community to improve low-income areas of Salt Lake City.

Government

Irving S. K. Chin, 40, a New York attorney, was reappointed by Mayor Lindsay to the city's commission on human rights. When he was appointed last April, the commission chairman had noted the group was only beginning to work with the Oriental community, "a long, neglected community in our city and one which is suffering special hardships because of the great influx into Chinatown."

San Jose Mayor Norman Mineta, attending a mayors' conference on Model Cities program in Tucson, Ariz., rushed down to Mexico City before returning home to help a $20 million Mexican trade and cultural center, which could transform San Jose's economically-depressed downtown area into a sparkling jewel.

Awards

The Riverside (Calif.) International Relations Council presented its outstanding service award to Ed Mitoma, a founder of Riverside JACL, active in the Mayor's Sendai Committee and coordinator of the highly successful Sendai Festival.

Roybal supports cabinet unit for Asian Americans

WASHINGTON — Rep. Edward R. Roybal (D-Calif.) introduced a bill to establish a Cabinet level committee on Asian American affairs. The purpose of this high level agency is "to assist the federal government in developing an overall strategy on Asian American problems," Roybal said.

The bill establishes a Cabinet unit with representation from the President's Cabinet, Congress, and major federal agencies dealing with minority problems. It also sets up an advisory council of Asian American representatives, appointed by the President, and provides for an executive director with staff.

"This Cabinet level unit will provide a national focus on Asian American priorities and assure that existing and new federal programs are reaching them," Roybal stated.

Still Discriminated

Although Asian Americans have overcome considerable economic, educational and social obstacles, they continue to be subjected to prejudice and discrimination in the U.S.

According to federal employment data, Asian Americans only represent 0.8 percent of a total of 2.6 million federal employees, and less than one quarter of one percent of top executive positions.

Roybal reported that the State Department employs 0.9 percent Asian Americans with only one tenth of one percent in top level positions. This reflects a serious decrease of 3.8 percent from 1967 through 1970. Roybal called this level of commitment "totally inadequate and seriously impairing the development of a realistic Asian foreign policy."

Federal Civil Service

Similar exclusions of Asian Americans from the decision making echelon exist in other federal agencies, including Labor, HUD, HEW, OEO as well as the Civil Service Commission and the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission, both entrusted with carrying out federal equal employment programs.

"It is my hope that an Asian American Cabinet committee will help reverse this national neglect and pattern of discrimination," Roybal said.

Similar legislation was introduced last year, Dec. 13 by Reps. Glenn Anderson (D-Calif.) and Spark Matsunaga (D-Hawaii) and 23 others. (See Jan. 21 PC).
