Our JACL Staffers

Cleveland People who work for JACL has got to be a special "breed".

Like any human service job, however, the fundamental attributes are a sincere desire to help people in need and the determination to achieve these needs in a sensible and sensitive manner. But people who work for human relations organizations bring with them an added dimension: skill and knowledge. It is this combination that gives JACL staff members the qualifications to engage in variety of tasks, including program planning and development, community organization, public information and relations, information gathering, mobilizing volunteer participation and fund raising.

It is unlikely that any organization the size of JACL can function effectively without paid staff. The amount of organizational work is phenomenal; the amount of sheer paperwork is unbelievable. But without this work, we would not have the necessary structure and communication networy essential to an effective organization. Without staff, who would do the work?

Who would see that the work got done on time? Who would engage in the necessary researching to gather the essential information so that informed decision and implementation of programs will take place?

Only by working full time, immersed in the day-to-day process of planning and development, making decisions on operational problems, and hammering out workable ways of implementing programs within the time and money constraints, can one begin to appreciate the full scope of a truly national program. It takes staff, working together as a team and in collaboration with members of the national board, to develop such a perspective.

Not infrequently it is a frustrating job. The rewards of successful achievement are long range. At times, the process has to be retooled or the goals revised.

During my tenure as national president, it has been one of my goals to help develop a team approach among staff and board members. So often with human rights organizations, there is a distance in the relationship. This may be due to the traditional view of the board as employer and staff as "employees" or bosses and workers. Staff view board members as "do-gooders" who are more interested in reducing MAGOICHI KATO cost and attending meetings than assuring that projects are adequately funded and effectively carried out to MEMORIAL GIFT completion.

On the other hand, board members see staff as complying workers whose TO START IN '75 job is to simply carry out the directives of the board and whose opinions on policy issues are considered im-

I am uncomfortable with the views of those who feel that JACL staff should not participate in the deliberations at board meetings. If staff presence stymies the discussion or tends to influence board decisions, we may Kato has been established by have a serious problem. The solution is to elect board members who, in their own right and convictions, are challenged, not threatened, by diverse op-

As an ethnic organization, it becomes even more crucial that the re- nual freshman scholarships to lationship between board and staff are defined in terms of common tasks and goals. Being of the same ethnic background, it is inevitable for personal relationships to develop between board and staff. Such relationships can enhance the work of JACL. They can also inadvertently create difficult interpersonal problems. While some may feel ethnic organization, I feel it can be an ethnic organization, I feel that it can be asset. But we need to keep the proper make this donation. communication channels open and honest at all levels. We need to use discretion and sensitive understanding in our communications with each other. As has been so often stated, it's not what one says but how one says it that makes an impression.

I am appreciative of the fact that Issei generation is expressing we have people who want to work for JACL. They have got to be a special "breed".

HONDA MINIBIKE PROJECT

Just finished reading about "NYPUM", which translated, is "National Youth Project Using Minibikes". This very innovative and, more important, effective anti-delinquency project is a creation of the National Board of YMCAs, under the specific direction of Fred Hoshiyama. Fred is a long time JACLer and "Y" Executive, who sent me a copy of the NYPUM report.

This project is like someone's fantasy come alive. A pilot program based upon using 15 minibikes as a motivator to build relationships between youth workers and "unreachable" kids between 11 and 15, grew into a 10,000 minibike (Honda) project, with total one year resources of over 1 million dollars.

Through the use of minibike as a springboard, alienated youth were initially "hooked", thus paving the way for reaching out into the many problem areas of their lives. The major program objectives are stated as reducing recidivism, reducing deliquency, improving attitudes toward institutions or authorities, improving self-regard of youth, reducing racism, and strengthening family. Based upon a detailed evaluation by the Social Science Research Institute of USC, average success ratings, ranging from 65.9% to inform government officials, Beyond this, let us consid- 75.8%, were determined for the six program objec-

Those in the criminal justice field tend to be cynical, and are notorious "show me" types. We are prone to decry the heavy lip service paid the concept of prevention, while coming up with very little in the way of answers. While we may question the final implications of a 3.7% recidivism rate, and quibble about whether minibikes are the 1974 panacea for matter of minutes that local individual, for example, could ed days is due George, whose We cannot copout, or over- juvenile delinquency, the essential message in NYPUM to me is the inescapable fact that a number of potential dropouts from society were diverted by strategic use of materialistic motive (minibikes), private and public (federal grants) resources, and professional

LIBERATION-FEMALE AND YELLOW

Los Angeles After all the bad jokes about burning bras and sending women back to the kitchen, we are finally of the National Building Fund getting some ideas about what Women's Liberation Committee. is about, if TV is any indication of how well a concept 23 at the Montecito Country speaker Mike Iwasaki May 11, is percolating through what is referred to as "the Club, formerly owned by and annual picnic May 19 at masses" On a recent Monday, a Marlo Thomas special, "Free to Be . . . You and Me" aired on the ABC network, followed on Tuesday by the excellent "Tell Me the newly elected board. Where It Hurts" on the GE Theater aired by the CBS Among the dignitaries present Over 200 examined network, starring Maureen Stapleton.

I didn't watch the former, but Cecil Smith of the Hirashima acted as master of Los Angeles Times indicated his respect and affection ceremonies and the invocation sponsored by the Fowler Budfor it and for the idea of freedom for both men and was delivered by the Rev. Dan dhist Church and Fowler JAwomen to become what they want to be, without the restrictions imposed by traditional biases.

I did watch "Tell Me Where It Hurts," and it was Aki Miyamoto, who presented The clinic is being conductso true that it hurt. Facing the truth is a painful thing, and the talkingout sessions make the women aware that they are "taking apart a watch that's working well enough". One woman's husband flatly forbids her to attend, and she complies, although the incident later becomes the straw that broke the camel's back, and she leaves him.

Another woman comments, "If Joe did that to me, I'd make his life so miserable that he'd be painting a different part of the house for a whole year of Sun- Orange County. days!"

A more Never Never Land approach to marriage is taken in the Japanese serial, "The Yellow Tomato", which is being shown Sundays on a local UHF station.

One of the girls, who lost her first husband in an auto accident, marries a mama's boy whose first wife left him. It's an arranged marriage, with every indication that the boy's mother is going to live with them and make life miserable for anyone who marries her son, yet everyone around is congratulating the girl. Marriage at any price is still being touted there.

For any minority-women, students, racial minorities—the first step in achieving self-respect is facing the truth and taking apart the watch that's working well enough.

That is what Asian Americans for Fair Media are doing in objecting to a TV commercial which is con- ner are being accepted by: sidered "cute" and "funny" by many people, including unthinking Asian Americans for whom it per- (684-2460). petrates a stereotype but who want to enjoy a white sense of humor and would rather not take the watch Gerald Yotsuya heads apart.
