I. GENERAL FEELING:

Should E.O. 9066 petition the Supreme Court to review the constitutionality of the evacuation order?

Who should be entitled to reparations? Both citizen and non-citizens. Only U.S. citizens detained. (Comment welcome.)

Check as many as appropriate:

Those who were not detained but who voluntarily relocated to avoid forced removal.

Those who were not detained, did not voluntarily relocate but who might have been affected nonetheless. Non-Japanese married to Japanese who were evacuated with their spouse.

Those who chose expatriation to Japan.

Descendents of evacuees who might, for instance, receive memorial scholarships from reparation funds.

(Further comments welcome.)

II: METHOD OF PAYMENT

(Check appropriate one.) Lump sum to those designated above except those granted scholarships.

Payment based upon time spent in camps to evacuees as designated. (Check as many as appropriate below.) To Japanese American community

According to the research of the Human Resources Corp., this is hardly the case. For example, Americans of Spanish heritage account for 5 percent of the total population. From 1972 through March 1974, Spanish groups received 0.8 percent of all funds distributed by American foundations. Spanish heritage groups in the Northeast received proportionately more funds from more diversified sources than their ccunterparts heavily concentrated in the West and Southwest.

Americans of Asian ancestry make up 0.6 percent of the U.S. They received 0.1 percent of the total funds from foundations during the same period. Most of the funds went to Chinese organizations mostly in the Northeast. The West, with 57 percent of the Chinese American population,

The report makes several recommendations that would help bring this about. It suggests that minorities should give more attention to foundations as institutions and to system - changing possibilities rather than only making technical proposals. Minorities should look into a matching grant system, a limitation on the life of donor-controlled foundations.

Foundations should research into the needs of the community rather than relying on conventional wisdom. Data should be gathered regularly. Goals and objectives should match foundation resources to community needs. It is suggested that foundations consult with groups in a broad ecnomic, social, political and cultural segment of the community.

Information should be solicited from the general public to reveal problems of those not well organized and who have few recognized spokesmen. National foundations could share information with community-level foundations.

Foundations should reexamine the amount of funding for internationally oriented activities. Often these projects appear more glamorous than domestic projects but may not Tri-District confab be as worthy.

money going to minorities is FROM THE FRYING PAN: Bill Hosokawa

It's a Small World

It was long after dark when Pan American's big bird brought the lights of Agana into view and gently set down on Guam, a tiny bit of America in the far western Pacific. We were to be there only an hour or so but I stepped out into the steamy night to see what I could see.

A PA system in a restaurant just outside the crowded terminal was blasting out some hard rock. A souvenir shop offered nothing that couldn't be bought for less in Taiwan, back down the line, or in Honolulu, a seven-hour flight eastward across the trackless Pacific.

Back outside, where a group of passengers waited patiently to board, one of the men looked oddly familiar. He kept glancing at me, and just about the time I decided to approach him he stood up and came toward me.

It was Joe Park, Dr. Joseph Park, Hawaiian-born Korean Nisei and one of America's most eminent chemists. Four years earlier he had retired from his post on the University of Colorado faculty, which he had joined after a distinguished career in industry, and the last I had heard he had gone to Korea to head up a research' foundation.

"Joe, what are you doing here?" "I'm on my way to Iran," he said. Then he explained. He had resigned the presidency of the research foundation in Seoul because he couldn't tolerate the political interference. So he was going to visit for a while in Honolulu and Boulder, Colo., and en route he had stopped for a day in Guam to see what it was like.

"How did you get lined up in Iran?" "The Iranians have a lot of money and want to get into research but don't know how to do it," he explained. "Some of their people were graduate students of mine at the University of Colorado. They've been after me for years to come to Iran. So I finally ac-

He had only a few minutes to talk but Dr. Park made one particular observation worth remembering. He said Japan didn't know it yet, but was headed for trouble because of inadequate expenditures for research and development. So far, he said, Japan had made enormous economic progress because of the skills or its workers. But more and more Japanese jobs are being taken over by countries with lower living standards and lower wages - Taiwan Hong, Kong, Thailand, Malaysia, Korea. Japan needs to push its research, he said, to find new products, new ways of doing things, if it wants to continue its economic growth.

It seemed to make a lot of sense.

In Tokyo, I had been unable to get in touch with Hatch Kita and his wife Kyoko. Hatch is a houhead fire Kyoko. Hatch is a boyhood friend dating back to prewar Seattle and I first met Kyoko, a Tokyo native, during the Korean war. Kita reached Japan in 1945 with U.S. troops soon after the surrender and after he was mustered out he had remained in Tokyo ever since as a civilian employed by the U.S. Army. This trip to the Far East had come up so suddenly there hadn't been time to let Hatch know I was coming.

After checking in at the hotel, I telephoned his home. There was no answer. It was a Sunday, and probably he had gone for a drive to escape the oppressive heat. I telephoned again late that night and again the next day. Still no answer. He must have gone on an overnight excursion. Finally I left for Hong Kong without ever reaching the Kitas.

A week later, after I got home, I dropped them a note saying I was sorry to have missed them. That same day the mailman delivered a letter from Hatch. It said he had finally decided to retire and would be moving to Denver in a month or so.

EAST WIND: Bill Marutani

A Rose by Any Other Name

Philadelphia UNDOUBTEDLY YOU'VE HAD a similar experience. You meet an acquaintance from pre-camp or camp days; he was known to you as, let's say "Hichihaimon" (in which case it no doubt was shortened in the schoolyard to plain "Hi ch".) But now today, this being a few years removed from those schoolyard days, you refer to him by his full, proper, given name: Hichihaimon. You notice a short of sheepish smile and just a hint of squirming, and you quickly learn why: all of his current friends call him-and get this-"Llewellyn". Which mercifully is shortened to "Lew".

THE NAMES HAVE been changed to protect the guilty, but perhaps you get the point.

AND ALTHOUGH IT'S awkward to call him by his current monicker of "Lew",-it's as if one were referring to some stranger or newly-found acquaintance rather 'han good ol' "Hitch"-you manage to articulate this new name. ("Gads", you think to yourself, "with the whole world to pick from, where in dickens did he manage to dig up 'Llewellyn'?") And when you fondly recall the things that both of you shared as kids, somehow it just doesn't ring true when you refer to him as "Lew": it was country lad Hi'ch. Not Llewellyn.

EXCUSING A BIT of personal reference, if the truth be known, actually my first name isn't William either: it's Masaharu. The middle name of "William" was an after-thought by my parents who thought it only proper to recognize the doctor who delivered this columnist, Dr. William Taylor who I believe was once in Auburn, Washington. (I'd often thought how Early Tri-District much more complex life in the schoolyard would have Early Tri-District been for me if that doctor's name had been, say, "Percival".)

AS IT WAS, even with that name "William" life wasn't a bed-of-roses for me during recess, for more than once did I have to defend that label in the schoolyard: particularly when the kids found out that there was a flower—of all thing—called "Sweet Williams". (To this day, we've never had any growing in our flower garden, at least not knowingly.) And in those days when most Nisei sought shelter by seeking to be 110% American (and I was assuredly one of them) I wasn't about to jump from the frying pan into the fire by telling the kids that, really, my first name wasn't William, that it was Masaharu.

I'VE WONDERED WHETHER or not the practice of giving a "nihon-mei" (so to speak) to the progeny of the Issei is dying out. On the level of the Nisei generation, at least in my sphere of experience, rare indeed was the Nisei who hadn't been endowed with a "nihon-mei". As for the Sansei, I receive some hard statistics whenever I see something formal, such as a wedding invitation. And I am always delighted to see a "nihon-mei", usually as the middle name.

FOR NO LONGER need we, or anyone else for that matter, hide ourselves in order to seek to demonstrate an extra ten percent.
