Education Conference

More APAs Needed in Higher Education

By Laurie Mochidome

LOS ANGELES — A conference examining barriers to Asian Pacific American progress in higher education underscored the need for more Asian American administrators and faculty members in the University of California (UC), California State University (CSU) and community college systems.

Over 400 administrators, educators and students attended the second annual conference, which was held Feb. 3-5 at the Sheraton Plaza La Reina Hotel.

Dr. Bob Suzuki, vice president of Academic Affairs at California State University, Northridge, stated that while 3.6 percent of the college enrollment nationwide is Asian Pacific American, Asians currently comprise only 1 percent of the college administrators and 3 percent of instructors from across the country. The greatest number—4 percent in administration and 7 percent in faculty—is employed in California.

What these statistics do not reveal, said Suzuki, is the continuing underrepresentation of groups such as the Cambodian and Hmong student populations, Asians majoring in the humanities, behavioral sciences and education and American-born Asians. According to Suzuki, only 10 percent of the Asian faculty population is American-born.

Moreover, Asian Americans holding administrative positions generally work as staff or in undergraduate affairs. Asian instructors are also more likely to be non-tenured, said Suzuki.

Underrepresentation on the upper rungs of the university and community college systems means that Asian Pacific Americans have little chance of taking part in important campus decisions, such as a school's affirmative action programs, or in sensitizing campus officials to the unique needs of Asian American students.

In his keynote address, Warren Furutani cited the misinformation stemming from the "model minority myth" of Asian Pacific American students. Furutani, the first Asian American elected to the Los Angeles Unified School District Board of Education, said the myth ignores students, particularly recent immigrants, in need of special programs. Suzuki pointed out that campuses must employ more Asian Pacific American counselors to help combat the alienation and stress some students feel as they face an in-

Bush Silent on Redress Money

WASHINGTON — Rep. Robert T. Matsui (D-Calif.) reacted sharply Feb. 9 when President Bush failed to directly address redress funding in his budget proposal. "It's an unfortunate indication", he said, "that the new president may support the Reagan budget figure of $20 million for the program's first year."

"The Reagan figure was completely unacceptable," Matsui said. "And the fact that President Bush has remained silent at this time on the issue is disturbing. Nevertheless, his tone shows a willingness to negotiate on many issues. Redress should be one of them."

Earlier in the week, Matsui and JACL-LEC Strategy Chair Grant Ujifusa met with Sen. Daniel Inouye (D-Hawaii), second ranking member of the Senate Appropriations Committee, to discuss strategy for the funding battle. Both Matsui and Ujifusa are confident that Congress will budget a significantly higher amount than proposed by the Reagan Administration.

Matsui, who has contacted members of the House Budget and Appropriations committees with his concerns, said the final battle over the budget will be fought in Congress.

Ujifusa called the Bush budget "a puzzling document with few line-item numbers." Like Matsui, he said "the budget structure seems to leave redress funding on the table."

The strategy chair also said he believes "the president takes his campaign promises seriously, no new taxes being one of the them. Another might be support of H.R.442 during the California phase of his campaign, and letters to the president should remind him of that."

Ujifusa noted that Bush told Congress, "I believe in a society that is free from discrimination and bigotry of any kind. I will work to knock down the barriers left by past discrimination, and to build a more tolerant society that will stop such barriers from ever being built again."

"That sentiment," Ujifusa said, "lies at the heart of the Japanese American redress law. We should remind President Bush, Budget Chairman Richard Darman, and targeted members of Congress that there was nothing kind and there was nothing gentle about the internment period."

130-Page Final Report Released:

Anti-Asian Hostility Affecting Communities in California Analyzed

LOS ANGELES — The California Attorney General's Asian/Pacific Islander Advisory Committee presented its final report, on issues affecting the Asian/Pacific Islander communities, to the attorney general during a news conference Jan. 6.

The committee's 130-page document analyzes the "myths and realities" of Asian/Pacific Islander Americans in California, detailing the history of anti-Asian sentiment in California, hate crimes, criminal justice and civil rights issues affecting that community.

"This report will make fascinating reading for every public policy maker in this state, but it will be especially valuable for those of us in law enforcement," said Attorney General John Van de Kamp.

"There is a long standing history of anti-Asian hostility here that we should all be familiar with," he said. "Even more important, there are very concrete proposals for improving our performance in protecting the public, in recruiting law enforcement personnel, in preventing crime, and in creating a new level of trust and cooperation with the communities in our midst," said Van de Kamp.

The committee, established in December of 1987, completed its report after conducting four public meetings throughout the state. Committee members represent a cross section of the Asian/Pacific Islander communities in California.

The Committee recommended that the attorney general:

- Create crime prevention programs which target specific problems within the Asian/Pacific Islander communities;
- Develop community/police partnership programs to improve communication . . . as well as enhance recent Asian and Pacific Islander immigrants' understanding of the criminal justice system;
- Enhance public awareness of civil and consumer rights laws in Asian/Pacific Islander communities, and actively enforce those laws, and;
- Establish model guidelines and provide technical assistance for the enforcement of California's Civil Rights laws.

The report asserts that "within many of our schools, racial and ethnic prejudice has become an integral part of the social fabric." The committee recommended that bilingual/bicultural programs be adopted to assist these children in adjusting to their new homeland.

The committee expressed particular concern for "the children of recent immigrants and refugees" who are attempting to learn in an atmosphere of "racial hostility and intolerance."

According to the report, the children "learn about name-calling, racial confrontation and unprovoked physical harassment all of which contribute to feelings of rejection, isolation, low self-esteem and fear among Asian/Pacific Islander youth."

In its report the committee also recommends that law enforcement agencies document "any criminal acts or attempted acts" against individuals that are designed "to cause physical injury, emotional suffering or property damage."

In an effort to move the hate crimes issue from an "anecdotal" phase to the status of "official" documentation, the report calls on the attorney general to sponsor legislation that would require the agencies to compile such statistics. Similar legislation is currently pending in Congress.

JABA Supports Assault Weapon Prohibitions

LOS ANGELES — At its board meeting on Feb. 2, the Japanese American Bar Association voted unanimously to support legislation to prohibit the sale of military assault weapons, and specifically to endorse S.B. 292, introduced into the California legislation by Sen. David Roberti (D-Los Angeles). JABA believes that the availability of weapons which can fire hundreds of rounds per minute have no legitimate purpose in civilized society, and contribute to racially motivated violence and murder, as in the slaughter of Indochinese Asian American children in Stockton, Calif. Removal of such weapons from the marketplace will eliminate a critical factor which can cause sick persons to act out their racist fantasies in violence. JABA rejects the notion advanced by the National Rifle Association that "guns don't kill people."

Ishikawa Pleads Guilty

SEATTLE — Kevin Ishikawa, 27, son of Superior Court Judge Richard Ishikawa, pleaded guilty to bank fraud and income tax evasion in federal court Feb. 7. His sentence was announced Feb. 15. Ishikawa could receive up to five years in prison and a fine of $250,000. Last October, he was indicted on charges of defrauding the Old National Bank in obtaining loans of $200,000, and on Dec. 1, he pleaded not guilty to five felony counts. Under a plea bargaining agreement, only the bank fraud and tax evasion charges remained. In the tax evasion charge, Ishikawa was said to owe $93,000 on an income of $213,000. He failed to file an income tax report in 1986. Ishikawa remains free on his own recognizance.

Method for Research on Resolution #7 Picked by National Board

By George Johnston

SAN FRANCISCO — The National Board of the Japanese American Citizens League (JACL) chose a direction for researching a controversial area of JACL history Feb. 4 at its National Board meeting.

The controversy goes back, in part, to the JACL National Convention in August of 1988, when the Seattle Chapter submitted a resolution to apologize for JACL actions taken during WWII in regard to the West Coast evacuation and subsequent incarceration of Japanese Americans.

The resolution did not pass but was instead deferred until more research into the matter could be conducted, for presentation at the 1990 JACL National Convention. At the Sept. 1988 National Board meeting, the national staff was directed to prepare different options for examining the research.

The purpose of the presidential select committee will be to examine the following questions:

- A. What were the policies and positions taken by the JACL in response to the military and government's actions relative to the curfew, evacuation and detention of Japanese Americans?
- B. What actions did the JACL take to implement its policies prior to and during the internment?

C. What impact did the JACL's actions have upon the Japanese American community?

The specific areas of study are:

A: JACL: Pre-Evacuation (1941-Spring 1942)

1. The activities and relationship with governmental agencies prior to Dec. 7, 1941.
2. Response to declaration of war with Japan.
3. Response to various military orders, curfew.

4. The decision to cooperate with evacuation.
5. Actions initiated in community.

B: Internment Period (1942-45)

1. JACL position on legal test cases.
2. Relationship with War Relocation Authority and other governmental agencies.
3. JACL activities in camp.
4. Position and actions on the Loyalty Oath.
5. Position and actions on Resisters and WRA Segregation process.

The methodology chosen for addressing the study is to:

1. Gather current papers, publications discussing the wartime role of the JACL.
2. Search organization's correspondence files, board minutes, private files for written documents expressing or advocating JACL's positions.
3. Conduct archival research of government documents.
4. Survey existing oral history collections for personal experiences of former internees.
5. Gather documents, summarize and present historical facts in a report to [the JACL] National Council.

The final estimated cost for the study is $3,700. The two options for analysis, findings and recommendations resulting from the study are to, based on the collected research, have the Presidential Committee review the data and then provide findings and/or recommendations to the National Council, at an estimated cost of $2,650. The second option is to divide the presidential committee into two or three investigative subcommittees. Each investigative subcommittee would separately provide findings and recommendations, then convene as a committee of the whole to arrive at a consensus on the findings and/or recommendations for transmission to the National Board and National Council, at an estimated cost of $2,650.

Three Time Salinas Mayor

Hibino New Salinas Valley JACL President

Henry Hibino

By Fred K. Oshima
SALINAS, Calif. — Former mayor of Salinas, Henry Hibino was sworn in for the third time as president of Salinas Valley JACL at the chapter's annual installation dinner, Jan. 29.

Salinas Chief of Police James Corrigan, in a dignified ceremony, officiated the solemn installation before some 100 members and guests at the House of Chiam. Corrigan represented the city and extended official greetings in behalf of Mayor Russell Jeffries.

One of the most popular mayors ever elected to the city's CEO position, Henry Hibino served three straight terms, from 1973 to 1979 and prior to his mayoral stint, sat on the city council for three years. He was the first and only member of a minority group so far to officiate in the nation's famed lettuce capitol.

Of ethnic significance, Hibino's far reaching political influence in the city's economic program, played a constructive role in helping to develop the flourishing post-war Monterey county fresh flower industry by a successful enterprising group of shin-Nikkei, notably from Kagoshima, Japan.

Today, this remarkable $100,000,000 green house phenomenon ranks as one of the area's major crops, right behind lettuce, broccoli and strawberries.

A native of Salinas, Hibino is in the agri-business, is a member of local North-East Rotary Club, Corral de Tierra Country Club and Lincoln Avenue Presbyterian Church.

Installed with the president were the following officers:

Paul Ichijui, 1st vp; Larry Hirahara, 2nd vp, Mary Minami, treas.; Akira Aoyama, rec. sec.; Tei Dacus Japanese sec.; Douglas Iwamoto, corr. sec.; Kiyo Hirano, ofc. dele.; Fred Oshima, pub. rel.; Bob Oka, visit.; and Andy Matsui, Tom Tanimura, Dr. John Hirasuna, Tom Fukui, Ted Ikemoto, bd. mems.

Enhancing the annual affair with additional Salinas flavor as keynote speaker, was another prominent local Nisei political figure, Monterey County Administrator Ernie Morishita.

The chief executive of Monterey County for the last six years, Morishita provided some interesting internal insight on the "court-House" operation and in particular, recognized the increasing healthy involvement of Nisei and Sansei, both voluntarily and professionally at the county government level.

Morishita also added, that from an ethnic standpoint, the Japanese American today, truly reflects "Main Stream America" and that their vibrant thoughts and action typify what this country is all about.

Morishita, before taking over the chief operating post here, served as assistant administrator for Fresno County. The former Sanger, Calif. Nisei started his public service career with the Los Angeles County Admincreasingly racist environment.

In a workshop discussion, panelists stated that a larger Asian Pacific American faculty population, particularly in disciplines underrepresented by Asians, is also necessary to help broaden student interest. Instruction by Asians tends to be concentrated in engineering, the computer sciences and business—the most popular fields of study for Asian students. Panelists noted that faculty members many times serve as role models for undergraduates. Diversification of Asian educators into many fields would expose students to a greater range of vocational opportunities.

One reason Asians may not consider careers in higher education is because they "don't have all the information on academic jobs," said Ken Matsuura, a graduate recruiter for the University of California at Irvine. "They aren't aware of the increased openings of faculty positions and that some jobs provide a comfortable living or good benefits."

The UC and CSU have already begun taking steps to increase representation of Asian Pacific Americans in their faculties and administrations.

Matsuura said that the UC seeks to attract minority educators through its presidential fellowship and "Targets of Opportunity" programs. According to Matsuura, the presidential fellowship considers minorities and women holding doctorates from accredited universities for UC faculty positions.

Tim Dong, state university dean of the CSU Chancellor's Office, said that the CSU's "forgivable loan program" provides loans for Asian American post-graduate students attending CSU campuses. Graduates are "forgiven" a percentage of their payments for each year they work as CSU faculty, said Dong. The CSU program supports Asians in fields such as literature, music and nursing.

Matsuura and Dong also proposed the creation of informal mentoring programs to establish communication between Asian American instructors and students. Faculty would then present information dispelling stereotypes about the teaching profession to parents and community groups.

To encourage diversity in its administrations, the UC and CSU have established administrative-fellows programs targeting qualified minorities and women.

Vermont Ave. Sponsored by Visual Communications, the event includes a reception hosted by Suvanee Siam Cafe of Monterey Park, and Oriental House of Rancho Cucamonga.

Benefit Performance of Hiroshima's 'Sansei' March 11

LOS ANGELES — Los Angeles Mayor Tom Bradley and Edmund D. Edelman, chairman of the Los Angeles County Board of Supervisors, will be the honorary chairs for the Gala Benefit performance of Sansei at the Mark Taper Forum, Saturday, March 11. Asian American Friends of Center Theatre Group, in cooperation with several representatives of Hiroshima, Japan, have planned an entire evening's salute to this world premiere production, created and performed by the Grammy-nominated band Hiroshima.

Beginning at 6:30 p.m. at the Los Angeles Music Center, representatives of the city of Hiroshima, Japan will present the people of Los Angeles with a phoenix palm tree as a symbol of peace. There will be an unveiling of a mural from Japanese artists, poets and photographers who have expressed their visions of the 21st century throughout this triptych, which will hang in the upper lobby of the Taper through May 7. A buffet dinner at the Pavilion Restaurant will follow the performance.

This special performance of Sansei beginning at 8:00 p.m., the first public performance, is a collaboration between Hiroshima and the Taper's resident director, Robert Egan who developed and directed this play based on the band members lives as third generation Japanese Americans growing up in various ethnic neighborhoods in Los Angeles.

Hiroshima is well-known in the music world for the way they have uniquely combined the sounds of high-tech Western instruments along with those from ancient Japan. Hiroshima will release their new album, East, on Epic records in February. Sansei opens March 23 and runs through May 7.

BALTIMORE — Kristi Yamaguchi of Fremont, Calif., finished second in the women's individual competition and first with partner Rudi Galindo in senior level pairs at the U.S. figure skating championships last week.

Yamaguchi, 17, finished behind Jill Trenary Feb. 11, but was the crowd favorite with her dynamic and technically difficult routine. The 4-foot-11, 82-pound Yamaguchi and her pairs partner, Galindo, finished ahead of 1988 Olympians Natalie and Wayne Seybold Feb. 10.

Yamaguchi will represent the U.S.

in both categories next month at the world championships in Paris next month. She is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. James Yamaguchi of Fremont, Calif.

In the junior girls' championships, Kyoko Ina, 16, of Englewood Cliffs, N.J., won on Feb. 12. A holder of U.S. and Japanese citizenship, she was also Japan's junior champion in 1987. She is the daughter of a Japanese costume jewelry manufacturer in the import-export business in New York. She has lived in the United States since she was 6-months-old.

Mineta Criticizes Supreme Court Decision

WASHINGTON — Rep. Norman Y. Mineta, (D-Calif.) criticized the Supreme Court's recent decision to strike down Richmond, Virginia's affirmative action program of minority "set-asides" for that city's construction contracting.

"The decision will severely restrict the ability of cities to remedy age-old patterns of racial discrimination, which are still endemic in some parts of our society," Mineta said.

Justice Sandra Day O'Connor's majority opinion in City of Richmond v. J.A. Croson Co. stated that Richmond's program of granting 30% of its construction contracts to minority-owned firms in order to remedy past societal discrimination was unconstitutional because it was unsupported by specific examples of bias.

"Richmond city leaders testified that a pattern of discrimination exists. The Supreme Court ignored them and said that past patterns of discrimination cannot be considered as reason for the set-asides, only specific instances of bias," Mineta explained.

"Cities have limited resources. I know. I was mayor of San Jose. To force cities to meticulously document a widely acknowledged situation is wasteful and unnecessary. It would also create an environment of confrontation and litigation—rather than cooperation," Mineta stressed.

"The court is turning a blind eye to traditional patterns of racial discrimination. Justice O'Connor's reasons for the scarcity of minority firms in contracting—lack of working capital, inability to meet bonding requirements, unfamiliarity with bidding procedures, and inadequate track records—are themselves caused by systemic racial discrimination," Mineta added.

"Unfortunately, we do not yet live in a colorblind society. We must deal with racism if we are to overcome it. We cannot bury our heads in the sand and pretend it does not exist. Progressive thinking should be encouraged, not discouraged. The high court's decision hurts communities that have the vision and will to deal with this problem," Mineta concluded.

Enlightened Self-Interest

ELSEWHERE ON this page, Bill Hosokawa's column laments the persistence with which inaccuracies about the Japanese American experience continue to surface in the public prints. It is a problem with no easy solution in sight.

The frustrating part of the persisting libel is that the truth is available in books and other documents. Fortunately, most of the published material about Japanese Americans is accurate. Yet, misconceptions about Japanese Americans are so firmly imbedded that out of ignorance and carelessness, rather than malice, canards about our record in World War II are repeated from time to time.

What can we do about eliminating these damaging falsehoods and laying them to rest for all time? The only way to combat them is the long, tedious process of responding with the truth every time an error raises its ugly head. Writers and editors do not enjoy being corrected, but we have a responsibility to bring inaccuracies to their attention. This should be done, not in anger, but in the name of truth, sensitivity and fair play. If we don't look after our own interests, who will?

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Spirit of Reconciliation

Chester Tanaka's letter "Time for Reconciliation" (P.C., Jan. 20, 1989), was the most poignant message that we can all take to heart and spread to others in the true spirit of reconciliation.

Spirit of Reconciliation II

Chester Tanaka (Jan. 20, 1989 P.C. "Letters to the Editor") presents an in depth understanding which is necessary for the eventual healing within the Japanese American community.

The next logical step must be taken by the representative body of the Japanese Americans.

The U.S. Congress and the president did this for the American people in the passage and the signing of the Civil Liberties Act of 1988. JAACL must do the same for the Japanese American community.

What happened and were said 47 years ago were done with the country's best interest at heart. But it was wrong. America as a country has acknowledged this. JAACL has not.

Reactions vary with time, and may be right or wrong. The principles embodied in our Constitution, however, remain unchanged with time. That is the ultimate strength of our country.

Americans can be proud of how the country faced the mistake made 47 years ago. Japanese Americans would also like to be proud of JAACL for acknowledging the truth.

Japanese Need to Wise Up

Professor Minabe's article (P.C., Jan. 27, 1989) is timely as Lord Maitreya has stated that Japan will suffer terribly from a major stock market crash. This is because the Japanese have and are taking advantage of others for personal gain. He went on to say that it would be destructive for them to forget their roots. This means they should not forget their Oriental (spiritually based) way of life.

Obviously, the Japanese have forgotten much already, thus it may require a major disaster to force them to return to their Oriental way of life. Perhaps they should consider the "one earth" concept of the Kodo drummers of Sado Island.

Redress Money Wishes

On Dec. 7, 1941 the president of the U.S. indirectly accused some 100,000 of its citizens and denizens of being accessories to a crime. Infamy, in law, is dishonor for the conviction and imprisonment of certain offenses. E.O. 9066 formally convicted people for the crime of having Japanese surnames in the name of inviolability.

The exile and confinement of the 100,000 people symbolized America's dream for return to paradise. In like reverie, Tokugawa decreed the ostracism of the burakumin in the name of ritualistic purity and Hitler ordered the ghettoization of the Jews in the name of Aryan purity. And all for the same reason: To have a group personify Death makes the Pure Land seem more plausible.

Let the Nisei take the $20 million budgeted for 1990 and forgive the rest.

Let the Nisei build a monument in honor of the burakumin, the Jews, and the Japanese Americans.

Let the Nisei build the monument to forewarn: To war is inevitably to view life as death.

Let the Nisei build the monument to cherish life.

Any Evacuation Unjustified

If German and Italian airplanes had taken off from carriers far out in the Atlantic Ocean and had bombed Charleston and Norfolk, it would still have been wrong if F.D.R. had issued Executive Order 9066 "B" and "C" (Jan. 27, 1989 P.C. "Letters to the Editor") incarcerating all East Coast persons of those ancestries because of their racial origin. Why should Col. Ike Eisenhower be kicked out of the army or families with names like Bredehoft, Custer, Gable, Pershing or Steuben or Chrysler or Wilhelm be put into camps without due process of law? The American Japanese were victimized because they were perceived as expendable and as an enemy Mongoloid race by a certain sonofabitch in the White House. He'll go down in history as The Great Discriminator as sure as anything Shakespeare ever predicted.

TARO J. KAWAKAMI
Rosemead, Calif.

Letters to the editor should be typewritten (double-spaced) or legibly hand-printed and no more than 200 words. A contact phone number and address must be included or P.C. will not print the letter. Letters may be subject to editing.

Errors of Ignorance Hurt Nonetheless

Sometimes you can't win for losing. What brings up this cynical observation has to do with Loni Ding's documentary The Color of Honor. Not the film itself, but the listing it was given in some quarters.

The Color of Honor was a moving if somewhat overly long feature on Japanese Americans who served in the U.S. armed forces in World War II. A few weeks ago it was aired nationally on public broadcasting stations. That was a great public relations coup and was a reason for rejoicing. But in Denver the Denver Post TV listings described the film this way:

"The plight faced by Japanese Americans who lived in the United States during World War II is examined in this new 90-minute documentary, tracing the moral dilemma created by the heritage that related them to two countries fighting one another. Many served in the American military, while others became spies."

Excuse me if I sound like a crotchety oldster, which I probably am, but the above reads as though it were written by some kid fresh out of journalism school with no understanding of or concern for what happened more than a couple of years ago. He, she or it simply took a press release and condensed it into a couple of inaccurate sentences and if the facts and nuances are all wrong, tough. The editor who handled the section probably didn't bother to read the item since it came in from some syndicated service, and no doubt wouldn't have been knowledgeable enough to detect the libel anyway. The facts, documented thoroughly, are that there were no Nisei spying against the United States. None. So, once again, the canard of Nisei disloyalty gets into print.

There is a more subtle error which I refer to as a nuance. The item mentions the "plight faced by Japanese Americans who lived in the United States during World War II." The implication, as I read it, is that these people were aberrations, and that they really should have been living elsewhere, presumably Japan. Am I being too sensitive? I don't think so. All this is part of a continuing and widespread misconception, that for some mysterious and racist reason Japanese Americans aren't really Americans and aren't likely ever to become Americans even unto endless generations.

If one wishes to be picky, and that is the way I feel today, there is still another point to be made. The review refers to the "moral dilemma created by the heritage that related them to two countries fighting one another." Yes, there was some of that. But the greater part of the Japanese American dilemma handled in the film was that of responding to the call to offer one's life in the service of a nation that had imprisoned them in violation of the very ideals they were being asked to defend. That they did step forward to fight, and die, for their country despite its terrible mistake is to their everlasting credit.

I would like to look to the future rather than to continue focusing on the past. But when three grievous historical errors about our experiences appear in the space of two published sentences in a widely circulated newspaper, it is difficult to do so.

Fingerprint Update

IN PRIOR COLUMNS we discussed the matter of Japan's fingerprint law which requires resident aliens to carry registration cards with their fingerprints thereon. The impact of such a law falls mostly on the Koreans who number some 700,000, of whom almost 80% are either second or third generation born in Japan. Following Japan's annexation of Korea in 1910, Koreans were regarded as Japanese nationals. However, about a week before the Peace Treaty with the allied powers formally came into force in 1952, Japan's Civil Affairs Bureau issued an announcement that all Koreans, including those residing in Japan, would lose their Japanese nationality.

Now they are required to carry the fingerprint registration cards which are subject to being renewed every five years.

MANY NIPPON-JINS, including government officials, are opposed to this law which they consider discriminatory. It was such opposition that caused the government in 1982, to extend the renewal period from three to five years. This was followed by some local governments issuing registration cards without requiring fingerprinting; prosecutors often refused to act against those who declined to be fingerprinted. So in 1985, the Minister of Justice presented a plan whereby transparent, rather than black, ink was to be used with a modified printing procedure. Officials in Osaka disregarded the plan, and one shi-cho (mayor) had the gumption to declare the plan unlawful.

But the central government does not give up easily.

IN AN EFFORT to ameliorate the situation, but at the same time preserve the fingerprint law, in 1987 the central government announced a bill to revise the Immigration Control Law so that fingerprints were required only once. Since the government already had some 600,000 such prints on file, this was more "window dressing" than substance. However, it did serve to sharply reduce the number of refuse-niks. But there's a "kicker" in there, as they say. The cards for refuse-niks have a shorter life than the five-year period.

A STRINGENT SANCTION against refuse-niks lies in the government refusing to issue a re-entry permit to those who seek to travel out of Japan, say, to visit Korea. That can be rather a harsh sanction, particularly if one were a Nisei or Sansei Korean in Japan. There's also the case of Ronald Fujiyoshi, an American missionary who had been living in Japan since 1973. Rev. Fujiyoshi declined to be fingerprinted, protesting the injustice of the law as he perceived it. He was convicted under the immigration law and fined ¥10,000. His application for extension of his visa was also denied.

WHAT ABOUT EMPLOYMENT? Well, "aliens"—and that would include Chinese and Korean resident aliens in Japan—are not permitted to teach in public elementary, middle or high schools. (This may be reminiscent of some Nisei experience in the U.S., involving, however, American citizens.) Curiously, in 1982 the government opened up teaching positions in the public universities. In terms of prefectural "state" jobs, a study in 1986 showed that of 47 prefectures, 22 employed no (resident) aliens. Of the ones that did employ aliens, Tokyo had the largest number with 35 followed by Osaka with 29.

Oh, by the way: Japan has a Japan Civil Liberties Union. Apparently, the JCLU helps to keep an eye on things and periodically pricks some consciences.
