JACL plans strategy for Pearl Harbor anniversary

SAN FRANCISCO—A JACL committee is working on a plan and statement to address the upcoming 50th anniversary of the bombing of Pearl Harbor.

The group met June 10 at national headquarters to discuss strategies to deal with the Dec. 7, 1991, event according to Bill Yoshino, JACL national director.

"We're going to set forward a plan that is going to carry a message that is going to be civil rights in focus, in particular, centering on the internment of Japanese Americans during World War II and the civil rights violations that ensued," Yoshino said. "What we're trying to do in a very proactive way is to let the media sources know that this occurred."

The plan will also equip chapters with information to react to the event on their local levels and to help them develop programs to deal with the commemoration.

Also working with the committee is Steve Okino of the Hill & Knowlton public relations firm in Honolulu, Hawaii.

The final plan will be presented to the national board at its meeting scheduled for July 13.

Serving on the committee are Yoshino; Cressey Nakagawa, president; William Kaneko, vice president, planning and development; Floyd Mori, vice president, public affairs; Ken Yokota, Central California District governor; Carol Hayashino, associate director; Joy Morimoto, Northern California-Western Nevada-Pacific District director; and Leslie Hatamiya, intern.

Comparison of Illinois government work force to private sector

Illinois law requires affirmative action goals whenever the percentage of a particular minority group in a job category is less than four-fifths of that in the private sector. Categories in which a minority group's proportion is less than four-fifths of the proportion in the private sector are in boldface. The Chicago Reporter compared the 1991 percentage of minority state employees with the percentage of minority employees in the private sector in 1980 in eight broad job categories defined by U.S. Equal Employment Opportunity Commission. The analysis includes only employees in agencies under the governor and excludes other state offices, such as the secretary of state.

Not enough Asian managers, says U.S. commissioner

CHICAGO—Asian Americans "are conspicuously underrepresented" among the ranks of managers and executives in all sectors of the U.S. economy, Dr. Joy Cherian of the U.S. Equal Employment Opportunity Commission declared before the Illinois Conference on National Origins Discrimination held June 1 at Roosevelt University.

Cherian cited a recent EEOC Survey Group data showing the tremendous drop of Asian American numbers in employment as executives and managers from the ranks of professionals—and "at our colleges and universities—the situation seems to be worse for the Asian Americans than in any other employment sector."

Of all professionals employed by more than 38,000 private employers, 4.8% are Asian Americans and only 1.8% of all officials and managers are Asian Americans, according to Cherian, who noted: "Asian Americans are the only ones that are disproportionately

Illinois failing to meet Asian hiring goals

State agency not enforcing affirmative action, says newspaper

CHICAGO—The Illinois Department of Human Rights has failed to enforce a two-and-a-half-year-old law requiring all state agencies to set affirmative action goals for Asian Americans, according to a Chicago Reporter article.

Further, the department says it may not be able to set hiring goals until July of 1993, according to Tom Corfman who researched and wrote the article.

Corfman's study of the situation revealed that the "state work force shows that in most state job categories, the number of Asian American employees falls below a state guideline used to determine the need for affirmative action."

Only 15 of 87 state agencies met their affirmative action goals in fiscal 1990, according to the department's own annual report.

Part of the problem may be the agency's confusion over its role in respect to Asian Americans.

A 1982 department rule requires that goals be set only for minority groups that account for

Bill to protect redress passes California Senate

Clears by one vote; next step is hearings before state Assembly

SACRAMENTO—Some California redress recipients breathed a little more easily when Sen. Patrick Johnston's (D-Stockton) bill that would prevent the state of California from attaching redress payments was passed June 10 by the Senate.

Senate Bill 353 was introduced in response to the Department of Health Services' Medi-Cal regulations that would allow the state to claim part of the redress payment from a Medi-Cal recipient.

In 1988, Sen. Johnston said, the legislature passed a measure that allowed Medi-Cal recipients to receive their redress payment without affecting their

Medi-Cal eligibility, but over the past year, the Department of Health Services has issued conflicting policies that implied a scenario in which the state could claim part of redress money.

"It does not make sense to on one hand have the American people provide these redress payments as an apology for past injustices, and with the other hand allow the state of California to take these payments away through the Medi-Cal program," Johnston said.

The bill needed needed a two-thirds vote because it was an urgency bill," said Priscilla Ouchida, a Johnston aide and vice president, operations, JACL. "We were kind of under the gun," Ouchida told Pacific Citizen. "We wanted to get this through quickly because we wanted to protect as many people as we can, but an urgency bill requires a two-thirds vote rather than a majority vote."

The bill will move on to the Assembly for hearings. If it is successful it could be law by the end of September, Ouchida said.

California Asians to welcome Bush

Asian Pacific communities will turn out Sunday, June 16, to honor President George Bush at Mile Square Park, Fountain Valley, Calif. The event, billed as an Asian Pacific salute to the president, was planned by a leaders from all Asian Pacific communities.

Before he speaks, Bush will tour the cultural exhibits of each of the ethnic groups.

The Orange County site was chosen because there are nearly 250,000 Asian and Pacific Americans in the area, accounting for more than 10 percent of the population.

Tickets are required. Gates open at 9:30 a.m.. Information: 714/894-2608.

Korean War vets petition for change in monument's name policy

LOS ANGELES—It's a battle in the name of names. It's an emotional issue that has split Japanese American veterans down the middle over the proposed war memorial monument that would be erected in Little Tokyo. On one side is the 100th/442nd/MIS Memorial Foundation, a group that wants the monument to reflect only those who fought in World War II while their parents and families were interned in the camps. On the other side is an ad hoc group that wants the monument to include all Japanese American soldiers who died in that and any other war or conflict.

The latter group, comprised mostly of Korean War veterans, are now petitioning for public support of their cause.

The controversy began a year ago, just after the city of Los Angeles proposed the idea of a tribute to Japanese American soldiers.

The petition states that the original intent of the monument was to recognize the heroic efforts of the Japanese Americans who fought in World War II and the Korean Conflict. It further states that the 100th/442nd/MIS Memorial Foundation has changed the concept by implementing its own selection criteria committee that will privately select the names of the dead and the living veterans of the 100th/442nd/MIS, along with civilians, for inscription on the memorial monument, while omitting those who were killed in action in World War I, more than 215 in Korea, more than 150 in Vietnam, one in Grenada, one in Desert Storm and those in World War II who were not members of the 100th Battalion, 442nd RCT or the MIS. In its petition, the Korean War vets state that they are not against or degrading the exploits of the 100th/442nd/MIS. They believe that the story of the 100th/442nd/MIS, the names of the living veterans of the three units, and the evacuation could still be presented to the public in the new Japanese American National Museum as proposed by the Nisei Veterans Coordinating Council and not on this war memorial.

A spokesman for the foundation, however, says that it is not against adding more names to the monument. "A long time ago, the developer (of the monument) proposed a compromise plan that would include the killed-in-action of the Korean War," says George Nishinaka, administrative coordinator of the 100/442 veterans association that is linked with the foundation.

"So as far as the foundation was concerned, it was fine. All we asked was that, one, they certify the names and, two, that they raise the money to have the names included—about $200 per name. We asked them to raise the money in proportion to what they were asking. There was no response, they never replied. They can petition but they never have sat down to talk."

"Replacing the killed in action of all the wars and conflicts with the names of living veterans is a shameful breach of promise by

JACL suggests redress changes to ORA office

A list of 15 recommendations concerning Office of Redress Administration procedures was recently sent to the organization by JACL-LEC. Included in the JACL recommendations was an expression of disappointment with the text and appearance of the letter of apology that accompanied the redress payments.

JACL-LEC representatives, based on widespread community input, cited the lack of a presidential seal or appropriate identification that would authenticate the letter as a significant historical document, the lack of a date which would help identify the presidential signature for future generations, and the disappointment that the letter in its ambiguity fell short of conveying a true apology.

Jerry Eomoto, JACL-LEC chair, in forwarding the recommendation, along with other procedural suggestions compiled by the board members, urged that "these recommendations be of constructive help in aspects of ORA procedures."

Bob Bratt, ORA administrator, assured the JACL-LEC that the ORA would address the recommendations and all 15 points, including the letter of apology suggestions, and would provide a written response in the weeks to come.

Among other suggestions submitted to the ORA, the JACL-LEC urged standardization and coding of the numerous form letters that go out to potential eligible individuals; that the ORA filing system be implemented to avoid the requesting of duplicate documents from individuals; that ads to locate isolated potential eligibles be used on a trial basis in the major dailies, weighing results against disadvantages; that the vernaculars be used weighing results against disadvantages; that the vernaculars be used to verify the whereabouts of, or determine the deceased status of names on the WRA lists; that the final verification letter (green) be addressed by name to the potential recipient and dated, rather than just mailed as a form letter; and that more advance noticed and other publicity be provided for the ORA workshops.

Museum to host book event for California author

GARDENA, Calif.—The Japanese American National Museum will host a book party for Karen Yamashita, author of Through the Arc of the Rain Forest, on Saturday, June 22, 1-4 p.m., at the Japanese Cultural Institute, 16215 S. Gramercy Pl.

The event also inaugurates the "Saturday Afternoon With the Museum" series, where different authors and their books will be featured at various locations. JANM plans to highlight authors from Hawaii to New York, bringing them closer to the reading public.

Yamashita's novel begins in Japan with Kazumasa Ishimaru, who decides to catch up with his cousin who has been traveling through South America, winds up in Brazil, and experiences many adventures.

It was the author's Thomas J. Watson Fellowship to research history and anthropology of Japanese immigration to Brazil that provided background of her book.

The Gardena native and resident is also the initial winner of the James Clavell short story contest on American Japanese in 1979.

Kay Tateishi and I were discussing matters over coffee recently in a busy hotel coffee shop when Dick Yamashita came by to say howdy.

"Have you heard?" he asked after pleasantries. "Bob Matsui dropped out of the race for the U.S. Senate."

"No," I said in some surprise. "What happened? I thought he had a pretty good chance to win the election against a group of lackluster opponents. Matsui is an exceptional guy."

"Something about his father being critically ill," Yamashita said.

There's nothing exceptional about the way I heard the news about Matsui's decision except that I happened to be in the Garden Lounge of the New Otani Hotel in the swank Akasaka area of Tokyo. The Garden Lounge, overlooking a handsome garden populated by tourists and colorful golden carp, is a delightful place in an elegant hostelry not to be confused in any way with a place with a similar name not far from City Hall in Los Angeles.

Matsui's decision to focus on retaining his House seat, where he has had a virtual lock for these many years, is regrettable in view of the opportunities present in the U.S. Senate, but understandable under the circumstances.

But that isn't the point of this column, which has to do with the far-flung venues which have attracted Japanese Americans. Tateishi and I were talking about Nisei who have done interesting and important work in Japan who might be included in a book if and when one is written about their accomplishments. We were hard put to trim the number of nominees to 10.

Certainly Yamashita himself should be ranked among the nominees. He's the founder of publications about the computer chip industry. He has carved out a niche in a fast-moving business and is widely and carefully followed by traders, manufacturers, consumers and sellers on both sides of the Pacific. And Tateishi, a retired newspaperman, would deny he deserved consideration for inclusion in the book, but he has been a very important cog in the flow of news between the two countries.

Nisei in Japan have distinguished themselves in a variety of fields ranging from baseball and music to politics. In the first category were such redoubtable as Kaiser Tanaka, Jim Horio, Bozo Wakabayashi, Fibber Hirayama and the redoubtable Wally Yonamine. Have I left out someone? In popular music, Sash Moriyama and Tib Kamayatsu. In politics, Frank Matsumoto who was considered a possible candidate for prime minister when death ended his career.

In business, industry and the media the Nisei have left their mark in postwar Japan. The problem in chronicling their story is less ferreting out the details than in culling the information into manageable book-length proportions.

Nor has the full story been told about how heavily dependent the MacArthur occupation was on Nisei, both those who came in with the victorious troops and those who had been forced to spend the war years in Japan.

Many Issei saw the Nisei as a bridge between the United States and Japan. For most it was an unrealistic dream, but there were many whose stories are worthy of preserving. ☐

'Mottai Nai' is Alive and Well

The Japanese phrase mottai nai expresses the sentiment that waste is sinful. It is the verbal equivalent of the facial contortion described as wincing, at the sight and thought, of a wasteful act or a wasted thing. Obviously the sentiment developed over the centuries when scarcity was the normal state of existence.

How does such a sentiment fare in today's Japan? Japan is viewed by much of the world as filthy rich and awash in goods, whose nationals abroad are on a frenzied binge, buying up Paris handbags, Italian shoes, and American golf courses and baseball teams. How can they still maintain the sentiment of mottai nai?

Surprisingly, it is still alive and well, according to a recent survey by the Dai Tokyo Fire and Maritime Insurance Co. To the query:

"What do you consider waste and wasteful? What acts and things do you consider mottai nai?"

From throughout the country, 3,948 men and 3,712 women answered. The figures are in percentages of the respondents.

Overpackaging .....19.0%

Extravagant containers for merchandise .....10.9
Handbills, fliers and direct mail .....7.9
Throwing away uneaten, unsold foods .....9.6
Discarding still usable goods .....6.9
Throwing away empty bottles and cans .....4.6
Split chopsticks .....3.8
Though unranked, the following acts and things came under disapproval.

Copy papers; overstuffed public offices and their overheads; wedding banquets; exchange of gifts at Chugen (July 15 by the lunar calendar) and at year-end; returns for koden (koden is the funeral guests' monetary gifts to the bereaved); New Year cards; midsummer inquiries after the health of correspondents; beer showers to celebrate victory; Tokyo's new Metropolitan Administration Building, widely criticized for its excesses—splendor; the nearly empty Green Cars (on Japanese railroads second-class carriages are painted green, very few run first-class cars); pins on new shirts; scented and pictured toilet papers; caddies for golfers; obatarian's makeup (please read footnote).

So you see a good number of today's Japanese who feel mottai nai about things and practices which we feel are wasteful.

Some of us, surviving Issei (such as Yours Truly) and older Nisei, may even exclaim 'How mottai nai!' at some of them.

Will the sentiment put the brake on some of the excesses of their profligate compatriots? I doubt it. The people who feel mottai nai at waste are entirely different classes of people from those who indulge in waste.

So mottai nai is alive and well—as a sentiment, of the classes of people who cannot afford waste. The conspicuous consumption of the Japanese will go on till some economic setback will teach them the old fashioned humility.

Note: I cannot resist the temptation to say a few words on obatarian. When I first saw the word, I thought it was some kind of Armenian term. I wrote a friend in Fresno and asked him to see if the telephone directory listed such a name. The reply was negative. The term designates the Japanese (those younger by, say, 10-20 years) version of the English female being called hag or harridan. She is gross, pushy, quarrelsome; in short, disagreeable all around. No amount of makeup can possibly make her attractive.

The word has no etymology. It was the grand prize winning neologism of 1989, and is widely used. ☐ underrepresented in the management positions when compared with participation rates of the same groups in professional jobs." For all other minority groups, the numbers are "roughly equal," he said.

Cherian noted, "Sadly, many Americans, perhaps blinded by the 'model minority' myth associated with Asian Americans today, are unaware or unwilling to acknowledge the historical discrimination and disadvantages faced by Asian Americans."

To cite some of the unique "glass-ceiling" issues faced by Asian Americans, Cherian noted recent cases he has encountered in his law enforcement capacity at EEOC of:

- How an Asian American with double master's degrees was passed over for permanent supervisory positions in favor of high school-educated European Americans.

- How an Asian American in spite of enviable academic qualifications and careers inside and outside of government was repeatedly passed over for promotion in favor of white males on the pretext of communication problems.

GOALS

and American Indians were estimated to be 2.3 percent of the population, according to the 1989 U.S. Census Bureau study.

And by 1990, the census report showed that the Asian American population had reached 2.5 percent, according to the Chicago Reporter.

With these new statistics, the state General Assembly passed the amendment requiring affirmative actions plans for Native Americans and Asian Americans, eliminating the department's 2 percent rule.

But departmental officials seemed unclear about their new mandate.

Rose Mary Bombella, state human rights director, said she wasn't sure whether she had the authority to require affirmative action for Asian and Native Americans.

She added that Asian Americans may have to petition to be included in affirmative action, Corfman reported.

Bombella said that affirmative action goals for Asian Americans can't be implemented now—in spite of the amendment's directive—because the U.S. Census bureau won't be able to release necessary occupation information data until September, 1992. She projected that the agency would then need until July, 1993, to set the goals.

Corfman, however, pointed out that Chicago has already set affirmative action goals for Asian Americans using the 1980 census, and so have many private sector employers.

living veterans to their deceased comrades," said Robert Wada of Buena Park, Calif., a spokesman for the ad-hoc group and who is, commander of the Kazuo Masuda Memorial VFW Post. "If the concept is going to be changed from the original request for proposal issued by the city of Los Angeles, then the change should reflect the honoring of the Japanese American KIAs in all of this country's wars and conflicts instead of placing the names of living veterans and civilians on a war memorial."

The committee, hoping for thousands of signatures, will submit the petition to L.A. Mayor Tom Bradley in hopes of halting the current name policy of the monument.

The first call for submitting the petition is July 5, 1991, in honor of Rodney Hamaguchi, who was the first Japanese American KIA in Korea on July 5, 1950.

and cost overruns which had occurred not under the Asian American but under white males who were promoted ahead of him

- How an Asian American aerospace engineer in a defense agency could not be hired as an engineer in another defense agency out of concern he might not get timely security clearance because he was born in a country under Communist control.

Of importance to Asian Americans, many of whom are recent immigrants, Cherian referred to a recent EEOC decision ruling. In the case, an aerospace industry employer had unlawfully discriminated against job applicants who were believed not to be U.S. citizens, because the employer failed to establish the need for citizenship. Evidence showed that not all defense jobs required security clearance that some non-citizen might not be able to obtain.

The EEOC also found it was inappropriate for the employer to secretly use the citizenship requirement because it tended to exclude recent immigrants if they showed foreign work experience, foreign education, and language skills when some, in fact, are U.S. citizens.

Cherian, one of five EEOC commissioners, concluded, "What it ultimately boils down to is that none of us can look to someone else to fight against discrimination or to break the glass-ceiling for us. We will all have to work together, and work hard to do it...I am there to strike forcibly at the glass-ceiling..."

Community Coalition to Commemorate the 50th Year Remembrance: Japanese American Internment

The Year 1992 will mark the 50th anniversary of Executive Order 9066, which ordered the forced Evacuation and Internment of Japanese Americans in American concentration camps during World War II. Looking ahead in anticipation of this historic event, a year-long series of events are being planned to have a deep and lasting impact on the general public in Southern California, and to insure that such a national tragedy never happens again.

Since February 1991, the Community Coalition has been meeting to formulate plans for community-wide events commemorating the unjustified internment of Japanese Americans in 1942. The necessity of a full-time consultant at an early stage to manage and coordinate the effort has been recognized.

A cover letter and resume should be mailed to the Japanese American Citizen's League, Pacific Southwest Regional Office, 244 So. San Pedro St., Ste. 507, Los Angeles, CA 90012, postmarked no later than June 21, 1991.

Honors

The Asian Pacific Alumni Association of Loyola Marymount University awarded plaques at its annual recognition luncheon in April to Michael Yamada (left), the senior service award, and John D. Hokoyama, '75, distinguished alumnus award for outstanding achievement.

Yoshiko Matsuda, 90, who started and led the Odamaki Tanka Kai in Hawaii for 35 years, will receive the 1990 Hawaii Award for Literature in the office of Governor John Waihee. A master poet in the tanka tradition, the oldest short poem form in Japan consisting of 31 syllables in five lines (5-7-5-7-7), she was married to the Rev. Ryugen Matsuda, Hongwanji Buddhist priest, who held posts at various locations while she was able to start tanka clubs at the same time.

Sharon Kadoyama, 24, reigned as Honolulu's 39th Cherry Blossom Festival queen the last week of March. A zoology graduate from the University of Hawaii and the daughter of George and Sarah Kadoyama, she is a brown belt in karate and breeds and shows American Staffordshire terriers. . . Dina M. Harada, 23, was crowned the 1991 San Francisco Cherry Blossom queen April 13 at the Miyako Hotel Imperial ballroom. A psychology graduate from UC Berkeley, she is the daughter of Peter M. and Christine Harada of San Francisco.

"Dreamweaver," a low-budget fantasy epic story of Chinese American immigrants by Gary Iwamoto, opened April 14 at Seattle's Theater Off Jackson. Seattle Post-Intelligencer theater critic Joe Adcock rated it "meager" as theater, but "useful for both classes and family" as education. Based on an old folk Chinese tale, scenes range from Mongol hordes terrorizing Chinese villagers to drug-crazed burglars ripping off Chinese Americans in Seattle as two young sisters look for missing pieces of tapestry. Iwamoto also wrote "Miss Minidoka 1943" and "Who Killed the Dragon Lady." His plays were all premiered by the Northwest Asian American Theater Co.

The April 4 celebration of International Women's Day in Seattle featured the address of Elaine Ikoma Ko, 38, new director of the Office for Women's Rights, the only Asian woman department head in Seattle's city government. In making the appointment, Mayor Norm Rice cited her sensitivity to the needs of gays and lesbians and enhancing child-care services to families. Her office goal is to gain expertise with women and sexual minorities, define women issues and determine the extent which the office can contribute. A communications major at the University of Washington, she previously worked with the International District Improvement Association and with various social service agencies. She is married to John Foz and they have two children, aged 8 and 2.

In Auburn, Wash., Koji Norikane, a retired truck farmer in his 70s, has put together a 220 photo pictorial history of Japanese immigrants at the White River Valley Historical Society Museum, 918 H St. SE. There are pictures of families and individuals, class reunions, Buddhist Church activities, and ordeal of the WWII evacuation and internment camps.

PETITION

WHEREAS, in the First Street North 1987 Request for Proposal, the City of Los Angeles has agreed to the recommendation of the Little Tokyo community that a memorial be created within the First Street North Plaza Project, which will recognize the heroic efforts of the Japanese Americans who fought in World War II and the Korean Conflict. The request for proposal also stated that the public facilities would include a Japanese-American World War II veterans memorial without specific qualifications and,

WHEREAS, a committee known as the 100th/442nd/MIS World War II Memorial Foundation has ignored all Japanese-American veterans other than those who served in the 100th/442nd/MIS and have ignored the wishes and feelings of living veterans and has created ill feelings and damaged the relationship of fellow veterans and the community at large and,

WHEREAS, contrary to the City of Los Angeles Request for Proposal, the 100th/442nd/MIS World War II Memorial Foundation has amended the concept requested by the City of Los Angeles in omitting the NON-100th/442nd/MIS veterans of World War II, as well as the Japanese-American veterans of the Korean Conflict. Furthermore, their name Selection Criteria Committee will privately select and honor only their designated living and deceased individuals, including living civilians, who they feel are worthy to be placed on the memorial monument and,

WHEREAS, we survivors of wars and conflicts, recognize that we are living today through the sacrifices of our fallen comrades and that we wish to honor their sacrifice on the proposed memorial monument. Veterans of either the 100th Battalion, 442nd Regimental Combat Team or the Military Intelligence Service (MIS) signatory to this petition strongly object to the placing of their names as living veterans on the proposed memorial monument and

WHEREAS, the 100th/442nd/MIS World War II Memorial Foundation is replacing the honoring of Japanese Americans killed in action in World War I and World War II, over 215 who died in Korea, over 150 in Vietnam, one in Grenada and one in the Persian Gulf War known as Desert Storm,

Therefore, we, the undersigned veterans and/or concerned citizens by placing our signatures on this petition, do hereby affirm that we are in complete disagreement with the proposals and concepts of the 100th/442nd/MIS World War II Memorial Foundation and will support the Nisei Veterans Coordinating Council of Southern California to prevent the creation of a monument that will publicize, honor and recognize living veterans and completely ignore and omit the names of Japanese Americans killed in action during all other wars and conflicts.

Panama Canal Cruise

Dec 8 - 20

One of the most popular and most enticing cruise voyages today! This is an opportunity to make the Panama Canal Passage aboard Crystal Cruise Lines' exquisite Crystal Harmony, their five star flag ship.

You will be fully escorted from Los Angeles and throughout your 12-Day sailing, which will leave Los Angeles on December 8th. In addition to the Panama Canal, you will make ports of call in Acapulco, Curacao and St. Thomas. Terminate at San Juan where you will be taken to the airport for your return flight, included in the cruise price.

We have been extremely fortunate to have obtained a block of cabins in G through C categories. All are Deluxe Staterooms.
